The Safety Mark

The man who aims to appear well-dressed exercises great care in the selection of his suits. He has learned that it pays to look into their pedigree. That subtle, almost intangible sympathy between man and dress is understood.

The inevitable choice of the man who seeks appropriate things in dress is studied by the buyer who selects the fabrics, and by the designers who create the distinctive charm of Semi-ready Tailoring.

System and organization make it possible to sell fine clothes at $18 and $20—and on to $30 values—at $5 to $10 a suit less than you pay for like quality.

ENGAGEMENT RACK.

How This Useful and Popular Present May Be Made.

An engagement rack has seven white rather heavy cards, on each of which is printed the name of one of the days of the week. On the ends of these cards a narrow white ribbon is pasted; then the ribbon is pasted to a long strip of white cardboard, to make little pockets into which to drop notes, memoranda, etc. These cards are two inches apart.

A sofa pillow in the shape of a great red tomato is the newest thing. It is about nine inches high finished and about a yard around. Three-quarters of a yard of red velvet—in a good bright red—will be enough, as the shaped pieces cut to fairly good advantage.

ENGAGEMENT RACK.

Cut six or eight pieces twelve inches high in wide oval shapes, pointed at both ends — exactly the way you would cut sections to cover a child's ball. By cutting one section close to the selvage at one edge of the velvet and the other at the other selvage you can get six out nearly six inches across in the broadest parts—right in the center. If you use eight, of course make them narrower.

Sew them up on the wrong side, leaving one seam partly open to insert the pillow. Force in as large a pillow as you can—an eighteen inch pillow is large enough—sew it up, and you have a round red velvet ball.

Now take the red twine that matches the velvet and knot it at one end. Then, with an upholsterer's needle, draw it clear through the center, bringing the thread around directly over one of the seams, and pull the twine through the center again, drawing it taut, so that it presses the velvet in at the seam. Do this at every seam and then knot the cord, finishing it off as neatly as possible, and you've a great, fat, red tomato, which will be most effective flung in among a pile of pillows, and it has the advantage of being a fit present for either a man or a girl. One clever girl named it the Ponderosa pillow in honor of a real tomato of huge size.

Dainty Presents.

For the woman who can draw or paint, a telephone pad is simple to make. A piece of strong cardboard, about 4 by 9 inches, in delicate gray or pastel green, is especially attractive as a background. This may be decorated in stencil designs or painted with tiny heads of pretty girls or anything one fancies, the tints being always kept low and refined in tone. Of if one is without knack with the pencil and paint brush, a piece of wall paper with a small floral design may be procured, and the flowers carefully cut out and pasted on the cardboard foundation. A small pad of white paper is then neatly pasted on, a ribbon hanger attached to the top, a pencil at the end of a short ribbon fastened on where the fastening will not be visible, and the telephone pad is finished.

FOR THE LIVING ROOM.

Green Denim Makes a Fine Wall Covering.

In the living room or library, where pictures are to be hung, a plain quiet covering is best. A russet brown or a green denim makes a good background.

The frieze may be bright and figured or of a plain and contrasting color. Chintz or cretonne will not be so good for this purpose, as some material with a more conventional design is needed, such as Indian prints.

If one prefers the frieze may be made of denim or grass cloth, on which a striking design may be stenciled.

The stenciling, if brown is used for the wall coverings, should be done in dyes by using a seal brown and black dye mixed with the water. The stain should be tried first on wood to be sure the desired shade has been obtained.

If the woodwork in the room is not of the weathered or burnt oak color it will be a simple matter to paint or stain it to match the wood on the walls.

Instead of using the wooden strips to cover the joints of the denim, wide leather gimp put on with large brass headed tacks is very effective.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Dishes which have become brown and burnt from baking in the oven may be easily cleaned after they have stood awhile in borax water.

Cover your ironing board with a thick layer of newspaper before putting on the sheet. They make as fine a pad as a woolen blanket and are always at hand.

A carpet that is badly faded and hardly fit for use may be utilized in the following manner: Remove all the dust and tack it on the floor wrong side up and paint it. The first coat of paint should be quite thick, and it is better to use the yellow ocher for the first coating. The next two coats may be of any shade desired. Let the first coat dry thoroughly before applying the second. A carpet treated in this manner will outwear linoleum.

Cannas in Window Gardens.

The development of the canna is something remarkable. Already they are as varied as orchids, as brilliant as calceolarias and as delicately colored as the gladiolus.

The foliage shades from rich green to claret color or a veining of rich purple madder. Each spike of bloom has many flowers, so their beauty is not transient. Originally of a simple red, they have been so changed by culture as to assume many hues—pink, rose, scarlet, lemon yellow and variegated petals which suggest gay orchids in variety.

The roots of these have to be set out each year, but may be saved with ordinary care in the house.

Small canna plants make a good green for an inside window box in winter, especially in a hall room or office where a little screen from passersby is desirable, since the foliage is erect and tall. In a low room with little sun they would darken the place too much, for in a living room every bit of the sun is needed for sewing and reading during the wintry days.

FOR SNAP SHOTS

Why not put all those snap shots you took this summer into a little book and use it as a Christmas gift for those of your friends who will be interested. We have a fine stock of mounting papers in brown, grey and white, that are the proper ones to use. The cover can be made of leather to match, or of a pretty embossed card. Call at the Review office and see the shades of paper used.

PRESENTS OF PAPER.

May Be Made at Home in a Few Hours.

It is not too late to make attractive Christmas presents at home, even if the selection has been delayed until the last few days, for the woman who is ingenious can fashion decidedly effective gifts out of cardboard and bright colored paper, and by choosing practical and artistic models can turn out just as acceptable articles as those made by experts.

ENVELOPE HOLDER.

In making paper gifts the amateur must remember that, though the actual work is easy, consisting only of cutting and pasting, this must be carefully done or the materials will be spoiled and the labor wasted. For this reason the simplest kind of models should be decided upon as gifts to be made in a hurry, for the easier they are to fashion the less difficult the task will be.

If an envelope holder should be chosen as a gift, the work on it would require but a short space of time and really no skill, for it can be made of three or four pieces of cardboard cut square, round or with the upper edge in scallops. One of these pieces—the one that is to form the back—should be at least one-third wider than the other two, while the second piece need not be more than two inches deeper than the last or third one. The width of all three must of course be the same.

When cut to please the fancy, paste on decorative crape paper in a light shade of tan, blue or pink on which there are bright colored flowers, such as red roses and yellow chrysanthemums, tied prettily with long ribbon.

BLOTTER FOR TABLE.

When the paste is thoroughly dry, an edging of heavy paper or tape to finish the pieces at the top should be added. At the bottom or about an inch from the edge of each two holes should be made, one on either side, for through these openings ribbons that tie the pieces together are run. The ribbons are made into pretty knots and help decorate the holder. Through two holes at the top of the large piece of cardboard a ribbon is fastened with bowknots, so that the holder may be attached to the wall or a desk—wherever it will hang conveniently.

Quite as serviceable as the holder and equally appropriate for man and woman is a blotter for a desk. It is made of a square piece of cardboard, over which a light blue or delicate pink blotting pad is placed. This is held down by four decorative corners made of cardboard covered with crape paper in pretty floral designs. These corners are made like right angled triangles to fit the square edges of the bottom and are attached to the latter by fine wires.

A Knitting Needle Case.

A most suitable present for a lover of knitting is a case in which the different sizes of needles may be kept and preserved from rust when not in use.

The outer cover, composed of any pretty material, may be as elaborately worked as you like. It must be cut a little longer than the length of the longest needle it is to hold, and about three times as wide as it is long. In making the case you will be guided by your own or the recipient's usual requirements in the way of knitting needles, as one or two sizes may be preferred to the entire "set."

The lining should be of wash leather. Choose a piece with a not too aggressive yellow tint and not "thin" in places. Cut it to the size of the case and allow half an inch over to be pinked out and show over the edges.

Before fixing in, place a moderately wide piece of leather down the center piece and make as many runnings across it as will correspond with the number of knitting needles the case is destined to hold. If desired, the leather lining need only meet the edges of the case, which may be bound with ribbon. The case can be rolled up when not in use and tied with a ribbon from the outside. These cases can be adapted for various uses by regulating the size of the center runnings, into which can be slipped embroidery silks as well as knitting needles, and such a case lined with oil silk would make an admirable brush holder for a student in water color painting.

Intemperance and Its Train of Evil

Moral Fibre of Our Manhood Must be Preserved

To the Editor of the Review:

Dear Sir,—Believing the press to be the mightiest of all mighty on which the arm of progress leans, this open letter is addressed to you, in the confidence that yourself, sir, together with all other citizens, whose civic ideals are broader than merely economic prosperity—"who count their brother's welfare as sacred as their own," must have come fact to face with the problem of intemperance and its train of evils in our city.

Apparently drunkenness is on the increase. Probably we are no worse in this respect than other cities, possibly better, but, Mr. Editor, is there not room for improved conditions?

There is so much to gratify one's natural pride in our city — the rapid growth of our industries, our public buildings, educational and philanthropic, our churches, and yet, are not these "such boastings as the Gentiles use," while we forget that the strength and stability of our city depends on the moral fibre of our manhood. The city's most valuable asset is the boys.

The trend of life to-day is to the city. The city is full of traps, and snares and stumbling blocks for the boys. What are the Christian men doing to clear the path that the boys may find it easier to live a clean, noble, manly life?

Doubtless you are aware, sir, of the work that has been carried on in Toronto since the year 1889, by the Canadian Temperance League. It is not a secret society, but an association that believes in the educative power of gospel temperance work. With this aim in view it has secured the best available platform talent on the continent for the Sunday afternoon meetings. Each year the League fits books with a clear balance sheet.

Another feature of the work has been the introduction of coffee houses, as an offset to the bar, in districts most frequented by working men. I am informed that these have been a success almost from the start.

Our city is not nearly so large as Toronto, but is there not a call to the Christian men to inaugurate some movement whereby the boys and young men may learn the evils of the drink habit, from moral, economic and scientific view points? All our cherished heritage of liberty and security has come to us as the result of self-sacrifice and heroism, that words cannot adequately express. What are we to bequeath to the succeeding generation? God of our fathers known of old.

"Be with us yet,
Lest we forgets lest we forget."

I remain, sir,
Yours,
M. L.

News in Brief From Havelock Village

Havelock, Nov. 20—If we rely on Dame Rumor we can tell our friends that Havelock will have another drug store in the near future.

Another milk route has been established in Havelock by Messrs. Greenly and Russel, who deliver the precious fluid in the most approved sanitary bottles at 6 cts. a quart.

Mr. R. Graham, of the local branch of the Sovereign Bank, has been transferred to Durham. Mr. Allen, of Durham, has taken Mr. Graham's place.

Mrs. (Dr.) Jeffs, of Eglington, formerly of town, spent a few days in town last week en route to Montreal to attend a meeting in that city of the King's Daughters.

Miss Annie Bryans spent Thursday in Norwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kelsey are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S Cole.

Mrs. Stewart has returned from visiting friends in Toronto.

Misses G. Falkner, E. O'Brien, R. McIlvena, and Messrs. W. Falkner, T. Falkner, J. Keex and W. Bryans attended the High School "At Home" in Norwood on Friday last.

Hockey Bee Is Buzzing At Havelock

Railroad Town is Anxious for a Rink—It's Up to the Hockey Club

Havelock, Nov. 20.—What does Havelock think about a skating rink this season, or more strictly speaking, what does the Hockey club think about it, for it is up to them to settle the matter, which should be done at once. Mr. Jos. Frost, proprietor of last winter's rink, has stated that he would erect a first class open air rink on a vacant lot on South Ontario steet, opposite the ice house for the coming season, provided that the Hockey club organize at once and guarantee to put a team on for the season.

It was under guarantee of this that Mr. Frost erected rink last year but the management of the club being a one man affair was not efficiently carried out and the guarantee not kept in certain particulars.

Havelock has some good stick handlers and if the club was organized under a good managing committee, the team that they would be able to put up would make the surrounding burgs look wise when they lined up against them, if enough interest was taken in the matter by the local sports, it would be easy to organize and support a team that could hold its own with any in the Peterborough City League. Last year the club seemed to be managed by one man and every game was his management too, for he would make no arrangement for players until the day the game was to come off and then it would be necessary to send the team to the ice supported by inexperienced public school players, who could not be expected to cope with heavy teams from other towns, and thus the name of the Havelock Hockey team, one which can hold its own with any in this part of the country was disgraced. There is no need for this with players like Ferguson, Stubbs, Neal, Robinson, Morris, Bennett and others too numerous to mention, on the line up.

There is still another point for the club to look at, for a rink is necessary in a town like Havelock, where there are very few places of amusement for the young to enjoy themselves. Now, it is up to the Hockey club to say whether or not Havelock will have a rink this winter and we hope that they will decide to take Mr. Frost's offer.

CURIOUS X-RAY RESULTS

One of the most curious results of the use of the X-rays is a form of burn over the place which is subjected to the rays.

Mr. C. R. Wilson, of Toronto Junction, says: "Some time ago I had occasion to use the X-rays on my hand. The rays burned the back of it and left the skin in a peculiar condition. During the winter one of the knuckles so affected, cracked, and it would not heal. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and to my great pleasure this balm healed the crack very quickly. I praise this skin-healer very highly, and have no objection to your publishing the result of my trial of it. It is splendid healer."

Zam-Buk cures blood poison, cuts, bruises, old wounds, running sores, ulcers, boils, piles, eruptions, scalp sores, eczema, itch, chapped hands, barber's rash, burns, scalds, rheumatism, neuralgia, etc. Sold by all druggists and stores at 50c a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 3 boxes for $1.25. A free sample box will be sent on application. Enclose 1c stamp for postage.

WEDDING BELLS

McMANUS—SULLIVAN

In St. Joseph's church, Douro, on Tuesday, Mr. Wm. John McManus, of Douro, was married to Miss Mary Sullivan, daughter of Mr. Michael Sullivan, of the same township. Rev. Father Kielty performed the ceremony. The bride was gowned in a pretty navy blue costume and wore a white hat.

After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the home of the former, where a wedding dinner was served. There was a splendid assortment of beautiful presents, indicating the popularity of the happy couple. Mr. and Mrs. McManus will reside in Douro.

The government has addressed a vigorous protest to the Grand Trunk Pacific, in regard to the delay of construction in the west.

Norwood Regrets Departure Of High School Principal

Mr. J. Davidson, M.A., L.L.B., Honored at Annual "At Home" of High School—Presented With Set of Books.

Norwood, Nov. 19.—The annual High School "At Home" was held in the town hall on the evening of Nov. 15th, and will remain a memorable event in the minds of the large number who had the good fortune to be present. A large part of the proceedings were eulogistic to the retiring principal of the High School, Mr. J. Davidson, M.A., LL.B., who has occupied that position in a creditable manner for a quarter of a century, which in itself speaks volumes for Mr. Davidson's ability as a trainer of the young mind.

Messrs. Dr. Ford and J. L. Squire, who both have spent long terms on the Board of Education, the latter being the chairman at the present time, spoke in the most flattering terms of Mr. Davidson's ability and faithfulness in the performance of his duties, and expressed regret at his retirement, and the loss the school, as well as the community, will sustain. The other speakers of the evening were Rev. D. D. McDonald, of Keene; Rev. D. A. Thompson, of Hastings; Revs. W. H. Adams, G. A. MacLennan, E. W. Pickford and James Deason, of this place, who also added their tributes to Mr. Davidson's ability as a High School Principal. The pupils of the school felt they could not let the opportunity pass without giving some tangible evidence of their appreciation of their esteemed principal's efforts, and unfailing interests on their behalf in the past, and presented him with a valuable set of books, a duplicate of a set which he lost when his house was burned some few years ago. Needless to say Mr. Davidson was more than pleased when the expressions of esteem conveyed to him by the several speakers and by the presentation, and in his reply expressed his gratification with the marks of esteem conferred upon him by the pupils of the school and the speakers of the evening.

Mr. J. Weir, of Havelock, has purchased the livery stable from Mr. Harold Howson and will for the present conduct the business both in Havelock and in Norwood. Mr. Jimmie Morrow will be manager of the stable in Norwood.

The Martin party, who has been in the north country in quest of the antlered monarche of the glen for the past two weeks, returned last Saturday and report very poor success, only getting one deer, Mr. Ed. Martin being the lucky marksman, and it was procurred the last day of the hunt.

Mr. S. Hendren, who has been with the Peace party, returned last Saturday with one deer.

Representatives of the Campbellford Evangelistic Club took part in the services held in the Methodist Church on Sunday.

Mr. A. S. Harrison has sold his confectionery and grocery business to Mr. Leveseute of Kingston, who has rented the house on Queen street owned by Mr. W. H. Stevenson.

Mr. Will Foster spent Sunday at the home of his father, Mr. D. Foster, of this place.

Several of last years Modelites attended the High School "At Home" last Friday evening.

Mr. A. Finlay has returned after a few days trip up west.

Mr. Earl Kidd spent Sunday at his home in Warkworth.

Miss Attie Fowlds, of Hastings, was the guest of Miss Lella Buck on Sunday.

Miss Eva O'Brien and Miss Robinson, of Havelock, spent Sunday in Norwood, the guest of the Misses Johnston, Spring Street.

Mr. C. B. Flurry is in town for a few days.

While boxing one day last week at school Mr. Harold Keefer had the misfortune to fall and fracture one of his legs. He will be laid up for a few days.

Mr. M. E. Knox, of Picton, is in town on business.

Budget of News From Lakefield

Death of Mrs. Bygott—Literary Institute Formed—Boats Docked for Winter

Lakefield, Nov. 20.—Rev. W. J. Creighton, who has been visiting friends in Toronto, and Lambton Mills, returned home on Saturday last.

The Grove School Football team journeyed to Peterborough on Saturday last to play a match with the Crescents. The match was a capital one, the Grove proving victorious in a close game. The score was 7—9.

OPEN MEETING.

An open meeting under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's church will be held on Friday, Nov. 22nd, at 7.30 p.m., in the church. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. The meeting will be addressed by Miss Strickland, a missionary on furlough, from Tarn-Tarun, in the Punjab, and also by Miss Jones, the recording secretary of the W.A. for the diocese of Toronto.

PASSED AWAY.

The many friends of the family were shocked to hear of the death on Wednesday last of Mrs. Bygott, mother of Mr. J. W. Bygott. Mrs. Bygott had never recovered from the fall she had sustained last winter, and her taking was not altogether unexpected by her family. The remains were interred at Stirling on Friday last.

SUCCESSFUL SALE.

The sale of Mr. LeFevre's agricultural implements took place on Thursday last, Mr. Singleton, of Peterborough, being the auctioneer. Good prices were realized. Mr. LeFevre left on Tuesday of this week for a short stay with Mr. and Mrs. Evans Atwood, in Peterborough. His many friends will hope for his early return to Lakefield.

Mr. R. C. Strickland, who has been staying with friends at Burleigh, returned to the village on Friday last.

LITERARY INSTITUTE.

The Literary Institute of the Methodist church has been organized, and is in good working order. The following officers were elected:—

President—Fred Brown.
1st Vice-Pres—Bruce Edwards.
2nd Vice-Pres—Gordon Kline.

HUNTERS RETRN.

The first of the huntsmen have returned from their camping grounds, and report fair luck for the season. The Baisdon party, who were camped at Turtle Lake, bagged seven deer, and the Webster party captured four.

OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. Wigg, who has been paying a visit to her son, Mr. S. P. Wigg, leaves on Wednesday for Montreal on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. McCullough.

Rev. J. Bedford and Mrs. Bedford left last week for a round of visits to friends in Barrie and other places.

Mr. M. T. Grathams, school teacher at school section No. 6, Smith, took the services at the Methodist church on Sunday last.

Mr. W. R. Norris and family left Lakefield for Peterborough on Saterday last. Mr. Norris intends to make Peterborough his future home.

Mrs. and Miss Davis and Mr. Bert Davis were visiting friends in Peterborough on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Dauhuz have rented D'Eyncourt Park, the late residence of Mr. J. P. Strickland, for the winter and intend moving in at an early date.

Miss Jewell of Enniskillen, arrived in Lakefield on Monday last on a visit to her sister, Mrs. C. S. Tanner.

Mr. Geo. Guillet, who has been spending a few days with his cousin, Mr. Levi Payne, left for Cobourg on Tuesday last.

NUPTIAL EVENT.

Friends and acquaintances of the family will be interested to learn of the marriage of Mr. Samuel B. Sherin, younger son of Mr. Samuel Sherin, of this village. The bride was Miss Sue M. Bryan, of Baltimore, Md. The wedding which took place on Wednesday last, was solemnized at Baltimore by the Rev. D. H. Abbott, of Harlem Avenue Christian church.

A KEEN RACE.

The Sam Campbell annual cross country race for a cup which is presented to the school in memory of an old boy, took place on Thursday, Nov. 14th.

The race which was keenly contested, was won by Allan Glass, who was closely followed by Crombie and Wilkes.

COUNCIL MEETING.

A regular meeting of the Town Council was held in the town hall on Monday evening last.

The members present were Reeve Dr. J. A. Burgess, in the chair, Councillors Bygott, Duff, Campbell and Fitzgerald.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

The Finance committee report was read and adopted.

Moved by Coun. Bygott, seconded by Coun. Fitzgerald,—That the Clerk prepare the statutory notice to property owners regarding local improvements as have them properly served on the parties interested and that a Court of Revision be held on Monday, the 9th day of December, 1907, at 7.30 o'clock.—Carried.

GENERAL NOTES.

Miss Eva Pearson, of Ottawa, and her brother, Mr. Arthur Pearson, have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes.

An entertainment under the auspices of our local Orange Lodge, will be held on Monday, Nov. 25th, in the town hall. The services of Mr. Ed. Pigott, of Toronto, have been secured for the occasion. He will be assisted by several of our well known local artists.

The Grove boys are most anxious to try conclusions with the T.C.S. Junior football team on neutral ground. The T.C.S. team will not consent to such an arrangement for reasons best known to themselves.

Mrs. Edwards, of Lindsay, was a visitor at the Grove on Monday last.

You cannot be happy while you have corns. Then do not delay in getting a bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure. It removes all kinds of corns without pain. Failure with it is unknown.

County Meetings

Cheese Board

Mr. George A. Gillespie has just handed in a report of the closing meetings of the cheese factories of the county. The first will be on Monday and the list for the next is as follows:—

Monday afternoon, Lang; evening, Shearer.

Tuesday afternoon, Trewern; evening, Lakefield.

Wednesday afternoon, Maple Leaf; evening, Indian River.

Thursday afternoon, Fraserville.

All these meetings should be well attended, as there is a widespread interest among the farmers in dairy work at present. Mr. Somerville will be present to lecture on "Cow Testing," and the Ontario Department of Agriculture will send a speaker. Mr. Gillespie will make an effort to attend the majority of them, and the meetings will partake of a social as well as business nature.

The Real Thing.

Two women were discussing some new neighbors who had moved into one of the most sumptuous houses in their city.

"They seem to be very rich," said the first.

"Oh, they are," said the second.

"Shall you call?"

"Decidedly!"

"You are sure, are you, that they are—er—quite correct, quite—er—good form?"

"Oh, my dear, I'm positive," said the second woman. "They have thirty servants, eighteen horses, twelve dogs, eleven automobiles and one child."—Des Moines Register.

The Pessimist.

He who depresses and saddens another by his pessimistic talk and his recitation of physical ailments, says Ella Wheeler Wilcox, does a far greater wrong than he who takes his purse.

Thousands of these mental house robbers are walking boldly into the homes of friends and acquaintances all over the land and stealing the accumulated cheerfulness of months. Yet the cheerfulness so stolen becomes ashes as soon as it is taken, and the thief goes forth no richer, while the victim is the poorer.

Representatives of City's Leading Interests Attend Annual Banquet of Board of Trade

Progress of Peterborough and Dominion of Canada in the Great Manufacturing World Emphasized in Several Impressive Addresses.

How Trade of the Country Has Grown and How This Thriving Centre Has Contributed to the Immense Output.

Hon. J. D. Rolland, President of Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and Others Tell Story of Expansion and Development—First Annual Banquet a Distinct Success—Large and Enthusiastic Gathering.

The first annual banquet of the Peterborough Board of Trade has passed into history. It was held last night in the spacious and attractively decorated dining room of the Oriental hotel and was in every respect a pronounced success.

The attendance was large and representative, the speeches were eloquent and timely, and the event will long be remembered as a distinct success.

The menu provided by Mine Host Graham was an excellent one and served in admirable style. In fact, everything pertaining to the banquet was carried out in a manner that left no room for criticism.

The dining room was artistically decorated by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons with flags and bunting and on the walls were the shields of the different provinces of the fair Dominion, while the expressive word "Welcome" added to the inviting character of the scene.

The addresses all told a tale of progress and expansion in the past of Peterborough in particular and Canada in general.

The guest of the evening, Hon. J. D. Rolland, of Montreal, President of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, briefly reviewed the early history and marvellous development of the city, reflecting in no unmistakeable terms the proud position occupied and the importance of our varied manufacturing interests. He spoke of the benefit of the Trent Canal and the great national advantage the completion of this fine waterway would be to Canada. Mr. Rolland was cordially received and his address created a splendid impression.

The other speakers also did full justice to the toasts to which they eloquently responded and the evening was one which will long be remembered.

Dr. M. A. Morrison, President of the Board of Trade, made a most efficient chairman, while Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, vice-president of the Board, proved to be an able vice-chairman.

During the progress of the banquet, Mr. Wm. Mullroy contributed several stirring songs that were much appreciated. He had to respond to several encores. St. Paul's church quartette, composed of Messrs. Crane, Bennett, Nelson and Gillespie also furnished a number of happy selections and added materially to the pleasure and enjoyment of the occasion.

After ample justice had been done to the many good things provided the toast list was proceeded with.

THE TOAST LIST.

"The King," the first toast on the list, was proposed by the chairman and president of the Board of Trade, Dr. M. A. Morrison, "As Canadians," he said, "we are not able to boast of a noble aristocracy, we are not able to boast of great Victories won by land or sea, or of a great literature, but one thing we can boast of is our loyalty to our King." There were no people on earth, he continued, who had greater reason to be loyal than Canadians. Great blessings were enjoyed under British rule and for them Canadians were thankful and loyal.

The toast to the King was honored by the singing of the National Anthem with much fervency.

The chairman read letters of regret at being unable to be present from Hon. Senator Cox, Mr. Robert Stuart, Chicago, Mr. Frederic Nicholls, Toronto, Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P.

"The Parliament of Canada and the Legislature of Ontario" was proposed by Mr. F. D. Kerr, in the absence of Mr. Kendry, who had been elated for that duty. In the Parliament of Canada and the Ontario Legislature, said Mr. Kerr, Canadians had two bodies of which they might well be proud. Personally he had a much higher regard for the public men of Canada, and he had occasion to know quite a number of them, than one would get from reading the newspapers. He was confident that 99 out of every 100 men elected by the people were endeavoring to do their best to serve the interests of the country and to do their duty by the people who sent them to fill public positions. We had reason to be proud, said Mr. Kerr, when we looked back over our parliamentary records and see the name of such men as Macdonald, Blake, Laurier, Tupper, Borden, Mowat, Meredith, Fraser and many others, enshrined there. The speaker traced in a brief manner the growth of constitutional government in Canada, and alluded in terms of laudation to the men who had given their talents to assist in this great extension and to those who were doing similar work at the present time.

CANADA'S GREAT GROWTH.

The names of R. B. Hall, M.P., and T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., were coupled with the toast, and "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung before they arose to respond.

Mr. Hall expressed thanks for the way the toast had been proposed. He did not intend speaking at length, but in connection with parliamentary matters would say that no question within the perview of the Dominion Government received as much attention as the commercial affairs of the country. Compared with other countries, the trade of Canada had gone ahead with great strides during recent years. In this respect Japan led the world, but the conditions there had been different from in Canada. Since 1895 the trade of Japan had increased by 213 per cent, but previous to the year mentioned Japan had shut herself off from the rest of the world, and when the barriers were taken down her trade went ahead with a great bound. With Canada it was different. This country had been looking for trade ever since she was established, yet during the past eleven years the trade of the Dominion had increased by 176 per cent. At the present time the trade of Canada was four times as great per head as that of the United States. The Dominion held a proud position in the world. Her population was increasing and the products from her forests, mines, and cultivated lands were rapidly growing. Her industries were also flourishing, and the speaker predicted that Canada would come through the present financial stringency stronger than ever. Mr. Hall expressed happiness that the Peterborough Board of Trade should have with them a French-Canadian from Lower Canada. It would do the people of Ontario good to intermingle with their brothers of French ancestry. There was much that one race could teach the other, and the more intercourse there was, the better for all concerned. The speaker paid a warm tribute to the loyalty of the French-Canadians to their king and country, loyalty that had been shown by the blood shed by the French-Canadians to protect the country in 1821, and on several occasions of more recent date. He concluded by extending Mr Rolland a hearty welcome to Peterborough.

MR. BRADBURN.

Mr T. E. Bradburn flattered himself that he belonged to one of the best legislatures of its kind at the present day, and he was glad to be able to make the statement that the legislation passed at Toronto during the past three years was of a first-class character. He congratulated the Board of Trade and the banquet committee in particular for the splendid arrangements that had been made. The first annual banquet was a great success, and he hoped it would not be the last.

In introducing the guest of the evening, Hon. M. Rolland, Dr. Morrison said it afforded him great pleasure to do so. The fact that Mr. Rolland was president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association would be sufficient introduction to a Peterborough audience. "We pride ourselves on our industries," said the chairman, "and some day expect to be a great manufacturing centre, and if we do our present industries must expand and develop. We welcome Mr. Rolland as a citizen of the Province of Quebec, and as the head of one of the largest manufacturing industries of its kind in Canada. Mr. Rolland has been a member of the city council of Montreal, chairman of the finance committee of that body, a member of the Legislature of the Province of Quebec, Mayor of Hochelaga, president of the Franco-Belgium Steamship Company, a director of several banks, and the occupant of several other positions of importance and trust. We extend him a cordial welcome to Peterborough.

MR. ROLLAND'S ADDRESS.

The Honourable Mr. Rolland, on rising, was greeted very enthusiastically. His address was one of sound common sense, and being presented in the melodious dialect for which the French-Canadians are noted, made it doubly acceptable to the company. He thanked the members of the Board of Trade for their invitation to him to be the speaker for their first annual banquet. It was the first social event he had attended since becoming president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association of Canada, and he was pleased that the growing city of Peterborough should be the first in which he should be present on such an occasion.

Touching upon the history of the Association, he mentioned that it had been founded thirty years ago in Montreal. Later, that city joined its forces with Toronto, and now the Canadian Manufacturers' Association has a membership of 2,200, with branches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The aims of the Association are to secure united action among the manufacturers to secure proper tariffs, through a committee to look after their ratification; to secure freight regulations through a Railway Committee, and to advance trade with other countries through a Bureau of Commercial Utilities. Our goods being known, our Canadian manufactures shall continue to be considered among the best.

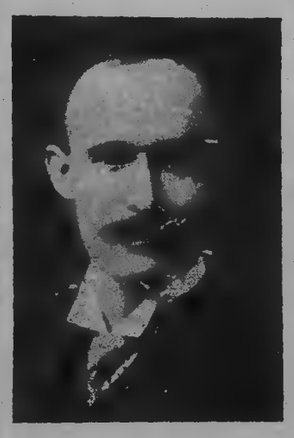
HIS FIRST VISIT.

Hon. Mr. Rolland next referred to his first visit to Peterborough of some thirty years ago, which was recalled to memory yesterday as he drove about the city and visited the prominent factories. Peterborough was not a century old, but from its advancements he knew that it had grown old in progress. History showed that Smith's Plains, where now stands Peterborough, were first settled about 1818. In 1825 there was a rush of immigrants, each with a cow, an axe, saw, gimlet, hammer, nails, a hoe, a kettle, some potatoes, and some Indian corn to begin life.

BOQUET FOR OUR CITY.

Peterborough was called after Peter Robinson, an early influential settler. Although Peterborough has had a short history, said the speaker, every line brings to her credit, due to the frank and file being public-spirited men. Peterborough was known to many countries as the home of the canoe and of the Quaker Oats. After visiting the industries here, including the Quaker Oats establishment, he could readily see why the latter designation, at least, was true and appropriate.

He also referred to the marvellous work carried on in the Canadian General, and to the flourishing condition of the new carpet factory. The speaker next dwelt upon the enormous increase of customs in Peterborough during the past few years, pointing out that we should assist in the manufacture of goods in our own country. "Your imports show an increase of from one and a half millions in 1904 to three million in 1906." Mr. Rolland next touched upon the growth of the city since 1881, when the population was only over 6,000 and his statement was greeted with applause when he said that there was no other city in Canada that had made such a progress. The Trent Waterway was a means of transportation to which he had taken particular notice. Its advantages not only to Peterborough, but to Montreal and to the whole of Canada when completed would be great in view of the fact that railways cannot compete with water in the question of carrying of freight.



DR. M. A. MORRISON

FOREST PRESERVATION.

A hobby of Mr. Rolland's, as he said himself, was the question of the protection and preservation of forests and the "white horse power." Lakes and rivers would exist only until their banks were left nude of the forests. Then they soon became dry and useless so far as water power is concerned.

Touching on the pulpwood problem he pointed out how lands in certain parts of Quebec were being laid bare to provide the raw material for the United States pulp mills. United States companies who have purchased limits in Canada are cutting away our forests to provide work for men in the country across the line. When the forests go, dry go the lakes and rivers that were once encircled by the forests.

Mr. Rolland advocated the manufacture of pulpwood in Canada and referred to the advantages that would be forthcoming to Canadian labour providing we manufactured our own paper on this side of the line.

Raw material for pulpwood is diminishing and the demand from the United States is robbing us of our forests and to preserve our pulp we must preserve our forests.

The speaker before resuming his seat again thanked the committee in his affable manner for their kindness in taking him around the city, which journey had been a most interesting one to him, and he hoped for the continued prosperity of the City of Peterborough. (Loud applause.)

FINANCE AND MANUFACTURING

In a neat speech, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, vice-president of the Board of Trade, proposed the toast to "The Financial, Manufacturing and Mercantile Interests," coupling with it the names of Mr T. F. Matthews and Mr. D. Hughes Charles.

In responding to the toast Mr. Matthews said he had been pleased to meet a manufacturer from the province of Quebec, and one of the most successful manufacturers in Canada at that. The speaker then took up the subject of Canada's trade expansion and presented some interesting statistics. In 1876 Canada's exports totalled $40,700,000; in 1906, $66,990,000, and in 1907 $133,000,000. This was an increase of 375 per cent during the 30 years. To the United States during the same period our exports had increased from $19,000,000 to $97,806,000. Mr. Matthews referred to the constant increase in the products of our mines, fisheries, manufacturing industries, and the farms of Canada. The speaker dealt in a brief manner with the Canadian tariff, and pointed out the reasons for some of the recent changes. Before concluding Mr. Matthews said he was going to take the liberty of asking the other gentleman who was to respond to the toast, Mr. Hughes Charles, why money was so scarce in Canada at the present time, and why good Canadian bills were being sent to the United States when they were so badly needed at home.

Mr. Hughes-Charles said he had been asked to fill Senator Cox's shoes at the eleventh hour and he was afraid they were a little too large for him. He congratulated the Board of Trade on having secured such a prominent manufacturer as Mr. Rolland to address them at the first annual banquet. Speaking of financial matters, Mr. Charles said the banks were the most important of Canada's financial institutions. Canadians had reason to be proud of Canada's banking system. It was far superior to that of the United States as was plainly evidenced in the present financial stringency. New York had boasted that it was rapidly becoming the great financial centre of the world, yet at the present time the banks there had no money and could not even provide a small loan. He cited a case that happened a few days ago where three prominent New Yorkers were not able to secure $600 from their bankers in connection with the financial stringency the speaker ventured the statement that there were millions of dollars in gold and currency hoarded up in the country because the people were afraid to trust the financial institutions. The reason why money was so scarce in Canada was that it was tied up in work of development. The banks had loaned it to men who needed money to develop business and it was tied up at the present time. The speaker did not believe there would be much letting up for some time. He advised the citizens of Canada to manage their business affairs and private matters as if they expected there would be hard times next year or a year from now, and there would be no more scarcity of money when the time came.

OUR MUNICIPAL INSTITUTIONS.

Mr. W. H. Moore in proposing the toast to "Our Municipal Institutions" said that it was a regrettable fact that the young men of Peterborough did not take the interest they should in the municipal affairs of the city. It was their duty to come forward and take their place.

In replying to the toast, Mayor McWilliams congratulated the Board of Trade on the success of the banquet and for having secured such a prominent manufacturer as Mr. Rolland.

Speaking of municipal matters Mr. McWilliams deplored the lack of public spirit among the business men of Peterborough. There were too many "knockers" with the result that the best men were sometimes not found in the city council. There were too many fault finders and there were too many changes in the Council. The only thing the present aldermen lacked was experience and they could never secure that if there were changes every year.

The banquet broke up with the National Anthem.

THOSE PRESENT.

Held Successful Sale and Entertainment Last Evening

A very pleasant evening was spent last night at the entertainment arranged by the Mothers' Guild of St. Luke's church. Three tables were prepared for the nice things to be sold. Mrs. George Long, Mrs. Whittaker, Mrs. T. Clitheroe had charge of the fancy work table. Miss Phillips, Miss Denne and Miss Katie Leary presided over the dolls' table, and Miss May Denne and Miss Edna Rogers sold candy. Miss Violet Whittaker was in charge of the fish pond. At the close of the entertainment the announcement was made that everything was sold out. The programme consisted of the following numbers:—

Instrumental Solo—Miss Katie Leary.
Vocal Duet—Mrs. Seward and Miss R Dawson.
Recitation—"Auntie Doleful"
Instrumental—Miss Taff.
Recitation—Mr. R. A. Sutcliffe.

Refreshments were also served. Rev Dr. Langfeldt acted as chairman. The officers for the Mothers' Guild are:—President—Mrs. T. H. G. Denne.
Secretary—Mrs. J. Strain.

WEDDING BELLS

HUFFMAN—FISHER

A quiet wedding took place at the George street Methodist Parsonage last evening, when Rev. E. A. Pearson united in marriage Mr. James Huffman, of Millbrook, and Miss Josephine Fisher, of Cavanville. Mr. and Mrs. Huffman will reside in Millbrook.

TO FINISH THE CONDUIT WORK

Will Likely be Completed by End of Next Week—Cable May be Put in

Messrs. H. H. and D. W. Leitch, of Maxville, foreman and assistant foreman, respectively, of underground construction work for the Bell Telephone Company, have arrived in the city from Brantford to complete the conduit work of the local branch of the Bell Telephone system, and may possibly put in the cable. The conduit work will probably be completed before the end of next week.

MR. LAWLESS WINS HIS CASE

Judgment Given To-day in Suit of Lawless Versus Crowley

Judgment was given today in the case of J. A. Lawless vs. T. H. Crowley, which was tried at the County Court here last June. The decision allows Mr Lawless' claim and dismisses Mr. Crowley's counter claim for $1,500.00. It will be remembered that Lawless sued Crowley for a board bill and the latter put in a counter claim for $1,500.00, which, he claimed, was due him in connection with the transfer of certain mining property to Mr. Lawless. S. T. Medd for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Dumble and A. E. Dixon for defendant.

Japan Cutting Rates.

Madrid, Nov. 21.—The Liberal yesterday published a statement to the effect that Japan, through the Japanese Minister at Madrid, had made an offer to the Spanish Government to construct the new war vessels planned for the Spanish navy, at a price much below the estimates already submitted.

Robbed of $60,000.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 21.—A despatch from Bokhara, Central Asia, says that two officials of the Bokhara treasury were attacked in that city, mortally wounded and robbed of $60,000 yesterday.

The robbers were captured, but the money was not recovered.

Fished In Peace.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The State Department has received information that the revenue cutter Gresham, which has been in Newfoundland waters in the interest of American fishing smacks, has started home. There have been no difficulties encountered by the American fishing fleet.

Cressman's AGENT PETERBORO'

Tugs and Nets Are Seized; Violation of Fishery Laws

Biggest Raid on Fishermen Yet Conducted in Northern Waters.

Wholesale Violation of Fishery Laws—Catch Confiscated and Boats Captured—Numerous Prosecutions Expected—Property Secured Runs Into Thousands—Government Determined to Stop Illegal Fishing.

Sault Ste. Marie, Nov. 22.—Capt. A. G. Duncan, Dominion inspector of fisheries, passed through the Canadian Soo on his way west, after inspecting the fisheries under his jurisdiction in the eastern division. During his operations in the neighborhood of Killarney, just below the Soo, Capt. Duncan was accompanied by a number of fishers from the Soo, and a flotilla under his charge consisted of a tug, sailboat and a gasoline launch.

In nearly every instance Duncan found the fishery laws being violated, the result being a large number of seizures, some of them considered of a most important nature. The largest number of infractions of the law consisted in catching white fish and trout out of season and having them in possession.

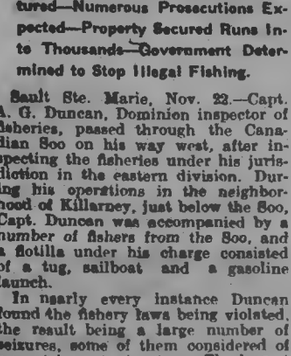
One of the tugs belonging to Purvis Bros. was seized, as well as a large number of pounds of nets and two gasoline launches belonging to Gauthier, French River.

James Noble, Dominion fish commissioner, it is alleged, was caught with freshly caught whitefish and trout in his possession. Noble claimed the fish were caught in the open season and had been kept over, but the officers claim they were fresh, and even providing they had been caught in the manner described, the offence is none the less flagrant in the eyes of the law, which distinctly states that none of the fish mentioned shall be in the possession of any parties after the closing of the season, Nov. 1.

James Rock, a fisherman of Killarney, was caught with whitefish and trout in his possession. The fish were all confiscated by the officers, and the boats, which were seized, were liberated after the officers obtained a receipt from the owners for them, which practically means they are still in the hands of the Government.

Capt. Duncan did not feel inclined to deal offhand with the case, considering the extent of the seizures and their importance in the eyes of the Government. He accordingly referred the matter to the Government, which will take action in the near future, and wholesale prosecutions are expected.

The seizures are considered the largest made by the Dominion Government in years, the property confiscated reaching into the thousands.



STRATHCONA HONORED.

London, Nov. 22.—The Duke of Argyle, who was Governor-General of Canada from 1878 to 1883, yesterday, on behalf of the Anglo-Canadians in London, presented Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian High Commissioner, with a large silver centrepiece, illustrative of the various phases of Lord Strathcona's life.

Replying to the presentation address the High Commissioner said he hoped soon to resign his office into younger hands, but before so doing he desired to see the proposed all-red route by way of Canada to the far east an accomplished fact.

German Imperial Budget.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—The imperial budget, which was presented yesterday, provides authority to raise $68,125,000 by borrowing, while the credit of former budgets has not yet been realized to the amount of $33,525,000. The new budget thus sanctions borrowing $98,650,000. It further authorizes the chancellor to raise temporarily a maximum of $37,500,000 at the Imperial Bank upon treasury bills, as his needs may require.

Owing to the unfavorable state of the Imperial finances, the Government has decided to postpone the operation of the sinking fund measure till a different arrangement can be made.

The report accompanying the budget emphasized the necessity for the imposition of new taxes in order to bring the expenditures and revenue in harmony.

British Regiment Despatched.

Calcutta, Nov. 22.—A British regiment has left Fort William for Asansol, Bengal, the junction of the East Indian and Bengal-Nagpur Railroad, where the railroad strikers are looting cars. Government business is almost at a standstill, as Simla, the official capital, is isolated. Steamers are unable to sail, as they lack both coal and cargo. The prices of provisions are rapidly rising here.

FAMINE THREATENS LAPLAND.

Deluging Rains Have Been Disastrous to the Barley Crop.

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 22.—Famine conditions are threatening the Vesternerland and Vesterbotten districts of Lapland, where deluging rains have had disastrous effects on the crops. Official advices say that the threshed barley only weighs 54 kilograms per barrel, instead of the usual 112, that bread baked therefrom is black and almost worthless as food, and that the milch cows must be slaughtered to prevent the people from dying of starvation.

The Swedish Cabinet has petitioned to remove the duty on grain, and taken other steps in order to alleviate the threatened starvation.

Lapland is an extensive territory, in the northern part of Europe, shared between Russia, Sweden and Norway.

Vesternerland borders on the Gulf of Bothnia, and has a population of about 240,000. Vesterbotten extends from the Gulf of Bothnia to the border of Norway. The population numbers about 145,000. Both are within the Swedish sphere.

JACKSON TO STAND TRIAL.

Charged With Holding-Up Canadian Pacific Operator.

Woodstock, Nov. 22.—Arthur Jackson received a preliminary hearing yesterday morning before Police Magistrate Ball. He was represented by John Soper McKay, while R. N. Ball, K. C., prosecuted.

The charges were that of holding-up Operator Walcott and stealing a revolver. Evidence of both charges worked in well and the quadroon will come up before a jury at the sittings of the County Court next month.

It was disclosed who Jackson's alleged partner in the hold-up was—Alexander Green, colored, who came in on a freight from London a few days prior to the committing of the crime.

Detective Robson of the C. P. R. and Welch of the Canadian Detective Agency, Toronto, are in the city. The actions of Green and Jackson have been traced up till 12.30 on the night of Oct. 9 and the rope and strap that bound Walcott have been sworn to as having been seen on the two men previous to the committing of the crime.

MAY KEEP HATS ON.

Judge In Montreal Gives Decision Affecting Theatres.

Montreal, Nov. 22.—That Canadian theatre managements have no right under the general law to require patrons, either men or women, to remove their hats, is the gist of the opinion of Judge Piche, given in police court yesterday. Judgment was given in connection with a charge of assault laid against the constable of a moving picture theatre by Miss Robertine Barry, a well-known authoress, who was ejected from the National Theatre because she refused to remove her hat. Judge Piche said the only remedy for theatrical managers was to secure passage of a by-law by the city council making it an offence to wear a hat in theatres.

WOMAN MUREDERED CHILDREN.

Terrible Crime of a Mother While Husband Was Away.

Newton, Mass., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Jessie T. Hedges, wife of William T. Hedges, killed herself and her two sons, William, aged 11, and Butler, aged 8, by asphyxiation, at her home in Newtonville some time during the night. All cracks in the doors and windows had been plugged and the gas turned on. Mr. Hedges was away on a business trip.

Mrs. Hartje Vindicated.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, who was sued for divorce by her husband, E. Augustus Hartje, the Pittsburg millionaire, won a complete victory in the Pennsylvania Superior Court here yesterday, when that tribunal affirmed in its entirety the decision of the Allegheny County Court, which refused to grant Hartje a divorce. The petitions filed by Hartje's attorneys, asking the Superior Court to re-open the case on the ground of newly-discovered evidence were denied. The petitions to re-open the case were based on letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Hartje and Thomas Madine, the family coachman, who was named as a co-respondent by Hartje.

To Stop Theft of Nets.

Leamington, Nov. 22.—Provincial Detective Campeau of Windsor is at work on the theft of about $600 worth of pounds nets from Marsh & Heming, fishermen of this place, and has orders from the crown attorney not to stop until the offender is captured. It is the intention of the provincial Government to put a stop to the practice that has been growing at a discomforting rate during the past year. Recently the complaints have been increasing from the fishermen, and this last and largest theft has determined the Government to act in a decisive manner.

First Woman Barrister.

Fredericton, N. B., Nov. 22.—In the Supreme Court yesterday Miss Mabel French, the first lady ever admitted to the Bar of New Brunswick, was sworn in before the full bench, with the exception of the chief justice, who is at his home in St. John, owing to his being unwell.

Big Coal Strike Settled.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—A cable despatch received in this city yesterday by J. & A. Brown, coal importers, says that the strike of coal miners in New South Wales has been settled at all the coal collieries except the Holbarn colliery. The men will return to work next Monday.

Kingston License Fees.

Kingston, Nov. 22.—The city treasurer was handed a check for $4,805.40 yesterday, this amount being the city's share of the license fees for the half year ending Oct. 31.

is a positive cure for all those painful ailments of women. It will entirely cure the worst forms of Female Complaints, Inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacements and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the Change of Life. It will surely cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of Female Weakness than any other remedy the world has ever known. It is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels Tumors in an early stage of development. That causing pain, weight and headache, is instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the female system. It corrects.

Irregularity,

Suppressed or Painful Periods, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility. Also

Dizziness, Faintness,

Extreme Lassitude, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, flatulancy, melancholy or the "blues," and backache. These are sure indications of Female Weakness, some derangement of the organs. For

Kidney Complaints

SOME SHARP DIVISIONS.

Anticipated Regrouping In New Russian Parliament.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 22.—The anticipated regrouping of the parties in the Lower House of Parliament is already in progress, breaks appearing in both the Octoberist and Conservative ranks, pointing to the ultimate strengthening of the Constitutional Centre against the Extreme Right.

Count Bobrinsky, president of the Constitutional Conservative party, yesterday formally proposed the exclusion from the Conservative Club of all deputies connected with the Reactionary League of the Russian people, because they are opposed to constitutional government. This action was inspired by the attitude of the progressive wing of the Octoberists, who, at a meeting Wednesday night, threatened to bolt the party unless it severed all relations with the Reactionists.

ANARCHISTS IN LISBON.

Popular Excitement Growing In Portuguese Capital.

Lisbon, Nov. 22.—The investigation of the explosion of an infernal machine here Nov. 18 when two anarchists who were manufacturing bombs were killed, and a third man arrested has revealed the existence of a far-reaching plot against the dictatorship. Over seven hundred bombs have been seized, and the police have made eighty arrests. The machine, which exploded, was intended for use in the Sansarles Threatre here.

Popular excitement is growing as a result of the revelations, the censorship is most strict, and several newspapers have been entirely suppressed.

Airship Appropriation.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—It was announced yesterday that the Imperial Government will ask for a supplementary credit of $100,000 for the construction of a new airship, which Count Von Zeppelin has built in the greatest haste in order to have it ready to begin experimenting in the first favorable weather next summer.

This amount is in addition to the $400,000 collected in the budget of the Interior Department. Payment of the latter sum will depend upon results attained with the new airship. It is intended to, in part, remunerate Von Zeppelin for the expenditure of his private fortune on airship experiments.

Whole Family Cremated.

Marietta, Ohio, Nov. 22.—Edgar Grubb, his wife and one-year-old baby, were cremated in their home near Beverley yesterday. It was reported that the family had been murdered, and to cover up the crime the home was fired.

Closing the Coke Ovens.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 22.—In an interview at Fernie, B. C., Wednesday night, G. G. S. Lindsay said he intended closing the coke ovens there, and at Michel, employing 50 men. This was owing to the closing of the Kootenay smelters. The Boundary Coal Co. is also closing the Rock Cut mine, employing a large number of men.

Bellechasse Figures.

Quebec, Nov. 22.—The official returns for the recent bye-election in Bellechasse give Hon. Mr. Turgeon a majority of 726. The total vote polled was: Turgeon 1,973, Bourassa 1,218.

Six Houses Burgled.

Aylmer, Nov. 22.—Aylmer was visited during the night by burglars, who made a complete round of the town, ransacking six houses but getting very little for their trouble and risk.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

John Boyd Found Guilty of Wilful Murder at Toronto.

To Be Hanged on January 8th—Jury's Recommendation to Mercy Set Aside by Justice McMahon—Judge Told Prisoner It Was Most Cruel Murder He Had Ever Heard Of—Prisoner Was Cool.

Toronto, Nov. 22.—John Boyd was yesterday sentenced by Justice MacMahon "to be hanged by the neck until dead" in the jail yard on Jan. 8 next for the murder by shooting of Edward Wandle on June 11 last. Boyd showed no signs of emotion.

The judge in his charge to the jury emphasized that there had been no justification for the shooting. Wandle was master in his own house and had the right to refuse Boyd permission to go to the kitchen.

"If," said the judge, "in your opinion Boyd went to Wandle's premises with the intention of killing him, or of doing him grievous bodily harm, then you must find him guilty of murder, and it is your duty to bring in a verdict to that effect. It is only in the event of you believing what the prisoner says when he swears that he was attacked by Wandle, and that he fired in self-defence, that a verdict of manslaughter will be justifiable."

The jury, after one and one-half hours deliberation, rendered their verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy, but on what grounds Judge MacMahon could not determine. "For," he said, "in all my experience of twenty years on the bench I have never heard of a more cruel or more premeditated murder."

Addressing the prisoner, he said: "Boyd, a higher law than human has said: 'Who sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed.'

"Did you give your poor victim one moment in which to supplicate the Almighty to have mercy on his soul?

"The law is more merciful than you were. I give you a long delay in which to make your peace with Heaven, and I advise you to use every moment between that time and the day I shall set for your execution in seeking pardon from God."

MUST NOT SING OF CHRIST.

School Board's Action In New York Raises Storm of Protest.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Herald yesterday says: Orders that no hymn or carol containing mention of Christ or Christmas shall henceforth be sung in the public schools of New York were given yesterday by the board of education. Following the announcement, protests were uttered in every section of the city.

Emphatic instructions were given by Frank R. Rix, general musical director, to all the teachers under him, that in no circumstances during the approaching Christmastide particularly, are they to permit pupils to sing any song that shall contain any word or phrase which would accentuate religious significance.

That all sectarian references which include the name Christ and mention of Christmas are being eliminated from the song books in use in the public schools of the city was a surprising bit of information which was disclosed with the announcement of Mr. Rix's action of yesterday. All the books are now in the hands of printers for revision.

Mauretania's Great Run.

New York, Nov. 22.—The new Cunard liner Mauretania broke one of her sister ship's, Lusitania, records yesterday, when at noon she completed a day's run of 624 knots. The Lusitania's best record for a day was 616 knots. As the day on a westbound voyage of this ship is about 24 hours and 50 minutes long, the Mauretania is coming west at a rate of about 26 knots.

News of the Mauretania's record day's run was contained both in a news despatch received by the Associated Press, and in a wireless message from Captain Pritchard, adding that the ship was 539 miles east of Sandy Hook at noon yesterday, and that he expected to reach the Hook about 8 a. m. Friday. This would make the Mauretania's time for the passage about five days and two hours, or about seven hours lower than the Lusitania's fastest westbound passage.

British Premier's Portrait.

London, Nov. 22.—In the smoking-room of the club, Earl Carrington yesterday, on behalf of the donor, Alexander Ritchie, presented to the National Liberal Club the portrait of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, painted by J. Colin Forbes. The earl, in making the presentation, expressed the opinion that the portrait was a splendid piece of work. Mr. Ritchie also had words of praise for the artist, as did also Barton Morris, chairman of the art committee of the club.

Centre York Bye-Elections.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Archie Campbell, M. P., will be made a Senator to-day, and thus Centre York will be rendered vacant.

The writs for the bye-election will be issued almost at once and will call for nomination on Dec. 16 and election on Dec. 23.

It is accepted here that Dr. McLean of Woodbridge will be T. G. Wallace's opponent in the bye-election.

Two Forgers Sentenced.

Welland, Ont., Nov. 22.—The two crooks arrested at Fort Erie, charged with forgery, were yesterday sentenced, Oliver to one year in Central Prison, and Groote to three months in Welland jail, on a charge of vagrancy.

SHAPED OVER FOOT SCULPTURED LASTS

Improvement Number Ten

The way Foot-rite Foot-Sculptured Lasts are Made

Foot-rite lasts are a revolution in last making. They're shaped to overcome the foot comet curse. They're a study in sculpture.

Explanation:

The most handsome and ideally formed feet known to orthopedic experts are the feet of athletes. Without perfect feet no prize-fighter could side-step, no runner could sprint, no footballer could dash, etc. Ideal athletic feet of all shapes from all over America, Canada and England were selected as Foot-rite models. These were reproduced in wood without the smallest change by well-known sculptors. These sculptured wood shapes were then graded into all sizes. Over these model athletic lasts Foot-rite shoes are moulded. What does this mean? It means that Foot-rite interiors are shaped like the human foot. It means that no matter what the shape of your foot, any Foot-rite store contains a shoe interior that's the same shape and size as your foot. It means that there's comfort in a Foot-rite Shoe such as you never found in other shoes. And it means that the Foot-rite Shoe, being shaped like the handsome and ideally formed feet of athletes, is certain to please both the eye and the feeling.

The same prices in America, Canada or Great Britain—$4.50, $5.00, $5.50 and $6.00. Every pair Goodyear Welted.

A Story of Absorbing Interest

The Rogue's March

By E. W. HORNUNG, author of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," "Stingaree," etc.

Mr. Hornung, who is known chiefly in America as the author of "Raffles," is at present perhaps the most popular writer of fiction in England. This story, "The Rogue's March," is a remarkable piece of work. It hinges upon an absorbing mystery, which the reader will almost certainly fail to fathom until the secret is revealed by the author in its proper place. It is a story of adventures many, of sacrifice and of faithful love; of an heroic soul wronged, degraded, embruted, and yet not lost—a story which holds the interest of the reader to the last line, and which he will never forget.

CHAPTER I.

IN the year 1837 and on a warm, moist April morning there knocked at a modest lodging house in Rolls buildings, Fetter lane, a recent lodger who could no longer afford even the attic's trifling rent. So now he made his bed in the parks of the metropolis or in the damp green fields outside. And for all he professed to care, the damp was welcome to kill him if only it would kill outright.

The man was very fair and spare, but of a medium height. His hands and feet were notably small, the wrists and arms a little deceptive. These looked lean, but were made of muscle and quickened with hot, keen blood.

He was very young; but, though as a fact not five and twenty, the thin, sardonic, reckless face looked half as old again. An abiding bitterness had carved the full nostrils, deepening the lines thence to the sensitive red lips and drawing the latter too habitually apart upon set teeth or a sneer. Nor was the bitterness of the kind sown in proud hearts by capricious circumstance and crushing but not dishonorable defeat. It was rather the Dead sea fruit of willful riot and a contemptible, impenitent remorse. And yet in the full brown eye and lifted chin, as in the ill clad, well carried figure, there was a lingering something that was gallant and fine and debonair.

To this lost youth the door in Rolls buildings was opened by a gray haired woman, who nodded knowingly in response to an inquiry for letters and handed one over with an invitation to enter and read it within. But the kindly words fell on inattentive ears. Looking fondly and yet fearfully at the superscription—to Thomas Erichsen, Esq., and the rest—the needy owner of that name suddenly pocketed his letter with unbroken seals. He was turning as abruptly away when the blank face of his former landlady led him to pause a moment.

"No, bless you, no! It's not from him," said Erichsen grimly. "This is from a friend I met yesterday, who would insist on having my address. What was I to do? I thought you wouldn't mind, so I gave my last."

"Mind! It is your address and might be your 'ome if you wasn't that 'igh and 'aughty. Dear, dear, dear! So you've not heard from that villain yet?"

"Not a line."

"Nor of him?"

"Not a word. Give me time. If I don't root him out by this day month—well, then he's fled the country—like a sensible man."

"But what if you do?" demanded the landlady, who was herself directly interested in the event.

"What if I do, Mrs. Adcock? Well, I shall probable half murder him, to begin with. He has wholly ruined me. Yes, it will be my money—and your money—or his life. He knows it, too, if he's got my letters. Feel the weight of that!"

And he put in her hands a heavy ash stick, green and sinewy, with the knob still creamy from the knife.

"Lord save us!" cried the woman. "Is this the rod in pickle for him?"

"That's the rod in pickle. Nice and heavy, isn't it?"

"Too 'eavy, Mr. Erichsen. Too 'eavy by 'alf. I'd show no mercy to thieves and swindlers, but I should be very careful what I did with that. I wouldn't take the law into my own hands if I were you."

"You wouldn't?" cried he. "Not if you'd been cleaned out as I have by as blackguardly a dodge? By the Lord that made him, I'd break every bone in his infernal body and will, too, if I find him and he won't pay up. I'll pay him! I grant you it was my own cursed fault in the beginning. But what about that last £35? Who got that? Why am I rotting and starving here? Who threw me on the mercy of kind, good folks like you—yes, and made a sponge of me in my turn? Whose doing is it that I've got to pawn the clothes off my back or beg my meals, to tramp the streets all day, to lie all night in the fields"—

"Your own!" exclaimed the woman, coming hastily down from the step upon which she had been standing all this time. "It's your own fault, is that, however. You know well it isn't mine. Our attic has been empty ever since you went. You're welcome to it until it's wanted again if only you'll come back. Nay, sir, I do assure you I'd rather have you for nothing than most of them that pays. Come back tonight or I'm sure I shan't sleep a wink for thinking of you. Come in now, and I'll get you some nice 'ot breakfast."

Erichsen held out his hand.

"No, no," said he. "I owe you quite enough already, Mrs. Adcock. Besides, I'm as strong as a horse and doing much better than you think. But the world is full of kindness after all, and God bless you for yours!"

And his dark eyes, that but now had flashed and burned with bitter fires—that were far more striking always for a shock of almost flaxen hair—stood full of tears. He could say no more, but only wring the dry, chapped hand in his. Then he was gone and might have been seen a little later hurrying with bent head toward Temple Bar or later yet spread at full length in that green asylum of his homeless days, the southwest corner of St. James' park.

And here he read the letter from his friend. It began on one side of the large white paper and ended on the next. The girlish handwriting was pitifully tremulous, but yet instinct with a self reliance then uncommon in young English ladies. The letter ran:

Avenue Lodge, Regent's Park, April 24.

Darling—What does it mean? I was picturing you in Calcutta when I saw you this afternoon in Piccadilly! I had been thinking about you just then—I always am—and there you were! Oh, my darling, what can it mean? Tell me quickly, or I shall go mad with anxiety, as I nearly did on the spot this afternoon. Come here, as you love me, and tell me all!

Darling, what can it be that has kept you here and so silent all this time, or did you go out and come straight back? No; there has not been time. The Jumna sailed on the last day of September, and I have prayed for her safety all these months. I was so sure my love was on board!

Oh, if only I dare have stopped to speak to you a few more seconds! The groom was so close behind. But, Tom, you seemed not to want to give me your address! I would not have left you without it. And now I shall come to you there unless you come to me. You looked so sad and ill, my sweetheart! I can see his poor face still!

Come and tell me all and let me help you or my heart will break. You are in trouble. I know it and must help you—it is my right. We are in the new Avenue road; you will easily find it. The house is far the largest on the right hand side as you come from town. There are fields behind, and our garden goes the farthest back—that is, we have a field of our own walled in with it, and there is a green gate in the wall. It is kept locked, but I will be there at 9 o'clock tomorrow (Thursday) night, and so must you. Be there for my sake and tell me all.

I have written the moment I got in. I will post it myself. Dear Tom, do not be hard on this girl if you think her overbold, for she loves you, she loves you and would give her life to make yours happy! Your own true CLAIRE.

Twenty-eight mortal hours to wait. I shall hear my heart beating—as I hear it now, as I have heard it ever since I saw that sad, sad face—until I see it again!

When Thomas Erichsen came to the end of this passionate, pure love letter he buried his face in the sweet spring grass and lay immovable with a grief too great for tears. The sounds of London (louder then than now) boomed and rattled in his ears. To those of his soul a brave soft voice was whispering the last godspeed, while his own, the more broken of the two, was vowing not only eternal constancy, but eternal goodness and an honest life for her sake.

He could see the steady gray eyes filled with tears that never fell and shining into his with the love that knew no shame. He must never look in them again nor ever more defile with his the brave lips that had trembled, truly, but yet spoken comfortable words up to the end.

And here Tom lay in culpable poverty and dishonorable rags, fallen already to an ultimate deep. So now, too late, as through the gates of hell, must come this message of angelic love!

He read it again, tore off the clean half sheet and, sitting cross legged, wrote as follows in pencil upon his knee:

It means that I am a blackguard and no longer worthy to be even your friend.

The Jumna was ten days behind her advertised time of sailing, and I was miserable. You might have pitied me then; I neither ask nor deserve any pity now. I had vile thoughts. Even if I made my fortune, your father would hate my father's son forever—and I him—so it could never be. You would marry in due course. How could you help yourself? Those were my thoughts. And then I met a friend!

He showed me the town. He helped me to forget. He won most of my money and took the rest by fraud. I never even booked my passage. And now I only live to spill the fellow's blood.

But that's all he did. He didn't disgrace me. I disgraced myself and broke all my promises to the noble girl of whom I never was worthy and must therefore see her no more. It would be no good. Why should I insult you too? I have done so enough in coming to this. Simply forget me, for I am not worth your scorn. Forget me utterly. I am too ashamed to sign my name.

This he folded up, addressed with his pencil and sealed (in a fashion) with the wafers which had been used already. Her lips had touched them before his. Then he sat where he was and noted the other moral corpses stretched upon that daily battlefield and wondered if any of them had wrecked their lives as willfully as he his. And then he thought of his father's white hairs and thanked God they had won to the grave without this to bring them there.

Then he lay down again and wrestled with hunger and anguish alternately and both together. It was evening when he left the park heavily laden with a fact remembered on the way. He lacked the price of a two penny stamp. Not a farthing had he left nor a thing to pawn save his long silk purse so ignobly emptied, and that had been his father's before him. It should not go even for this, yet the letter must. Then how?

He sat down again on a bench, for he was weak for want of food, and in his weakness came a temptation that was indeed more like an inspiration, so luminous was its flash. He might take his letter and leave it himself in the keyhole of the garden gate. Why not? Then she would get it at once—that evening.

Why not? He had already given the reasons in the letter itself. And see her he would—he must—if once he got as far as that garden gate. So the reasons in the letter held very good indeed. And how weak is he himself the first to fly in their face! But, then, weakness was his present portion, whereas the temptation grew stronger and stronger—only to see her face once more, only to hear her voice, although it lashed him with the reproaches he so richly deserved. Yet he did not give in without a kind of struggle. He had become a gambler, and a gambler's compromise occurred to him now.

This was when the yellow London sun was setting, a little after 7 o'clock. About twenty minutes past several of the better favored pedestrians in Pall Mall were accosted by a timid ragamuffin with a ghastly face who begged the loan of a penny and was rightly treated to deaf ears, but at length a dapper young man in a long bottle green coat wheeled round with an oath and a twinkling eye.

"Lend you one!" cried he. "I like that! What d'ye mean by it, eh?"

"What I say. I ask the loan of the smallest coin you've got—and your pardon for the liberty."

"Pray, when shall I see it again?"

"In half a minute."

"Thank you," said Erichsen, and balanced it on his right thumbnail. "Now you stand by and see fair play. Heads I go and tails I don't. Sudden death. Let it fall clear."

His beggar's manners (such as these were) had been forgotten on the instant. The coin rang upon the paving stone with his words.

"Then I'm unspeakably obliged to you," replied the fervent beggar, returning the penny.

"No, no! Hang it all! I'm a sportsman myself. You're a man of my kidney, and you hadn't even a brown to toss with. Oblige me by taking this yellow boy. No, curse it! I beg your pardon—I might have seen. At least, sir, you will join me at the tavern to show there's no ill feeling? A cut off the joint, I think, and a tankard of stout. What say you? I feel peckish myself. Come, come, or you'll offend me."

But the eyes which his miseries had left dry were dim again at the kindness of the world, and Tom Erichsen had not spoken because he could not. "May I live to repay this," he muttered now. "It will be my first bite since yesterday."

And in another hour it was a new man who was pushing forward with such brisk steps upon the high road to Avenue Lodge and his appointed fate.

Moreover, the currents of other lives than his had been deflected for good or evil by the spin of that borrowed coin.

Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada

Gravenhurst, Oct. 26th, 1907

W. H. HILL, Esq.,

Manager Central Ontario Sun Life of Canada

Peterborough, Ontario.

DEAR SIR,—

Your favor of the 24th inst. received enclosing statement of profits allotted to my policy 7001, in the "Sun Life" for the past five years.

Above policy is for $1,000 on the whole life five year distribution plan on which I paid an annual premium of $28.35, or $141.75 for the five year period.

I find the CASH PROFITS amount to $53.85, or about 40 per cent. of the total premiums paid during the five years. This is certainly a splendid showing and speaks volumes for the earning powers of the Sun Life Company's investments.

Thanking you and wishing your company continued success,

Yours truly,

H. H. [illegible]

PARALYTIC STROKE PROVED FATAL

Miss Mary Tobin, Douro, Expired Shortly After Returning From Festivities of Wedding

Death came with startling suddenness on Wednesday to Miss Mary Tobin of Douro township. She had attended a celebration at the residence of Mr. W. J. McManus and bride, Douro, and left for home in the morning after staying all night at Mr. McManus' place.

She rode with Mrs. Joseph Moher as far as Mr. John Dwyer's farm and was there seized with a paralytic stroke which affected one side of her body. She died the same afternoon at four o'clock. Her parents are dead and the deceased resided with her brother Maurice. She leaves five brothers and two sisters to mourn her loss. The brothers are Thomas, Tobin, Peterborough, Maurice, Douro, Joseph William and Cornelius, who reside in the United States. The sisters are Mrs. John Sheehan, of Rochester, N.Y., and Mrs. H. B. Crowley, of Douro. The deceased was well known and had a large number of friends.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, from the residence of her brother Maurice, to St. Joseph's church, and thence to the Douro cemetery for interment.

TRYING TO PLACE BLAME FOR ROMAINE ST. SEWER TROUBLE

Much Information Brought Out at Committee Meeting

But No Decision Reached as to Where the Blame Rests

MANY PIPES WERE LOOSELY PUT TOGETHER

No Officials Will be Dismissed for the Present—Conflicting Evidence.

Work is going ahead without change on the opening of the Romaine street sewer and the relaying of the pipes today. As has been noted several times recently, it was found that the pipes were loosely connected when the sewer was opened by the Board of Works a few days ago, and it was decided to re-open the portion of the sewer on Aylmer street, and have the pipes laid properly. Street Commissioner Evans was appointed to oversee the work and to make a report as to the condition in which he found the sewer.

A meeting of the committee of the whole council was held last night to endeavor to ascertain where the blame rested for the faulty construction of the sewer in the first place, and nearly three hours were spent in dealing with the matter. Street Commissioner Evans' report was first heard, along with some additional information from Mr. Evans, and the others who had to face the committee and give their version of the trouble were City Engineer Hay, W. H. White, who was forman when the sewer was built, an Italian named Anthony, who laid the pipes originally, and another Italian named Cupoli, who is relaying the pipes at the present time. There was considerable variety in the statements made by those who were called before the committee, and it took a long time to get all the desired information. All admitted that the joints in connection with the pipes were not properly made, and were of the same opinion as to what had caused this defect, but as to where the blame rested there was not such unanimity.

It appears that the pipes were loosely connected, sometimes being completely separated, with the result that sewerage was allowed to escape from the pipes and water and sand to flow in from the outside. All those connected with the building of the sewer were positive that the joints had been properly made in the first place, as good, at any rate, as the conditions would permit, but that the pipes must have been pulled out of place by the workmen having to pull a bag through the pipes after they were laid, the bag being used to block the end of each section of the pipe to prevent water and sand from entering, before it was placed in position. After the pipe was placed in position the bag had to be drawn back through the pipe and, as it fitted tightly, sometimes it was hard to get it out and the pipes were pulled from their position in this way. With the exception of the city engineer, the men all stated that the pipes had to be laid in eight or nine inches of water and quicksand, which made the work very difficult. Cupoli, the Italian, who is relaying the pipes, stated that at one point he had found a looseness of fifteen inches in twenty feet of pipe. It has also been found that the joints were not properly cemented.

After getting all the information possible, the committee decided to go ahead with the relaying of the pipes on the Aylmer street portion of the sewer, the work to be done under the direction of Street Commissioner Evans and W. H. White. It is expected that this portion of it will be completed in about a week. There was considerable talk as to dispensing with the services of several city officials, but, as more information was adduced, it became more difficult to know who was really to blame, and so nothing was done. The Board of Works, as soon as they discovered that the pipes were not connected properly, dismissed Anthony, the Italian, who had laid them. One of the aldermen was of the opinion last night that the Italian was no more to blame than Mr. White and the city engineer, and wanted to have them dismissed, too, but his opinion did not carry.

There seems to be some doubt (as to whether the Romaine street sewer will ever work properly, but it is thought that it may be satisfactory when the pipes have been laid properly.

The Mayor was in the chair last night, and all the aldermen were present, except Ald. Johnston.

ALD. DUNCAN'S COMPLAINT.

The chairman of the Board of Works, who had visited the spot several times last spring when the men were cleaning it out by means of drawing chains through the pipe. Sometimes W. H. White, the city's foreman of this work, was there, and at times he was not to be seen. Ald. Duncan could not see that the men were doing any good; and instructed Mr. White to open up the sewer in his presence and ascertain the actual trouble. White did so, but did not seek his (Ald. Duncan's) presence; he simply reported that he had pulled a brick out of the sewer; but otherwise the work was all right. Recently a portion of the Aylmer street section had been opened up by his orders and on inspection he had found the pipe joints in some places one to three inches apart. No cement or tow seems to have been used on the joints. In 110 feet of work every pipe end was open. He had consequently ordered the opening up and relaying of the whole of the Aylmer street section.

The mayor said Mr. Hay, while recognizing the difficulty of this work had not reported that the work could not be done satisfactorily. Mr. Hay claims that he had seen many of the pipes laid and they were cemented together tightly.

EVANS' REPORT.

The street commissioner, H. Evans, reported under date of November 21st, as follows.

As requested by you I hereby report that we have opened up Aylmer street sewer from the man hole on Romaine street going toward the school.

We uncovered the pipe for 40 feet and found the joints were not properly cemented, we sealed joints as we went along. Three joints were entirely disconnected; we had to begin to raise and relay the pipes. Those which we uncovered this afternoon we found the joints were very well made.

The above joints being apart the balance of the pipes will have to be patched up and relaid to next man hole. The sewer on Romaine street, which I examined through the man hole, I found clogged, and got the fire hose to flush it out; it is running well at the present time.

Ald. Bradburn did not see how the engineer could see most of the pipes laid in a couple of hours each day. Neither did he think it fair to hold to Neither did he think it fair to hold the engineer responsible for work which he could not possibly supervise himself owing to so many calls on his time.

Ald. Duncan remarked that he had been down on the spot every day recently, morning, noon and night, and every pipe he saw had been improperly laid.

Ald. Leary.—"It is a mistake to do such work by day labor, and appoint a man out of a foundry as inspector."

EVAN'S EVIDENCE.

The street commissioner was here examined behind closed doors as were all the remainder of those interested. He had had nothing to do with construction of sewer. He did not think if the pipes were laid properly in the first place the action of water or sand would loosen the joints. It was impossible to cement the joints all the way round because they were laid partly in water, and he saw many of them laid. This was owing to existing and natural conditions. The man could not always get oakum in the pipe joints, owing to the way they are made. He would not say the council would be warranted in trying to repair this sewer, as it is below water level, and water is continually carrying sand through thee pipes. The work was executed under unfavorable conditions, and should not have been carried on. He thought the pipes might have been disjointed in the method taken of clearing them of sand and slush as laid. Water had been pumped through from behind the construction, and a bag of sand then drawn through the pipes; the witnesses have declared that frequently it took two men to accomplish the latter task, and this might account for some of the pipes having been drawn apart. He is in charge of the work of uncovering and relaying the Aylmer street section. His men put the pumps ahead of the pipes and draw the water away from them instead of pumping it through them as done when they were laid in the first place. Then they stop the outlet while another pipe is being quickly adjusted. He opined that the sewer when relaid by him would be satisfactory so far as the actual work is concerned.

the Italian, who is relaying the pipe now, said he had found some pipes apart from one to three inches; he had not found any old tow in the joints re-connected by him. He thought he could make a good job if he takes his time.

ENGINEER HAY.

Said his previous reports were correct as submitted. So far as the Aylmer street section is concerned, the 60 feet opened up is satisfactory. He has seen seven joints uncovered and they are all right. The disconnected joints reported undoubtedly had been pulled apart by drawing the sand plug through. He had never seen more than one man doing this, and had cautioned him to keep the pipe in position by means of a crow bar. He had seen the pipe submerged one half and sometimes its full depth. He had visited the work at least once each day, when he saw one joint made. The water and sand were forced away until lower flange of pipe was in view, and then jointed as quickly as possible. Cement and gasket were used in the joints. He had not reported to the effect that the sewer could not be satisfactorily laid, and had expressed himself as satisfied with Mr. White. It is correct that he had visited the work an hour or two every day and seen greater part of the pipe laid. Mr. White had never advised him to stop the work, although he had expressed his discouragement owing to the nature of the work. But he had always encouraged him to proceed with the work as the School Board were continually pressing him to hurry along its completion. The levels of the King Edward school had not been struck by him, and were arrived at before he laid the plans for this sewer. He had not thought the natural difficulties insurmountabel, but admitted that he took chances towards the end of the work—the part now opened, which is the worst section. He had not reported to Ald. Duncan when he ordered the sewer uncovered.

FOREMAN WHITE.

On being questioned, said Andy. Webb had told him the cement used in the man holes was no good; this same cement had been used for the pipes which were then already laid; he is no judge of cement. He would strike water at 6ft., 4 and 6ft. 6, Gasket and cement were put in all joints, and work was done as satisfactory as possible under conditions. He had been doubtful of the work proving satisfactory, and wanted to shut it down because he had not the proper appliances. He never reported to the Board of Works of last year, who must have been blind not to see the difficulties when they visited the work. He did not think it his duty to report to the Board of Works, although he had told the engineer three times to drop the work as he could not do it satisfactorily to himself. One could not hold the pipes together with a crow bar while drawing a sand bag through. The pipes were laid half covered with water and were cemented as thoroughly as possible. When he opened the sewer this year under instructions from the engineer, he found in 28 feet of pipe gaps to the extent of 15 inches, and added a pipe 15 inches long. Although he saw two joints being pulled apart he did not report that a crow bar would not hold them together while drawing the sand bag through them. He thought the Italian, Anthony, had done the best he could in laying the pipe.

MR. ANTHONY.

Who laid the pipes was next called on the carpet. He said he had a man or two pulling a bag of sand through pipes, and used a bar or shovel to keep the pipes together. He had not seen the two pipes alluded to by Mr. White pulled apart, and he was on the work all the time. He was never able to get the water below half the pipes, which was best part of the time only two inches out of water. If he had had more lumber there to stop filling in, he could have done more satisfactory work. Gasket and cement were put into every joint.

ALD. DUNCAN ENDORSED.

The council agreed that Ald. Duncan had taken the proper action in opening up and relaying the Aylmer street sewer. It will take a week to finish this work now.

Ald. Leary moved, seconded by Ald Morrow.—That the work continue as at present until the completion of the Aylmer street section up to to the point where the sewer and that of school interests.

Ald. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Morgan.—In amendment that in view of the fact that the street commissioner is now available for inspecting this work, Mr. White's services on this work be dispensed with.—Lost.

The motion was carried.

KING EDWARD OVERCOAT

New Designs are Shown This Year in the Semi-ready Wardrobe

Creasman's have received a new lot of the famous "King Edward" Overcoat, together with a lot of the "Imperial" Overcoats. These are shown in their Semi-ready Wardrobes. They have that distinctive touch and style which is a marked attribute of all the Semi-ready garments, and they are made of the warmth-giving British woollens which give the wearer better service and more comfort.

A Semi-ready Overcoat looks as well the second year as the ordinary overcoat does the first few weeks of its wear. That is the proof of good tailoring.

Non Jury Sittings are Concluded

Judgment Reserved in Robertson vs. Robertson, Kelly vs. Clunan Settled Out of Court

The case of Fowler vs. Green and Robson heard at the non-jury sittings of the High Court of Justice, which came up before Mr. Justice Mabee yesterday afternoon, was settled. Mrs. Margaret Fowler claimed $700 from Wm. Robson and Jas. T. Green, deceased, for the board and keep of Mary Robson, deceased, which Jas. T. Green had agreed to pay.

The judge held that the plaintiff was entitled to reasonable consideration for board and lodging over what had been paid by deceased to the plaintiff. As the deceased had paid plaintiff $2 per week, the judge held that plaintiff was entitled to $1.00 per week extra, covering the period of thirty weeks. Judgment was entered accordingly. Both parties agreed to pay their own costs. F. D. Kerr for plaintiff, R. E. Wood for defendants.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

In the case of Robertson vs. Robertson, judgment was reserved. The plaintiffs, Sarah Jane and Mary Jane Robertson, executrixes of the will of the late John Robertson deceased, and the defendant, Mabel Hannah Robertson, a widow, residing in North Monaghan, and the administratrix of the estate of the late Wm. Henry Robertson. The plaintiffs claim $2400 for arrears of rent due the estate of the late John Robertson for land leased by the late Wm. Robertson, and owing at his death. M. P. Poussette, K.C., and L. M. Hayes, for plaintiffs, F. D. Kerr for the defendants.

SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

The third case, that of Clunan vs. Kelly and Flaherty was settled out of court. Clunan claimed $615 from the defendants, but finally agreed to take $275, which Kelly and Flaherty were willing to pay. Both parties pay their own costs. O'Connell & Gordon for the plaintiff, and R. F. McWilliams for the defendants.

Will Mr. Stratton be Liberal Candidate in West Peterborough?

Rumor Says That Mr. R. R. Hall, M. P., Will Retire at End of Present Session and That Mr. Stratton Will Run in His Stead—Mr. Hall Denies the Report.

An interesting political rumor is going the rounds and it is to the effect that Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., for West Peterborough, will retire from political life at the end of the present session of Parliament and devote his time exclusively to his many business interests. It is stated by those in a position to know that Hon. J. R. Stratton will be the candidate of the Liberals in the west riding, the way being opened up by Mr. Hall's retirement.

It has long been known that Mr. Stratton was seeking to capture the nomination of this party in the East riding, but gossip now has it that he will run for the federal house in the West riding.

Mr. Hall was seen at noon to-day and asked if the rumor that he intended to step down and out was true, and that Mr. Stratton would be the candidate. "It is the first I have heard of it," replied Mr. Hall.

"Is there no foundation for it?" was asked.

"None whatever," was the answer.

"Then how do you account for the rumor which is certainly widespread."

"I am not responsible for rumors and am at a loss to account for its origin," replied the member for West Peterborough as he walked away.

Abduction Case Creates Great Sensation in Lindsay

Strange Woman Steals Away Little Dorothy Marion—Says She is Her Mother—Foster Mother and Father of Child in City Last Night But no Trace Found Child or Woman Who Spirited Her Away.

Yesterday Lindsay was startled by an abduction of a sensational character, when a young child Dorothy Marion by name was taken away from the town by a woman claiming to be her mother and signing herself at the Simpson House, Lindsay, as Mrs. L. M. Conroy, Montreal.

Little Dorothy was adopted some time ago by Mrs. Marion and it is possible that the woman who took her away is really her mother.

Mrs. Marion, when she heard of the abduction, was naturally very much alarmed and made arrangements to trace down the woman and the missing child. She came to Peterborough last night on the nine o'clock train from Lindsay, accompanied by her husband and registered at the Snowden House, thinking that the woman and child might possibly have come here to take the C.P.R. midnight for the east. She conferred with the local police, but her quest, however, did not result in anything as Dorothy and her alleged mother had apparently not come to this city. Chief Rossel telephoned Chief Hond, of Port Hope and asked him to place the abductor under arrest should she be located in the Lake Ontario town. So far nothing has been learned of either the child or the woman.

Mrs. Marion returned to Lindsay at 8.30 this morning.

The Lindsay Post has the following to say concerning the abductions:

This morning little Dorothy Marion, daughter of Mr. C. B. Marion, went as usual to school at 9 o'clock with a little girl friend. At recess at 10.30 a woman walked up to the school and called her aside, and talked with her. Dorothy was seen to cry, and one of the children overheard the woman telling her, "I'm your mother, and if you come with me I'll give you all sorts of candies and nice things, and you'll have a fine time all the time." Dorothy went back into school at 11 o'clock, but when the noon hour came the woman was waiting outside the school, with a hack not very far off. The child and woman got in and drove off immediately.

Player Piano is Ingenious Invention

Gerhard Heintzman Co. Have Peerless Piano Playing Appliance

To become a skilful or even ordinary player on the piano requires years of hard study and practice, and the expenditure of a large amount of money for tuition, etc. But the possession of a Gerhard Heintzman player piano, that is a piano and piano performer-instrument and musician, combined—solves the problem. By means of this wonderful self-playing attachment any person can produce any kind of music, even the most difficult, in a perfectly correct and expressive manner, to the delight of himself or herself and all hearers. The Gerhard Heintzman player-piano is an instrument of high quality that cannot be surpassed. One has only to call at the local offices of the Gerhard Heintzman Company, Water street, where it will be for a short time in order to be convinced of its simplicity, ease of operation and capability of yielding the best of music from the sprightliest to the most sublime in any key, with the time and expression, as well under the will and control of the performer as they would be with an artistic musician interpreting a selection in the orthodox manner.

The Gerhard Heintzman player piano has many points of excellence over all other players, and is mechanical in name only. It is the only playing device which combines all those points of excellence; it plays all of the 88 notes on the piano; it has a perfect transposing keyboard; it has an automatic re-wind; it permits of absolute control of the tempo; it has pneumatic fingers, jointed like the human wrist, and which strikes the keys in a most natural manner and ensures a touch as delicate and effective as can be given by the most skilful artist's hand.

The player-piano can be easily and quickly converted into an ordinary piano, and the simple but ingenious attachments in no way deteriorate from its appearance. They are within the mechanism of the piano proper, and do away with the employment of any cumbersome and separate mechanical appliance.

A representative of the Review had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Chas. F. Ruse, superintendent of agencies, for the Gerhard Heintzman Company, give a convincing exposition of the Gerhard Heintzman player-piano. He performed two great classics, Liszt's "Rhapsodie Hongroise No 2," and the pianoforte setting from Rossini's "William Tell," and as a contrast, "The Wedding of the Winds," a popular composition by John T. Hall, and 'Stars and Stripes," one of Sousa's stirring marches. The manner in which the peculiar qualities of these widely different numbers were displayed, showed the wide range of musical expression possible on the player-piano. However, a column of minute description would not convey an adequate and complete an idea of what this player-piano is capable of doing as a visit to the local warerooms and seeing and hearing it in operation. Mr. W. H. Isaac, the local agent for the Gerhard Heintzman Company, will be glad to welcome any visitors.

Tells How He Learnt to Switch Ballots From Pritchett.

Swears Alleged Affidavit Was False—McNab Could Not Identify Man Who Gave Money For Corrupt Use—Dollars Were Handed Out Lavishly—How Rake-Off Was Shared Out.

Toronto, Nov. 22.—James Farr of Goderich, the man who took so important a part in the Holmes-MacLean bye-election in West Huron that he had to skip to Dakota took the stand at the London conspiracy trial yesterday afternoon, and said that he understood, when he came back to Canada, that he would receive $500 from the Conservative party if he would give the whole game away. As yet he had not received the money.

Jerry Collins, the crown's chief witness, was in the box nearly all day. He told his Police Court story with a few new points, which tended to draw Reid and Mulloy deeper into the game in London.

Farr was very amusing in his evidence. Led by Mr. Staunton, Farr identified Pritchett as the man who taught him to switch ballots in Goderich. He could not tell to whom he gave the good ballots after the election.

The statement that was printed in The Globe shortly after the election, which was purported to be sworn to by Farr, was read over clause by clause by Mr. Johnston. The witness said that he saw the article, but that although the greater part of it, dealing with his action when deputy returning officer, was true, he had not made the statement. It was hatched up by Jim Vance, who also got him the money to get out of the country.

The cross-examination of Collins was not finished. It is expected that the crown's case will be finished today, when an adjournment will probably be made until Monday.

Raphael MacNab, a lineman living in Brockville, testified that during the White-Comstock election he was furnished with $20 to buy votes. O'Gorman gave him the money. He was told that George Taylor, the Conservative whip, had sent letters out with money enclosed.

John Stevely said he received $20 from Reid for election expenses. He also got $150 in envelopes from some parties unknown. He swore that he did not know where the money came from, how many envelopes he got, or who made up the list of doubtful voters. The money was left on his desk, that's all he knew.

"This happened two years and a half ago," said the witness as an excuse for his poor memory.

"The money, like the list, must have dropped through the chimney," remarked Mr. Staunton.

Stevely's testimony yesterday morning differed from that given in the Police Court, and as a reason he said, "he knew more now."

Jerry Collins was the next witness. He told of his part in bringing up London voters in several elections, and of his crooked work as deputy returning officer. He went into details as to the instructions given him by Mulloy and Lewis.

Collins said that he was told by Mulloy that the money was furnished by O'Gorman. Over this point the lawyers had a long argument as to whether it should be admitted as evidence or not. Judge Winchester finally allowed it as evidence.

Collins went on to tell of how money was spent with a lavish hand during the Hyman-Gray elections. He said that in one sub-division $10 bills were put in envelopes in the presence of Chairman Jones and given to him to keep for the bought voters. Wednesday Jones swore he didn't know what was in the envelopes.

He also told of Jones' antipathy to the buying of Gatecliffe, and that Mulloy said it was what he wanted. "Buy him all up," he said.

Here Mr. Staunton endeavored to have one of Mr. Mulloy's statements to the witness put in as evidence. To this Mr. Johnston strenuously objected, and started to talk to Collins.

"Don't try to bulldoze him now," interjected Mr. Staunton, "Wait till he's out of my hands."

"The witness is telling a lot more to-day than he ever did before," broke in Mr. Johnston.

The examination of Jerry Collins was continued at the afternoon session. He explained the folding of the ballot to show the deputy returning officer which way the voter had voted.

The scheme was developed in O'Gorman's room at the central committee rooms. Witness told of the instructions given by the defendant, Wiley, to the deputy returning officers. Mulloy had given the witness ten $5 bills the Sunday before the election to buy a man called Hodgins, who wanted his money in advance.

At the election Collins could not carry out the ballot-folding idea, because a man named Price, from St. Thomas, insisted that the ballots be folded lengthwise. The book showing the list of voters who had been bought, with the names of the men who did the buying, Bervias, Sifton, witness, etc., was identified and put in as an exhibit.

Witness held $1,000 in the bye-election, and $600 in the general election. The men were paid off at Lewis' hotel. It was decided by witness, Lewis and Mulloy to take a rake-off for expenses. Wiley assisted Collins to pay the voters.

After the "boys" were paid off, Collins gave Tom Lewis and Wiley their share of the rake-off. He offered Mulloy $6. Mulloy wouldn't take it. He asked witness: "Did them dirty rats take the money? I won't." Sifton gave witness $250.

STREET CAR COLLIDES WITH WAGGON

On George St. at Noon To-day—Driver and Horses Escaped Unhurt

A bad accident was narrowly averted to-day at noon, at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, when the wood waggon of Mr. Fred Dunbar of Smith, was struck by a northbound Auburn car and was considerably damaged. Mr. Dunbar and the horses fortunately escaped unhurt. Mr. Dunbar was driving east on Simcoe street, and when crossing George street he thought that he could pass before the car but the horses had just got over the track when the Auburn car with a terrific blow struck the waggon. It was turned upside down, and Mr. Dunbar was thrown about twenty feet. Mr. A. Killenbeck, motorman, stopped the car as quickly as possible.

Move to Have New Church in South End

Meets With the Hearty Support of the People—Enthusiastic Meeting Last Evening

The Methodists of the south end of the city are very enthusiastic over the prospects of having a new church, and turned out in large numbers at the meeting held in the King Edward School last evening to discuss the question. Mr. D. W. Dumble occupied the chair. A resolution heartily supporting the movement to have a new edifice was moved by Mr. Hicks and seconded by Mr. Harry Danford, and unanimously endorsed by all present.

A committee, consisting of Messrs. D. W. Dumble, W. S. Robinson, B. F. Ackerman, A. W. Crossman and Revs. A. M. Manning and E. A. Pearson, was appointed to look into the matter of location of the church, the style of architecture and other things incidental to the building of the new edifice.

The following were added to the General Committee:—Messrs W. S. Robinson, H. Danford, A. Wilson, J. M. Mann, Hicks and A. Sanders.

WEDDING BELLS

JAYES—ROBINSON

A marriage of much local interest took place in Toronto on Wednesday morning when Miss Ethel Robinson, daughter of Mrs. Robinson and the late Jas. Robinson, of Toronto, was wedded to Mr. Wm. Jayes, also of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Jayes, of this city. The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock at the Holy Family church, and was performed by Rev. Father Coyle. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were in attendance, with the exception of the members of a ladies' society in connection with the church, to which the bride belonged. The bride was attired in a handsome suit of cream voile, with picture hat to match. She was assisted by Miss May Warrington, who wore a pretty costume of white organdie, trimmed with silk trimmings. The groom was attended by Mr. Raymond Robinson, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony, the bridal party drove to the home of the bride at 1,160 Queen street, west, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served.

The bride received many beautiful presents, many of them being from friends of the groom at Peterborough. A substantial cheque from the undertaking firm with which the groom is employed was among the gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Jayes left on the 11:05 train for Buffalo, where the honeymoon will be spent. The bride wore a handsome travelling suit of gray ladies' cloth.

On their return to Toronto they will reside in Peakdale.

The happy groom will have the best wishes of a large number of friends in Peterborough for a married life of happiness and prosperity.

SEVEN MEN KILLED.

Premature Explosion on G. T. Pacific Camp Near Dryden.

Kenora, Nov. 22.—The explosion Wednesday on the eastern construction works of the G. T. P. near Dryden, Ont., resulting in the death of seven men and injury to four was caused by a premature explosion at the works. Three holes were being dug, when in some unaccountable manner the man in charge caused the blast which resulted so fatally to himself and the others working around him. The victims were of foreign extraction, several being Austrians. The names cannot be ascertained at present.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—No particulars have so far been received here as to the killing of seven men employed by the McDougall Construction Co., contractors for a 50-mile section of the G. T. P., by an explosion of dynamite near Dryden. Mr. Alex. McDougall of the company received word here yesterday of the catastrophe, but as yet has been unable to obtain any details or the names of the killed.

KING AND QUEEN DANCED.

Duke of Portland Entertained Alfonso In Underground Ballroom.

New York, Nov. 22.—A London despatch to The American says: "While a group of the ablest lawyers in England is trying to oust the Duke of Portland from his splendid estates in favor of George Hollamby Druce, the duke Wednesday night gave a lavish ball in honor of the King and Queen of Spain at Welbeck Abbey.

For the first time the wonderful underground apartments, which were constructed at a cost of millions of pounds sterling by the insane duke, were opened to his guests.

The King and Queen of Spain danced in the great subterranean ballroom, the walls of which are covered with priceless pictures, while supper was served in another tremendous underground apartment upon gold plate.

All the aristocracy of England was summoned to honor the Spanish royalties, and danced in the subterranean ballroom, and 1,200 guests sat down to supper in the underground picture gallery.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Hogs the Weak Spot in U. S. Markets.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—London cables are firmer at 10c to 12½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—Receipts of live stock at the city yards since Tuesday, as reported by the railways, were 151 carloads, composed of 2116 cattle, 2639 hogs, 4233 sheep and lambs, and 120 calves.

Exporters.

There was nothing doing in the export trade excepting for a few bulls, which sold from $3.12½ to $4 per cwt.

Butchers.

George Rowntree, who bought 22 carloads for the Harris Abattoir Company, reports the following prices: A few good cattle at $4.35 to $4.40; fair to good loads, $3.70 to $4.15; some heavy cattle, 1200 to 1300 lbs., at $4.10 to $4.20; good cows, $3.40 to $3.95; light cows, $3.25 to $3.25; common cows and common butchers' cattle, $2.25 to $2.60; canners at 75c to $1.75 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report more activity in the stocker and feeder trade this week than for some time, altho prices didn't advance to any extent. The common and medium light stockers are still hard to cash; the farmers don't feel inclined to buy them at any price. Good heavy feeders around 1100 pounds were in demand and sold considerably higher. More of this class would have sold.

Messrs. Murby bought 850 head this week at the following quotations: Best feeders, 1000 to 1100 pounds, at $3.25 to $3.30; best feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $3.00 to $3.35; best stockers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $2.85 to $3; best stockers, 650 to 800 lbs., at $2.25 to $2.75; medium stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $2 to $2.25; common stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $1.50 to $1.75.

Milkers and Springers.

The number of milkers and springers offered on Wednesday and Thursday was the largest of the year thus far, the result being that prices declined in the medium to good kinds fully $10 per head. The extra choice kind did not suffer so much, but prices were easier all round. During the two days prices ranged from $30 to $60 each, but on Thursday they had to be extra good if they went over $50 each.

Veal Calves.

Trade in veal calves remains about steady at $3 to $6 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Over 4300 sheep and lambs were on the market during Wednesday and Thursday, which caused prices to be easy all round. Export sheep sold at $3.75 to $4; lambs, $4 to $5.25 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts during the two days were large, 2639. Mr. Harris quotes the market easy at $5.75 for selects; unfinished hogs, $5; with market weak, and prospects lower this coming week.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Veals—Receipts, 200 head; slow and steady, $5 to $9.

Hogs—Receipts, 4300 head; fairly active and 10c to 15c lower; heavy and mixed, $5.15 to $5.25; yorkers, $5.10 to $5.25; pigs, $5.20 to $5.30; roughs, $4.50 to $4.75; dairies, $4.70 to $5.10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5000 head; slow and steady; Canada lambs, $6.25 to $6.60.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Cattle—Receipts estimated 9000; market steady; steers, $4 to $4.65; stockers and feeders, $2.40 to $4.65; cows, $2.75 to $4.50; heifers, $2.50 to $5; bulls, $2.60 to $4.35; calves, $3 to $7.

Hogs—Receipts, estimated 25,000; market slow to 10c to 15c lower. Choice heavy spring, $4.75 to $4.85; light butchers', $4.75 to $4.85; light mixed, $4.65 to $4.75; choice light, $4.75 to $4.85; packing $4.40 to $4.70; pigs, $4.65 to $4.75; bulk of sales, $4.65 to $4.70.

Sheep—Receipts, estimated at 15,000. Market steady to strong. Sheep, $1.50; lambs, $5.25 to $6; yearlings, $4.25 to $5.10.

Cheese Markets.

KINGSTON, Nov. 21.—(Special).—At the Frontenac cheese board to-day there were 265 cheese boarded, all colored. Of these 70 boxes were sold at 11⅝c. The board adjourned until the third Thursday in April.

Five Children Burned.

Titusville, Nov. 22.—Awakened by the barking of his dog early yesterday, Thomas W. Zuver, an oil producer living east of here, found his house in flames. With difficulty he saved his wife and their baby. Two sons escaped from the second storey, but were badly injured. Five children were burned to death.

Killed by Live Wire.

Quebec, Nov. 22.—A workman named Archer Renaud, 27 years old, employed by the Quebec Railway, Light & Power Co., was repairing wires on a pole yesterday morning, when he accidentally touched a live wire, and was instantly killed.

He was the sole support of his old mother.

THERE WAS HE WAITING FOR THE CHIEF

Local Newspaperman Made too Free With Pair of Hand Cuffs and Had Unique Experience

Some men are born great, others achieve greatness and some have greatness thrust upon them. In the latter class is enrolled the name of John Hogan, a newsmonger on a local contemporary. The aforesaid scribe has jumped into the white calcium light of publicity in one bound and gives promise of becoming a second handcuff king, an extra edition of De Tomaso, as it were.

Thursday night Mr. Hogan was at the police station and was handling a pair of handcuffs. Not knowing that there was no key for the bracelets at the police headquarters he locked them on his wrists, and great was his dismay when he found that the only key to open them was in the possession of Chief Roussel and the Chief was at his home on McDonnel street. Thither the scribe wended his way with hasty steps and was fortunate in getting to Mr. Hozzel's house before the Chief had retired for the night. The steel rings were removed and the newspaperman went forth into the world again with his good right arm free to chronicle the Police Court happenings and to encircle the universe and a few other things with its power.

Faithful Workers Met Last Evening

Substantial Thank Offering Taken for Foreign Missions

The Faithful Workers' Mission Band of St. Paul's church met last evening and an interesting and profitable time was spent. Miss Marlie Hall occupied the chair and opened the meeting. Rev. Dr. Talling gave an address on Missions, and a thank-offering for Foreign Missions was taken, amounting to thirty-five dollars, which was very encouraging.

Memorial Services Will be Conducted

At Park St. Church in Memory of Late J. A. McWilliams

A memorial service is arranged for Sunday night in memoriam of the late Sir Knight J. A. McWilliams, at the Park street Baptist Church. Rev. A. H. Brace will preach. The Royal Black Knights will be represented, as well as the Orangemen. True Blues and Prentice Boys, who will attend to honor the memory of a departed brother. Special music will be provided.

CONVENTION

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Your editorial in a recent issue pertaining to the calling of a convention to choose a Conservative candidate for the House of Commons, was timely and to the point. Seeing the political activities all along the line in other places, it has been a matter of surprise to many that our convention should be kept back so long, when such delays are fraught with the most serious consequences, as has been proved in the past. Three years ago the party paid a severe penalty for just such unnecessary delay.

The action of the Young Conservative Club, Executive last Saturday evening in recommending to the executive of the West Peterborough Liberal Conservative Association that a convention be called without further delay for the selection of a candidate, was none too soon if we are not to play into the hands of the enemy, and besides, as you point out, the distinguished leader of the party, Mr. R. L. Borden, while here in October last, urged haste in choosing strong, aggressive candidates for both ridings at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Borden was right; the executive of the Young Conservative Club is right. An opposition candidate has little chance of success against the candidate of a powerful and corrupt Government, already entrenched, unless he is placed in the field early and has time for a thorough canvass of the riding, and for perfecting organization.

Yours, etc.,

Ottawa Citizen Tells Story of Rugby Tangle

The Ottawa Citizen contains a long review of the rugby situation in connection with the Canadian championship mix-up and refers to it as a "dreadful tangle." The danger of Peterboroughs being professionalized should Montreal and the locals meet is dwelt upon and the numerous messages exchanged between the College and Peterborough are told of. The article concludes with:—

"The trouble over the Canadian championship has been accepted and the action of the Canadian Rugby Union in recognizing the Interprovincial Union is taken, by opponents of the C.A.A.U. in Ottawa, as a slap at the C.A.A.U. However, it remains to be seen that the amateur question has caused another big row in the football world, and if Peterborough meet Montreal—and Montreal has started practicing in preparation for the game—it will be up to the Ontario Union to act. President Shillington of the C.R.F.U. is not in Ottawa at present. The Interprovincial's application for affiliation with the C.R.F.U. is now in the hands of Secretary McKeand, and the latest move of the C.R.F.U. indicates that it will be accepted. The C.A.A.U. may now declare the C.R.F.U. a professional organization."

BOARD NOT WANTED AT FIRE HALL

Street Commissioner Evans Not Allowed to Place Sand in the Basement

Has the Board of Works any rights around the new Fire Hall? This was the question brought up at the Committee of the Whole Council last night, when Street Commissioner Evans stated that the foreman of the fire hall, Mr. Pakenham, had refused him permission to place in the cellar of the fire hall the sand used for sprinkling the city streets during the winter. He had only wanted a small corner of the basement, but Mr. Pakenham had told him that he had no rights around there. Personally he had nothing against Mr. Pakenham but he wanted a decision from the Council on the matter.

An alderman remarked that when the fire hall was being built it was agreed that the Board of Works would be permitted to store their tools, sand, etc., in the basement.

Ald. Bradburn said the reason why Mr. Pakenham objected to the sand being put in the cellar was that the cold air that would get in by the doors being opened during the winter would affect the batteries which are located in the cellar.

Mr. Evans stated that there was a brick wall between the place where the batteries are located and the corner where the Board of Works wanted to put the sand.

In order to settle the trouble definitely Ald. Phelan moved, seconded by Ald. Morrow.—That the matter of the use of the cellar of the fire hall for Board of Works purposes be left in the hands of Ald. Duncan and Ald. Bradburn.—Carried.

Judgments Not to be Given Out

Until Court of Revision Has Completed its Work

The Court of Revision last night commenced consideration of the claims of those who have appealed against the assessment and reached decisions in a number of cases, but have decided not to give anything for publication until the whole list has been gone through and revised. This means that the judgments of the Court will not be published after each meeting but will be given together when the work has been completed.

AMUSEMENTS

Marks Bros. closed a most successful four night's engagement at the Grand last night, when they presented an interesting melodrama, "Dangers of a Great City."

Mr. Joe. Guerin, of this city, who has joined the company, appeared in a clever buck and wing dance and was given a great ovation by the audience. Mr. Guerin's many friends were pleased to see him on the professional boards, and wish him every possible success in his stage career.

COTTAGE MEETING

Dr. Langfeldt will conduct his weekly cottage meeting on Nov. 28, at the residence of Mr. John Nichols, Otonabee.

ST. MARK'S, OTONABEE

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt will preach at St. Mark's and administer the Holy Sacrament of Communion next Sunday morning. Sunday School is at 10 and service at 11 a.m.

Extra Room is Being Provided

For Increased Attendance at George St. Sunday School

Extensive alterations are being made to the George street church Sunday school quarters in order to provide accommodation for growing attendance. The library is being moved from the motor room at the east end of the building to the northwest corner, where an extra class room will also be provided, and the entrance way at that corner will be wiped out by the changes. The present library room will be changed into a class room so that two additional apartments will be provided by the alterations.

The Cottagers to Give Banquet

Stony Lake Residents Will Have an Enjoyable Function

It is the intention of the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association to hold a banquet in Peterborough in the near future. Not only will all the local members of the association be invited to attend, but also the summer resorters of Stony Lake, living in Toronto and other places. Last year a dinner was given in Toronto by the Stony Lake Cottagers Association at which a number of Peterborough people were present. It is the intention to have a function here similar to the one in the Queen City.

EIGHT ROOMS OF SCHOOL FILLED

Wisdom of Board of Education in Erecting Ten Room Structure

The action of the Board of Education in erecting a new ten room school in the south end of the city has already been justified.

"Although only eight rooms of the "King Edward" are furnished, they are already filled," remarked a trustee to the Review today. "The other two rooms will in a few months have to be made ready for occupancy. In the eight rooms utilized there are about 400 pupils and some of the classes are crowded. The South Central school is also well filled, so that the opening of the King Edward affords the people an indication of the rapid growth of the city in that district, and shows the wisdom and foresight of the Board of Education in anticipating future needs."

TALES, TOLD HERE

Druggists Hear Much Praise for This Home Made Mixture.

Some remarkable stories are being told of this simple home-made mixture curing Rheumatism and Kidney trouble, even after the most noted health resorts failed to give the slightest relief. Here is the recipe and directions for taking: Mix by shaking well in a bottle one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Take as a dose one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

No change need be made in your usual diet, but drink plenty of good water.

This mixture writes one authority, has a peculiar tonic effect upon the kidneys; cleansing the clogged-up pores of the eliminative tissues, forcing the kidneys to sift and strain from the blood the uric acid and other poisonous waste matter, overcoming Rheumatism, Bladder and Urinary troubles in a short while.

A New York druggist who has had hundreds of calls for these ingredients since the first announcement in the newspapers, stated that the people who once try it "swear by it," especially those who have Urinary and Kidney trouble and suffer with Rheumatism.

Every prescription pharmacy can supply the ingredients, which are easily mixed at home. There is said to be no better blood-cleansing agent or system tonic known, and certainly none more harmless or simple to use.

Mr. V. Eastwood Will Enter Action Against Mr. J. Bogue

To Compell Him to Give a Channel for the Creek Between Edinburg and Dublin Streets—Another Turn in the Situation.

Another move has taken place in connection with the trouble over the creek between Dublin and Edinburgh streets. Mr. Vincent Eastwood is entering an action against Mr. Jas. Bogue to compel him to open the creek through his (Bogue's) property. In the meantime the City Council will take no action. It was intended to have a culvert put in at the place, where the creek crossed Edinburgh street before it was diverted, but this will not be done for a few days pending developments.

The matter came up at the meeting of the committee of the whole council last night, Mr. V. Eastwood being present to urge the council to take no action for the present.

Mr. Eastwood said that conditions at present were just as good as they would be if a second culvert was put in. From what he knew another culvert would not reduce the liability of the council from damages that might result from the flooding of property. He could not see the sense of spending more money on another culvert and spreading the water all over the locality. He urged that no action be taken at the present time.

Ald. Elliott asked if the ratepayers living north of the culvert would have their property damaged in the spring by back water?

Mr. Eastwood said that they would, but that a second culvert would not benefit matters at all. It would only be useless expenditure.

The Mayor stated that in proposing to put in the new culvert the council was acting on the advice of the city solicitor. Mr. Hall's opinion was that the city would strengthen its legal position by making the change.

Mr. Hall was present and pointed out why he had given this opinion. He stated that if the culvert was put back in the original channel, the city would not be responsible for damages.

Mr. Eastwood did not agree with this, and said he was going to take immediate legal action to compel him to keep the creek open.

Ald. Elliott suggested that the city expropriate a channel for the creek through Mr. Bogue's property.

Mr. Eastwood said if this was done he was prepared to pay half the cost.

Ald. Stevenson moved that the matter of making a change in the culvert be left in abeyance until such time as the city solicitor directs the city engineer to proceed with the work.

The city solicitor objected to taking all the responsibility, and Ald. Stevenson then changed his motion, and moved, seconded by Ald. Wilson, that on the understanding that Mr. Eastwood take immediate action against Mr. Bogue to compel him to open a channel for the creek through his land, the city engineer be instructed not to proceed with the work until the 3rd day of December. The motion carried without opposition.

There was some discussion regarding the matter before other business was taken up, but the motion settled the question as far as the council was concerned.

Hartley in Splendid Trim; Will Probably be Favorite

Special to the Review.

Toronto, November 22.—Dave Hartley, the veteran pedestrian, is in the best of condition for his contest with Reynolds on Saturday. He is feeling and looking well, has perfect wind and his feet are in splendid shape. He has been training faithfully and with the greatest of care and should be the favorite in the betting when he and the Port Hope barber toe the scratch for one of the most interesting and unique athletic events ever held in this city. The match is the talk of Toronto and an immense crowd will be on hand when the event is pulled off.

IS HARD AT IT.

The News says:—David Hartley, the Peterborough pedestrian, who is to meet Jimmy Reynolds, the Port Hope walking barber, at Mutual street rink on Saturday in a twelve-hour walking match, is training hard at Woodbine and though the track was heavy he was out for a long tramp this morning. Yesterday he covered fifteen miles on the road and is confident that he will beat the Port Hope man.

Reynolds is expected in Toronto today. He has been doing his training at Port Hope, but will put on the finishing touches here, probably at Exhibition track.

A Port Hope despatch says that he covered twelve miles recently in two hours, while the best time made by Hartley in his training was about 5 1-2 miles an hour.

HARTLEY NOT TREATED WELL

A local sport expresses the opinion that Hartley has been shamefully treated by the people of this city, and said th epoorest kind of sporting spirit has been shown by them. He thinks they should have provided him with a trainer for his hard walking match with Reynolds on Saturday night, and shown their appreciation of his recent magnificent showing by giving him the greatest financial support.

How the Locals are Situated

Peterborough iss in quite a predicament at present. The team is considering whether or not it would be advisable to play Montreal a week from Saturday for the Dominion championship. The interprovincial champions are under the ban of the C.A.A.U., and yet the O.R.F.U. has ordered Peterborough to play with them for the championship. The question is, can the team afford to ignore the C.A.A.U. and run its neck into the noose by meeting Montreal? While the players are naturally anxious to get a chance to try for the laurels, the old saw, "discretion is better part of valor," seems particularly applicable to the situation.

BURN NOT SICK; SIMPLY SCARED

Art Burns, the Calgary runner, who shouted from the housetops for a chance to meet Tom Longboat, and then funked when he was given the chance, and said he was ill, is running regularly out West. He will give P. Terwash, a Claresholm runner, a minute's start in five miles indoors at Calgary this week, and on Christmas day will run in a Vancouver five-mile race. —Toronto Star.

THE TURF

Alex. Cormack, the Canadian jockey, will return from France in the first or second week in December. He will conduct a racing stable next season and has purchased a farm of over 100 acres for that purpose within a mile of Woodstock, his home town.

THE RING

Squires, the Australian pugilist, who made a poor impression in his bout with Tommy Burns, will be given a chance to meet Jim Flynn or Bob Ward, at Colma, Cal.

BASEBALL

It is stated that Joe Kelly, last season's manager of the Toronto ball team, will enter politics. The voting game, like baseball, is often a paying one, but the money's not as sure in the former as in the latter.

Would Like to Enter Junior City League Should One be Formed

Will there be a junior City League in Peterborough this winter? There has been talk of organizing a junior branch of the league and the idea seems an excellent one. A junior city league should flourish here and there is all kind of material for junior teams. The formation of the junior department would do much to encourage hockey as there are doubtless many teams that would play should one be organized that otherwise would not get into the game at all.

In case a junior city league is formed the Rough Riders who have organized under most favorable auspices will be willing to enter a team. The above aggregation has some good material from which to pick a seven and have showed their determination of chasing the puck by electing their officers and choosing their colors for the coming season. Their organization meeting was held at the Y.M.C.A. and the election of officers resulted as follows:

Manager.—Mr. W. F. Cahill.
Hon.-Pres.—Mr. W. G. Morrow,
President.—Mr. John Crane.
Sec.-Tres.—Mr. E. J. Pugh,
Capt.—Mr. F. L. Gineux.
Executive committee.—Messrs. A. H. Cameron, E. J. Pugh and W. F. Cahill.

The colors will be brown, white and blue and the team will be known as the "Rough Riders of Peterborough."

JUNIOR CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

The question of organizing a junior branch of the City Hockey League, is one of great importance, and now is the time that the question should be considered. If some one would take the initiative there seems no reason why a successful organization meeting could not be held.

EXECUTIVE AND THE TEAM MEET

Nothing Was Done in the Matter of Game With Montreal

A meeting of the Executive of the Rugby Club and the members of the team was held at the Oriental last night. Owing to the fact that the attendance was too small to be representative nothing definite was decided concerning the question of sending a team to Montreal to play in the finals for the Dominion championship.

The following accurate note is from the Brockville Times:—There is little likelihood of a game between Ottawa College and Peterborough for the amateur championship of Canada. College has a bunch of men in the hospital, and the players have had a hard season. Then Peterborough on the other hand, has made no move toward challenging.

FEAR OF THE FOREST.

The Feeling That Comes When One Finds Himself Lost.

One must be independent to enjoy the vast freedom of the woods, mighty and protecting, yet unfettering, gathering myriads of living things in safety within their shelter. It is a wonderful experience—and familiarity cannot lessen the wonder of it—to choose some unfrequented trail that the forest has half reclaimed and follow it for a time, then suddenly to stop and listen. The underbrush, the trees, the broken thread of path, which had seemed only to echo our footsteps and frame a human form, now in our silence give forth all the voices of the woods, elusive, intermittent, but alive—life everywhere, whispering warning of an interloper who may have come for evil or for good, and one feels without seeing myriad eyes upon him.

Have you ever been afraid in the woods? Not that mysterious awe of the first twilights that all know who have camped, when the silence is absolute, when shadows have swallowed up the distance and the light has almost faded from the sky, when one feels dimly the vast, latent power of nature around him with which some time or other he must struggle and conquer or be crushed. This fear of the forest was different. I was alone and lost. I had taken a false trail at some unblazed turn and of a sudden realized the truth. For a long moment I could think of nothing, see nothing, hear nothing, only be conscious of the fact of my utter helplessness. I felt the heart deadening panic of the trapped animal, wanting to run against my barriers on every side. Only a moment, I say, and then my reason was alert to solve the problem of return. But the mental experience left a vivid impression, and I can understand the despair of the really lost, wandering endlessly in aimless circles.—Outing Magazine.

Firstborns Will Agree.

They were discussing the law of entail—the English law bequeathing the bulk of the family property to the eldest son.

"There is 50 per cent of logic in that law," said a physician, "and if the family property went to the firstborn, whether son or daughter, the law would contain 100 per cent of logic. For the firstborn child is practically always the best—best in brain, in build, in beauty, in everything."—Atlanta Constitution.

Dangerous Combination.

Campbellford Men Viewing Power Houses of Peterboro'

A deputation from the Campbellford town council was in the city today viewing the power houses and water privileges of the C.G.E. Company, the Otonabee Power Company and the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

The visitors were Reeve J. A. Irwin, Town Clerk E. C. Westlake, Mr. C. U. Peeling, electrical engineer, and Councillors Thos. Tait, S. J. Abernethy, Arthur Graham, C. E. Dunk and H. Redden

Yesterday the deputation was at Fenelon Falls and Lindsay on a similar mission. The members returned to Campbellford this afternoon. The town owns the water power at Middle Falls, situated about 2 1-2 miles above Campbellford, on the Trent River, and has let the construction of the raceway and power house to Messrs. Bogue & Buchanan. It is the intention of the town to ultimately develop 5,000 horse power. Already contracts for $60,000 have been let for development purposes, and it is calculated that this expenditure will result in 1,250 horse power being available by June next.

Reeve Irwin stated to the Review today that the town was enthusiastic over the municipal power problem, and in a few months would be in a position to furnish electrical energy to industries at a low rate.

Toronto Central to Send Runner

Will be Represented in Special Three Mile Race at Indoor Meet

Everything is coming along swimmingly for the big athletic meet to be held in Bruk street rink on Tuesday evening, December 3rd. Word has been received from the physical director of the Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto, that they were holding a meeting in a few days to select a representative for the special three mile race, the entries for which will be one man from the Irish-Canadians, The West End Y.M.C.A., the Central Y.M.C.A. and Peterboro Y.M.C.A. It is likely that Jack Tait or Lawson will represent the West End Y.M.C.A. in this event. Lawson was the third man in the Hamilton Herald race, and Tait gave Longboat a bad scare in the 15 mile race at Montreal On King's birthday. Either Sellen or Coley will represent the Irish Canadians, and the Peterborough Harriers will rely on Ernie Wilson to pull out a victory.

Busy Season at Lovesick Lock

Lockmaster McFarlane in the City on Way to Bobcaygeon

Mr. Wm. McFarlane, Lockmaster and Caretaker of the Lock at Lovesick Lock was in town today on his way to Bobcaygeon where he will spend the winter.

Mr. McFarlane had just finished the busiest season in connection with the Lovesick Lock. The detailed account of the traffic through the Lock will, along with other reports, be given out from the Superintendent's office in the course of a few days However, Mr. McFarlane states that this season's lockages totalled more than the previous year, and that the steamer "Ogemah" passed through Lovesick Lock 164 times.

Considerable repairs were done to Lovesick Dam this Fall. The Dam was retrofit from the water line up, the old timber in the piers was taken out and replaced with new timber. The Dam is now as good as ever. An excellent job has been done.

Whole Empire Was Shaken by an Earthquake

(Special to the Review)

Tokio, Nov. 22—The entire empire was shaken by an earthquake early to-day.

Reports have been received from as far north as Nokkaido, the northernmost island of the Archipelago, and from as far south as the Bonn islands to the southeast of Kinshiu, the most southerly of the Japanese provinces.

More than one thousand miles of coast is embraced in the area affected. No damage was done in Tokio, but full reports have not yet been received from many cities and much uneasiness is felt.

Lift Lock Tent Meets To-night

Provincial Commander Trussler Will be in Attendance

An important meeting of Lift Lock Tent Knights of the Maccabees will be held in the Orange Hall, Simcoe street, to-night. Provincial Commander F. W. Trussler, of Port Huron, will be present and will deliver an address, and there will be several candidates initiated. Members of Peterborough Tent K. O. T M. are especially invited.

Young Man Seriously ill With Lockjaw

Mr. J. H. Cleary, of Millbrook, was brought to the city last evening and taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering from lockjaw. The young man received a cut on his arm some time ago which developed into lockjaw. Dr. Dr. Galavin is attending him. Owing to the seriousness of the disease slight hopes are held out for his recovery.

Good Solid Work Done at Y.M.C.A.

Interesting and Encouraging Reports Presented Last Night

A meeting of all the committees of the Y.M.C.A. was held last night in the club rooms of the Association, and a very pleasant time spent.

Dr. J. Middleton occupied the chair, and in his opening remarks referred to the junior department, of which he is chairman. The rooms downstairs are being fixed up for the boys with new games, and each room being overhauled and put in better shape. Bible study club will be organized in the near future, and it is expected the boys' work will boom. Mr. Bruce Walton rendered a piano solo and Mr. Chas. Coleman a vocal solo, in a pleasing manner.

Mr. J. F. Thornton, chairman of the Religious Work Committee, gave an account of the work of this department of the Association, which was quite encouraging. The meetings on Sunday afternoon are continuing in interest, and fine programmes are being arranged for future meetings. Messrs. C. E. Sission and W. Shiner gave good reports for the Educational Department, the Debating Club being especially successful and showing greater interest each meeting. Their schedule of meetings will probably have to be changed to get in more meetings on account of the crub. Mr. Shiner also reported re the Bible study department. It is now hoped to have more men interested in this work and new classes formed.

Mr. H. Cook gave an encouraging report for the Visiting Committee and work of the Strangers' Fellowship Club. Mr. Charles Coleman, chairman of the Social Committee, gave an outline of several events planned for this winter, and stated that the Social Committee was to be increased to 21 members to make the work of this department larger and more comprehensive.

Mr. G. L. Galley reported for the Physical Committee, which showed the work in this department to be aggressive and very encouraging.

Mr. Richard Parker reported favorably for the Membership Committee, and also gave a word or two in the interest of the Harrier Club.

Others present who spoke were Messrs. W. G. McKee, Fred Hall, N. Perry, J. Evans, and George Martin.

The Secretary, Mr. H. C. Wright, stated he was pleased to see the interest taken in each department by the men on the different committees, and was sure the work was going to grow in every way.

Refreshments were then served and a social half hour enjoyed. It has been decided by the Social Committee to open the Y.M.C.A. reception room and parlor for an hour on Sunday evening from 8.30 to 9.30 for an hour of sacred music, in which every member or stranger, or any man is invited to join. The hymns which will be sung will be familiar to all.

There was a large intermediate class of employed boys in the gymnasium last night, showing more interest in this department.

The Commission Grants Permission for Crossing

The Railway Commission has granted the city permission to extend George street across the Grand Trunk Belleville line at the south end of the city. In the extension of George-st. it was necessary to have a crossing over the railway track and the matter was referred to the Railway Commission. The latter sent their engineer to Peterborough and he made a report on the matter.

The City Council has been notified by the Commission that the crossing can be put in and the street extended across the track. The maintenance of the crossing is to be borne equally by the city and railway.

Nothing has yet been heard regarding the Grand Trunk's application for permission to put in two new sidings east of Bethune street. A decision in this matter is expected in a few days.

"The Rogue's March" Hinges Upon Mystery of Absorbing Nature

Story of Adventure of Sacrifice and Faithful Love by Mr. E. W. Hornung Which Begins in To-day's Review—A Tale That Encharms the Interest of the Reader.

It is entitled "The Rogue's March," and is copyrighted by Charles Scribner's Sons.

The Review has secured the exclusive control of this absorbing narrative in Peterborough and a generous installment will appear from day to day.

The author is Mr. E. W. Hornung, whose production, "Raffles, the amateur Cracksman," "Stingaree" and other stories have won for him a world wide reputation. Mr. Hornung is the most popular present day writer of fiction. The story "The Rogue's March," is a remarkable piece of work. It hinges upon an absorbing mystery, which the reader will almost certainly fail to fathom until the secret is revealed by the author in its proper place. It is a tale of many adventures, of sacrifice and of faithful love; of an heroic soul wronged, degraded, embruted and yet not lost—a story which enchains the interest of the reader to the last line, and which he will never forget. Read the opening chapters in to-day's Review.

An Address on "Wonders of Water"

Interesting Experiments Conducted by Mr. F. Russell.

A large number of adults, as well as a great many boys, heard the lecture last evening by Mr. F. Russell on the "Wonders of Water," held at Knox Church. Rev. Henry J. Keith occupied the chair and, previous to the lecture, a vocal solo was given by Master Harold Hatcher. He was forced to respond to an encore.

Mr. Russell in his lecture illustrated many interesting experiments, showing what marvelous things could be done with water. Burning water and boiling it with ice and many other astounding things illustrative of its properties were shown.

Millbrook Man Had Close Call

Gas From Furnace Burned Him About the Face.

Mr. J. R Eakins, of Millbrook, while attending to his furnace on Saturday had a narrow escape from being severely injured. On opening the door the accumulated gas from the coal burst forth and knocked Mr. Eakins back against the wall, and shattered the lamp which he carried; his moustache and eyebrows were singed, but fortunately escaped further injury.

Steamship Movements

The Review has made arrangements with the C.P.R. Telegraph Company whereby the sailing and arrival of the boats of the Canadian and British ports will be published. This feature will be especially interesting to the large number of people in Peterborough who have recently come out from the old land.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 22.—Empress of Ireland landed 65 first, 125 second and a large number of third class at noon to-day.

Montreal, Nov. 22.—Empress of Ireland docked and landed her passengers at West St. John at noon to-day.

Liverpool, Nov. 23 — Empress of Britain arrived at Liverpool at 2 a.m.

Arrangements For Newsboys' Supper

Turkey Will Be the Chief Item on the Bill of Fare

Arrangements are coming along splendidly for the newsboys' supper, to be given in Gospel Hall on the evening of December 30th. All the newsboys in the city who sell any kind of paper or periodical will be invited and it is expected that scores of boys will partake of the hospitality of those who are providing the supper. Turkey will be the chief item on the bill of fare and there will be plenty of other good things.

You have heard the Sailor Boys' plea, buy to-day for your dinner to-morrow "Sailor Boy" Canned Goods, Tomatoes, Corn, Peas and Salmon. Your money does not buy better Goods. Do you get "Sailor Boy" or substitute?

Work Scarce But Laborers Plenty

Many Men Are Looking for Work —A Case in Point

Laborers are plenty and work is scarce in Peterborough at the present time. A prominent contractor stated yesterday that a far less amount of construction work was going on at the present time than at the same period a year ago and that there were many men who were not working.

The fact that there are many laborers without employment was shown this week when the Bell Telephone Company commenced work on the completion of the undergrounding of their wires. They only needed about twenty men but nearly a hundred applied for jobs.

It is stated that outside work of all kinds is slacker than last year, and there will be some people in the city pretty hard up before the winter is over.

Lakefield Dock Not Yet Fixed Up

"News" Says it is Standing Disgrace to the Village

The Lakefield News says:—Although the traffic to Stoney Lake has been over now for some time, nothing has as yet been done towards fixing up the Government dock at Lakefield. Last spring the Board of Trade made a move in the matter and it was reported that the dock would be repaired in a short time. How was it that the matter was allowed to drop? The dock is one of the most important parts of the village, and the thousands of tourists who travel to Stoney Lake, have to wade ankle deep in mud to reach the boats. It is a standing disgrace to any self-respecting community, and the Council and the Board of Trade should memorialize the Government with a view to having the dock repaired before traffic commences next summer.

Conservative Convention Likely to be Called at an Early Date—Some Excellent Representative Men Who are Spoken of as Candidates — Prospects Bright for Redeeming the Riding.

It is understood that the executive of the Young Conservative Club and the Liberal-Conservative Association of the West Riding of Peterborough, will meet in a few days to consider the advisability of holding a convention at an early date to nominate a candidate for the federal house.

There are excellent prospects of redeeming the riding if a standard bearer is placed in the field at once and the party organization strengthened, the voters lists properly looked after etc.

Several well known representative men are spoken of as likely candidates and whoever is the choice of the party will enter upon the work with energy and determination to once more place the riding in the Conservative column and on the side of decent, honest and clean government. The candidate will be warmly supported and will put up an aggressive campaign, leaving no stone unturned to secure his election. With a strong, united move the mistake of 1904 will be rectified and West Peterborough will send a representative to uphold Mr. R. L. Borden, the popular Conservative leader, and his wise, progressive and statesmanlike policy.

As Mr. Borden pointed out in his address in the Grand opera house in September last, the defeat in West Peterborough in 1904 were not due to popular sentiment, but rather to lack of organization and delay in placing a candidate in the field. With the progressive platform laid down by Mr. Borden at Halifax, with plain methods and perfect organization victory is assured in the contest which it is expected will follow shortly after the close of the coming session of parliament, which opens on Thursday next. It is not expected by those in a position to know that the session will not last more than six months.

Among those who in all likelihood will allow their names to go before the convention are Mr. J. W. Garvin, who was an aggressive candidate for the provincial house ten years ago, Mr. J. H. Burnham, ex-president of the Young Conservative Club, Ald. Harry Phelan, a strenuous worker in the Conservative interests, and Mr. James Kendry, ex-M.P., the hero of many a fight and the present president of the Liberal-Conservative Association.

Other names are also spoken of. It is certain, whoever captures the convention will be loyally supported by the rank and file and will be spiritedly upheld in winning West Peterborough from the enemy and once more rolling up a big majority for the grand old Conservative cause.

Japan launched a new cruiser yesterday 37 which all the material was of Japanese make, and now she is offering to rebuild the Spanish navy cheaper than it can be done elsewhere.

ALL RUN DOWN
Weak---Nervous---Unstrung.

Thousands get run down and become invalids before they realize anything is wrong. By permitting low vitality to develop, the way is paved for fevers, pneumonia and diphtheria. To put off makes it all the harder to get well. The time to repair the system is right now, before the damage gets any worse. The remedy is Ferrozone; it revitalizes, renews, builds up vitality that outlasts old age.

FERROZONE is a genuine invigorator that banishes weakness, and instils surplus force and vigor into every organ of the body. Ferrozone sharpens the appetite, produces rich nutritious blood, and thereby contributes that sense of buoyancy that adds so enormously to one's pleasure and usefulness in life.

For all forms of debility, weakness, lack of blood or nerve tone, sleeplessness, tiredness and exhaustion, there is no medicine so vitalizing and potent as Ferrozone. Even one trial demonstrates its rapidly and certainty of action.

To restore the energy of youth, to get back your vital stamina and reserve force, there is positively no treatment so certain as Ferrozone. You have only to try Ferrozone to know the enormous benefit it invariably brings to all in poor health.

FERROZONE

Miss Dorothy E. Leduc of Chester gives the following convincing evidence of Ferrozone's power:—"My work compels me to rise early in the morning and work ten hours daily as a saleslady. Last Spring I was run down, lost my color, and fell off in weight. I seemed to lack ambition and the life was out of me. A friend recommended Ferrozone, and I took one tablet after meals with wonderful results. Ferrozone brought back my complexion, and has given me new strength and abundance of energy and spirits. I would advise all young ladies to use Ferrozone."

Mrs. H. G. Wilder of Dexter says:—"My daughter was not very well last Winter, and lost her strength completely when the Spring came. I gave her Ferrozone, and am glad to say it did wonders. After six boxes were used my daughter was strong, and looked the picture of health."

Gave New Strength

FERROZONE

WARNING—Beware of any substitute for Ferrozone; it alone can cure you. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine, only in 50c boxes containing 50 chocolate-coated tablets. By mail to any address if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., or Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

KIDNAPPED BY POLICE

AMAZING STORY OF ALLEGED MAN THEFT IN S. AFRICA.

Caught Hottentot Boy by Stratagem—Had Fled to British Territory For Protection—Handed Lad Over to Germans Who Tied Prisoner to Wagon Wheel and Afterwards Shot Him.

An amazing story of alleged man theft is told in the weekly edition of The Cape Times.

Two privates in the Cape Mounted Police have been retried at Cape Town on the charge of having stolen Jan Gertse, a Hottentot, and of handed him over to the Germans, by whom he was shot.

The men charged are named Ulrici, a German by birth, but now a naturalized British subject, and Gronbeck, who was born at Cape Town, but of Danish descent.

Gertse it was stated, was in the German service, and had rebelled against following the German military operations, fleeing for safety over the border into British territory.

A dramatic story was told by a Hottentot trooper in the Cape Mounted Police of how Gronbeck and Ulrici met Gertse in British territory. They demanded the Hottentot boy's pass.

Then they arrested Gertse and took him to Biejespoort police station. He was not put into the cells, but placed in the kitchen for the night. In the morning, continued the witness, Gertse had disappeared. He and another Hottentot boy then set out, and by means of the trail of boot marks traced the accused and Gertse.

A Kaffir boy, who was in the service of the Germans at the time, gave evidence that Ulrici brought Gertse into the German camp on the evening of Sunday, April 20. He was bound and huddled up in a cart. Ulrici spoke to the sergeant in charge in German, and the prisoner was taken from the cart and tied to a wagon wheel. The next morning Sergt. Marchansen handed the witness a gun and told him to shoot the prisoner.

The Kaffir boy refused, and the sergeant called up two other boys. Gertse was made to walk between two horses, and shortly afterward witness heard the sound of a shot. He ran up and found Gertse dead, with a bullet wound in his head.

Later he saw Ulrici come into the camp again, go into the sergeant's office, and return, counting money.

The defence claimed that the evidence was untrue and the jury disagreed for the second time.

Smoking For a Piano.

"Get ready! One, two, three—go!"

A hundred and fifty anxious smokers sat at tables at the Agricultural Hall recently, surrounded by a crowd, and at the word "Go!" there was a volley of match-striking sounding like rifle-shooting at a distance.

Each competitor was given an eighth of an ounce of shag tobacco, and a thirty-guinea grand piano was offered to the smoker of the last pipe to go out.

At first it was not a very serious affair. Several pipes went out within five minutes, and there was a good deal of laughter and ironical applause. But after about an hour, when quite fifty had given up, it became more serious.

At an hour and three-quarters only two were left. One, a young man, was smoking a new 4d. clay, and the other—a man of forty-three—an old shilling briar. The merest streak of smoke came from the pipes, and the judges had to look closely to see whether they were alight.

In another five minutes the clay went out. Mr. Thomas Wood, a Peckham painter, was still cheerfully smoking, and when he knew that he had won he puffed out great clouds of smoke. He kept his pipe alight for two hours, and beat last year's winner by eighteen minutes.

"Put my success down," he said, "to filling my pipe carefully and pressing the tobacco down with a pencil. I have not practiced, and I immensely enjoyed my two hours' smoke."

India's New Coin.

India has now a one anna piece. It is a remarkable fact that, although the anna is the unit of calculation in most small financial transactions in India, a one anna piece has hitherto been non-existent. The only approach to it was the 1-1-6 rupee issued by the old East India Company.

The new coin, which is a very handsome one, is made of nickel, and possesses two novel features. It is not a plain circle, but is rosette-shaped with indented edges, so that in the dark it can easily be distinguished from other coins; and its value is expressed in five different languages.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER.

Appears First In King's Birthday Honor List as Privy Councilor.

The Government decided not to recommend any appointment to the House of Lords during the agitation against the Upper House. The recent list of honors on the occasion of the King's birthday was a comparatively short one. Sir Charles Tupper, the

He has been made a Privy Councillor and Mr. Robert Miller Coulter was given the order of C. M. G., of which Mr. Charles Moss is made a Knight Bachelor.

The distinction bestowed on Sir Charles Tupper is the fifth to be given to a Canadian, Sir John A. Macdonald being the first.

REVEALED IN A DREAM.

A dream that came true led to Mrs. Lizzie Kirton obtaining a decree in the Divorce Court, London, recently.

Mrs. Kirton married Frederick Johnston Kirton in 1890, at Peterborough. He left her in 1896 and went to South Africa, where he served through the Boer war.

After the war he was stationed at Gibraltar, and there he met a nurse, Miss Emily Liddell. He proposed to her, stating that he was a widower, and they went through the ceremony of marriage. He bought his discharge from the army and became a caretaker at Middleton Hall, near King's Lynn.

One night while they were living there the second Mrs. Kirton had a mysterious dream. She thought her husband's first wife came to her bedside and told her that she was still alive.

So vivid was the dream that in the morning she related it to Mr. Kirton and taxed him with having deceived her. He admitted that his first wife was still alive, but pleaded with her to continue to live with him.

Some time afterward he was arrested on another charge, and confessed that he had committed bigamy. He was convicted and sentenced to ten months' imprisonment.

In granting a decree the judge expressed the hope that Mr. Kirton would now go through a legal ceremony of marriage with the woman he had deceived.

It was stated that he had written from prison promising to do so.

SHRIEKING SISTERHOOD.

Suffragettes Annoy Liberals and Break Up Political Meetings.

London, Nov. 23.—With the resumption of the political campaign which is now in full swing, "the shrieking sisterhood," as the women suffragists have come to be commonly known, are actively pursuing their threatened plan of upsetting all Liberal meetings.

Gatherings at which members of the Cabinet are to speak are especially selected by them. The victims last week were Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Premier, and Herbert H. Asquith, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Both these speakers had difficulty in getting a hearing.

Thursday night Herbert Gladstone, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, and David Lloyd-George, President of the Board of Trade, speaking respectively at Leeds and Glasgow, were similarly treated, and a number of the suffragists had to be ejected from the meetings.

EXCITEMENT IN PORTUGAL.

Will Not Tolerate Dictatorship of Premier Franco.

Lisbon, Nov. 23.—The excitement here, caused by resentment against the dictatorship of Premier Franco, is increasing among the members of the Republican opposition, and is extending to other circles.

The Government threatens to proclaim martial law at the first outbreak, and the troops have been confined to their barracks in readiness to suppress rioting. Four additional newspapers have been suppressed, and the police continue making arrests.

Petition For Stephens.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—Mayor Lawrence and Thomas Crothers of St. Thomas waited on Solicitor-General Bureau Thursday to ask for the release from prison of Murray Stephens, a Wabash locomotive engineer, now under sentence to six months' imprisonment for criminal negligence in causing the fatal railway wreck at the diamond crossing, near St. Thomas, some time ago. A petition praying for his release, signed by about 1,000 St. Thomas residents, was presented by a deputation, who urged that Stephens had not been wittingly negligent and had been punished with undue severity. The Justice Department will enquire into the facts of the case before a decision is given.

Arrested For Manslaughter.

Brockville, Nov. 23—Anthony Smithers, a farmer residing near Black Lake, across the river from here, has been arrested on a warrant charging him with manslaughter, in being responsible for the death of his son, Wesley, to whom he administered tincture of aconite, believing it to be a good remedy for the boy's illness, but which, it is alleged, caused his death. Mr. Smithers, on being arraigned before a magistrate, waived examination and gave bail for his appearance before the next grand jury.

Indian Strike Ended.

Calcutta, Nov. 23.—The strike of the employes of the East Indian Railway at Asansol, Bengal, at the junction of the East Indian and Bengal-Nagpur Railway, collapsed yesterday with the summary dismissal of some of the European leaders of the movement.

A number of the engineers promptly resumed work, and traffic which had been at a standstill for a week was re-started.

Cutting Costs of Radium.

Vienna, Nov. 23.—Great success has attended the experiments to cheapen the cost of the production of radium, which have been made at the imperial academy of sciences of Vienna.

Nearly three grains of radium have been extracted from ten thousand kilos of pitchblend at one-third the cost of previous production.

It was estimated not long ago that an ounce would cost not less than $3,000,000.

Terribly Scalded.

Kingston, Nov. 23.—Wade Smith was horribly scalded at the Cotton Mill at noon. He went to the boiler room to eat lunch, and had just seated himself when a pipe broke and boiling steam enveloped him. He was pulled away. His clothes had to be cut off, and with them came steamed flesh. He is now in the hospital in a critical condition. Smith is an Englishman.

Ice-Crusher Damaged.

Quebec, Nov. 23.—The Canadian Government steamship Montcalm, which grounded Thursday at the new Marconi station on the north shore, is now at anchor at Point Amour. She is making water badly.

Kept a Gambling House.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—Denis Charlebois, a Broad street merchant who has a contract for supplies to immigrants, was fined $50 and costs yesterday for keeping a gambling house in connection with his premises.

Murdered and Placed on Track.

Burlington, N. J., Nov. 23.—E. S. Jefferson, a well-to-do grocer, was murdered shortly before midnight on Thursday night, near his home. He was strangled, his body stripped of all valuables, and then placed on the railroad tracks.

No Cars For Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 23.—The opening of the electric street railroad lines in this city has been delayed indefinitely owing to the suspension of the credit of the Russian Westinghouse concern.

Blinded by Molten Brass.

Morrisburg, Nov. 23.—Hubert Hughes was badly burned and will probably lose his eyesight as a result of the explosion of a pot of molten brass in the foundry here yesterday.

Forming the Cabinet.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 23.—(C. A. P.)—Fischer is forming a Cabinet, which will probably include Messrs. Dewitt and Hertzog.

ROBBED TOULON EXPRESS.

Entered Baggage Car Shot Down Guards and Escaped.

Etampes, Department of the Seine et Oise, France, Nov. 23.—Three highwaymen Thursday night robbed the Toulon Express near here after the most approved Jesse James fashion. They entered the baggage car, shot down the guards, seized the cash boxes and jumped off at the next station. An alarm was given and the robbers were pursued, but they escaped in an automobile held by waiting comrades.

Grain Shipments Decrease.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—A report to the Trade and Commerce Department from Warehouse Commissioner Castle of Winnipeg states that shipments of grain by vessels from Port Arthur and Fort William during the months of September and October totaled 8,882,755 bushels of wheat, a decrease of 2,231,455 bushels as compared with same months of last year; 806,771 bushels of oats, a decrease of 274,388 bushels; 263,642 bushels of barley, a decrease of 80,777 bushels.

Cattle Ate Poisonous Weeds.

Brockville, Nov. 23.—William Richardson, a farmer living on the River road, near Ogdensburg, lost three cows in a mysterious manner. Two were found dead in the pasture and a third sickened and died. An examination disclosed that the cattle had eaten a poisonous weed, presumably along the shore of the river. An ox, owned by Mr. Richardson, is also afflicted, and will probably die.

Too Free With a Gun.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—A man, who gave his name as Anderson, and stated that he came from Nebraska, went up to the telegraph wicket at the Place Viger station and pointed a revolver at the clerk's head, saying he would blow his head off if he did not hand him over $200. He was arrested.

Prize Cup Held For Duty.

The Great Walking Contest; Hartley is Leading Reynolds

Peterborough Man Keeps Increasing His Lead—Contest Will Finish at 11 O'clock To-night—Great Interest in the Result

At 3.30 o'clock Hartley had made 23 miles and Reynolds 22 miles and ten laps. Fifteen laps of Mutual street rink make a mile. Reynolds is therefore five laps behind—one-third of a mile. Contest ends at 11 o'clock to-night.

An athletic event that is creating great excitement and interest not only in these parts but all over the province, and to a great extent in the Dominion as well, is the Hartley-Reynolds twelve hour walking contest which was started at the Mutual st. rink, Toronto, at 11a.m. this morning. Hartley, the local hero, has been making a splendid showing and from the latest returns at the time this article was written leads the Port Hope pedestrian by five laps, having covered 15 miles and 13 laps from the time the race commenced until 2 o'clock this afternoon. At 12.30 Hartley was 6 laps in the lead and had made 9 miles and 8 laps. At 1.45 Hartley still led by three laps and both men were going strong.

The chances for the Peterborough walking wonder winning seem to be good, although Reynolds is a strong and fast man and it is impossible to predict at this stage how the contest will end. Hartley seems to be steadily pulling away from his opponent, but it may be part of Reynold's game to allow Hartley to set quite a pace at the start. If he is holding back in the hope of overcoming the Peterborough walker in the last stage of the race it may be poor generalship on his part as Hartley is noted for being a very strong finisher. Hartley's lead, however, is not what might be considered a particularly large one as he leads by only a third of a mile, there being fifteen laps to the mile in the course at Mutual street rink. A great deal of local interest is being displayed in the event and many people have watched the different bulletins put out by the Review in the front of the office. The bulletin service will be continued until the conclusion of the race.

Records of the Two Walkers

Toronto, Nov. 23.—12 hour walking race at Mutual street rink between David Hartley of Peterborough, and Jimmy Reynolds, Port Hope's walking barber, will start at 11 a.m. today, and will end at 11 o'clock at night. The match will be the square heel and toe, and Tom Eck, the famous trainer, and who is an old-time walker himself, and who has had many years' experience in matches of this kind, has agreed to act as referee.

The men have decided to walk on the bare floor, and have asked the management not to lay the track which they had intended putting down around the sides of the rink.

Invitations have been issued to all who took part in the recent ladies walking race to witness the event.

The record of the men follows:

REYNOLDS.		HARTLEY.
Occupation.		Barber.
Age		54 years.
Height		5 feet 4 1-2 in.
Weight		140 lbs.
Stride		36 ins.
Residence		Port Hope,

Peterboro,'

Last June, in his first attempt to walk the round trip from Port Hope to Toronto and return, Reynolds gave out at Newcastle, with 5 1-2 hours left to complete the remaining twenty off miles. On October 21 last he covered the round trip in 36 hours and 19 minutes.

Twenty-five years ago, in a sack race, he went 100 yards in 13 1-4 seconds, and followed this by covering 10 miles in a sack in two hours.

Several years later he made $800 by going a mile in a sack in seven minutes.

His best training performance for his race today was 12 miles, heel and toe, in two hours.

HARTLEY'S PERFORMANCES.

Hartley is also an old-time athlete, being both a long distance runner and walker.

Twenty-six years ago in a go-as-you-please race at twelve hours a day for three days he covered 155 miles.

A year later he made 165 miles in the same kind of a race at Lindsay against one Pnouard, who quit on the second day, Hartley finishing alone.

On Civic Holiday last he walked from Peterborough to Bailieboro and back a distance of 34 miles, in five hours 48 mins. His next performance followed the Reynolds Port Hope to Toronto walk in October, the Peterborough man traveling from Oshawa to Toronto, to Port Hope, to Peterborough, a distance of 132 miles, in 24 hours and 6 mins.

BEER* IS GOOD TO ENRICH THE BLOOD

Because beer, so drank, actually supplies the food elements that make the blood rich. Also beer assists the stomach in getting all the good possible out of all the food that enters it.

*BEER is a term which covers lager, ales, porter and stout, and, in the practice of Ontario brewers, implies beverages made under most hygienic conditions, from Ontario barley (the best in the world) malt, hops, and pure water. 103

Obtained Prizes in Gentleman's Contest at Roller Rink Last Night

In the contest for gentlemen in couples at the roller rink last night, Messrs. Fred Hickey and Cecil Kylie were the lucky competitors, each being given a pair of gold cuff links. There about fifty couples on the floor and the judges had a difficult task to choose the prize winners. The judges were Messrs. Bailie, Archie Moore, and B. Cort, Chicago.

Next week will be the last week of roller skating this season.

Major Simcoe at S. A. Barracks

Head of War Cry Staff Will Deliver Three Addresses To-morrow

Major Simcoe, head of the editorial staff of the "War Cry," will be here to-night and will be extended a welcome at the meeting of the local Salvation Army barracks to-night. To-morrow morning at 11 o'clock she will speak at the barracks on "Higher Level Life." She will also speak in the afternoon on "Members of Quebec," and in the evening at eight o'clock will also deliver an address choosing as her subject "The Lost Speaker." Major Simcoe, who has been connected with the War Cry for the past two years, is widely and favorably known in Salvation Army circles and is not by any means a stranger to Peterborough. Some years ago Major Simcoe was Crimea officer in Quebec and her address on "Members of Quebec," should be particularly interesting.

MAKE NEW BLOOD

That Is What Dr. Williams Pink Pills Do—That Is Why They Cure so Many Diseases.

When persons have not enough blood or when their blood is weak and watery, the doctors name the trouble anaemia. Bloodlessness is the direct cause of many common diseases, even as indigestion, palpitation of the heart, debility, decline, neuralgia, nervousness, rheumatism and consumption. The surest signs of poor blood are paleness, bluish lips, cold hands and feet, general weakness, low spirits and headaches and backaches. If anaemia is not checked in time it will probably develop into sumption. There is one sure cure for anaemia—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich red blood, which fills the veins and brings new life, new energy and good health to bloodless people. In proof of this Miss Mabel Clendenning, Niagara Falls, Ont., says: "For over two years I suffered from anaemia. I was weak, thin, had no appetite. I sometimes had distressing headaches and felt low spirited. My heart would palpitate violently; I could do no work around the house. I became very pale and my nerves got unstrung. The efforts of two doctors failed to help me, I was in such a pitiful state. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I did so. Soon I saw the pills were helping me, and by the time I had taken nine boxes I was completely cured. I had a good appetite; gained in weight, I hadn't an ache or pain, could sleep well and I am in far better health now than I ever was. I cannot speak too highly of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for Miss Clendenning they have done for thousands—they will do for you. But you must get the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box. If your dealer has not got the genuine pills you can get them at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

Some Municipal Gossip of Interest to Ratepayers

Will There be Opposition to Mayor McWilliams—Present Aldermen Will Stand for Re-election—New Men Have Made Good.

The municipal elections are not much more than a month away and already considerable gossip is being heard on the street regarding prospective candidates. Just what is going to happen in connection with the mayoralty is not very clear just at present, but one thing is certain, however, and that is that Mayor McWilliams will again be a candidate for the position. Whether he will have opposition or not remains to be seen. In past years it has been the custom to give the Mayor a second term by acclamation, but there are rumors that certain citizens are anxious to bring out another candidate. Whether their plans will materialize or not is doubtful, but it is plain that if they could figure out a victory for their man he would soon be in the field.

As far as can be learned, all the present aldermen will go to the people for re-election. The majority of them are non-committal when questioned regarding their intentions, but they do not say that they will not be candidates. That there will be an election for aldermen seems certain. Gossip has it that ex-Ald. Robert Hicks and ex-Ald. E. S. Mason will present themselves for election to the aldermanic board after a year's absence from the city hall. Both men did excellent work while in the council and would no doubt poll a large vote if they decided to let their names go on the ballots.

It is the general opinion that the three new men who entered municipal life last year, Ald. Monrow, Stevenson and Bradburn, have made good and they will be pressed hard again. If Ashburnham desires to have a representative in the City Council the ratepayers of that ward should come to some agreement whereby they would have only one candidate for the aldermanic board. If two or more men run in the fifth ward the chances of any of them being elected would be decidedly small. Ald. Morgan has been connected with the municipal affairs of Ashburnham for many years, having been a member of the village council before that ward across the river was annexed to Peterborough. He will be a candidate for re-election if his friends want him and should poll a large vote.

There seems to be a growing feeling in the city that too many changes in the council each year are not advisable. A man is not going to learn all about municipal matters in one year and unless he has several terms in the council he cannot give the most efficient service.

Mr. W. H. Hill is the retiring member of the Water Commissioners this year and he will be a candidate for re-election. At present it does not look as if he would have opposition.

Story of Domestic Troubles Told by Husband and Wife

In Police Court Yesterday Afternoon — Sad Case—Young G.T.R. Brakeman Charged With Non Support of Wife and Child

A sad case of domestic infelicity was aired in the police court yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, when Wm. McCrea, a G.T.R. brakeman, was charged with non-support of his wife and child. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for McCrea and pleaded not guilty.

His Worship endeavored to advise both parties to forgot the past, and once more try to live anew in peace and happiness, but it was impossible it seemed, McCrea firmly declining to have anything to do with the woman, apparently having had enough of married life, Mr. Gordon also tried to counsel his client to again take up with his wife, but McCrea could not see it that way, and positively assured His Worship that he would not keep her. Since it was impossible for the two to come to an agreement, the case was proceeded with. No witnesses were present, but husband and wife told their own story of the trials and tribulations of their five years of married life. Each claimed to be the aggrieved one, but after both sides of the story had been heard, His Worship reserved judgment for one week.

Mrs. McCrea went into the witness box and told a story of one endless quarrel between her and her husband. "We were married in Lindsay, on April 27th, 1901, where we resided until about two years ago, when my husband was put on a different run and we removed to Toronto. I have one child, a boy six months old, said the witness. She said she had been separated from her husband on four different occasions, on account of abuse, she claimed, from her husband. Last June witness said that she left him to come to this city to visit her parents, intending to return after she had regained her strength, as she had been ill. "On several occasions I went to the old depot as he was passing through, and begged of him to take me back," said the complainant, but he always said, "I don't know you." For the past five months the woman and child have been dependant on her father for a living. She admitted always having got enough to eat, but claimed that he husband controlled all the money and bought her very little clothes.

Mr. McCrea went into the box and stated that when his wife left him last time, he entreated her not to do so. He could provide for her and his child, but when she last left him she told him "that she would like to see the wretch of a man that would boss her." He said further that she told around that she wanted him to strike her, and then she could have him arrested and he would have to support her. He said that he keep account of where all his earnings were spent, and the complainant told witness she would throw out all the groceries he brought into the house, and she would soon spend his wages for him. He said that he was tired paying bills, of which there was no need, on her account. He stated that he was willing to provide for his child, but not as long as she had him. "An illegitimate son of her's when I married her, lived with us for several moths as her brother, I had to go without an overcoat one winter to let him have it," claimed the defendant. "Bills came to me for things bought for him, and it made me mad." Witness further remarked that he was quite willing to provide a good home for his child, and in fact, give all his earnings, if it was necessary, for his keep. He was sure the other child would get the benefit of them and not his own, so would not give anything as long as she had him.

The defendant is so utterly disgusted with the past condition of affairs that he refuses to ever again live with his wife.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

His Worship could not make an amicable settlement between the two, so reserved judgment for a week.

Chinaman Attempts to Make Love to a Young Lady Clerk

Wanted Her to Marry Him and When She Refused and Ordered Him Out, He Threatened to Shoot Her—Police are on the Trail of the Celestial.

A strange Chinaman from Toronto who arrived in Peterborough a few days ago, is making trouble by attempting to force his attentions upon a young lady clerk in a George street store. He purchased some picture post cards, which he desired to present to his "lady love." Later he returned and offered her a roll of money. She refused and told him to go away. The Celestial persisted in his unwelcome advances, and asked her to marry him. She again told him to get out. He then produced a revolver and threatened to shoot her. She bravely said, "shoot," but the Chinaman left the store, saying that he would return. Next day he came in and made a similar demand about matrimony, accompanied by a like threat. The lady again ordered him away and has reported the matter to the police, who are watching Mr. Chinaman, and if he attempts to molest her any more they will probably place him under arrest.

An Enjoyable Assembly Held By the Chemong Yacht Club

Many Pretty Ladies in Beautiful Gowns Graced the Brilliant Gathering—A Social Event of Interest—The Arrangements Splendidly Carried Out.

A most enjoyable assembly was held last evening in the Conservatory of Music hall, when the Chemong Yacht Club were the hosts.

The gathering was graced by many pretty ladies in beautiful gowns and the hours were whiled away most pleasantly. The floor was in excellent condition for dancing and about seventy-five couples were present.

The Grand opera house orchestra furnished excellent music. Choice refreshments were served by Coleman Bros. The hall was artistically decorated with flags and bunting as well as by pennants won by the Chemong Yacht Club at the various regattas. The Kawartha Lake Challenge Club captured this summer by Mr. Hollingshead, also was on exhibition.

The patronesses were Mesdames T. H. G. Denne, Alex. Elliott, W. R. Huntsberry, W. H. Hill, T. A. S. Hay, L. M. Hayes, W. J. Hopwood, D. Hughes-Charles, T. F. Matthews and Dr. Young.

The committee in charge of the most successful and enjoyable event was composed of T. F. Matthews, commodore, who was chairman, W. S. Davidson, secretary, F. Sowers, Howard Hopwood, Chas. Barber and Milne Hamilton.

FIRST WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. Robert Long, on the first anniversary of his marriage, was given a pleasant surprise party at his home, Rogers street, East City, last night, when about twenty-five or thirty couples of young people of the city called upon him and his wife. A delightful supper was partaken of during the evening and dancing indulged in until after the midnight hour. Mr. and Mrs. Long received many congratulations from their friends.

RUGBY

This afternoon at Riverside Park the Crescents and the Karnots are playing for the junior city championship. The game is attracting considerable attention, and a good sized crowd should be on hand to witness the match.

A KINGSTON OPINION.

The following from the Kingston News:—

"The Limestones have filed in their efforts to put on a game with Peterborough on Saturday. Peterborough have already a game scheduled with Ottawa College for the championship of Ontario. Peterborough, it is thought here, is away out of their class in that company, and will be decisively trounced. By next Saturday the ground will probably be frozen hard and a game impossible."

From the above opinion, the Kingston Limestones must be an awfully poor aggregation. Peterborough gave Westmount a "decisive trouncing" here, and Westmount put it over the Kingstons right on their own ground. It's up to the News to "unsay them cruel words."

MARK STREET CHURCH

The evangelistic services will be continued at Mark street Methodist church tomorrow. Rev. C. H. Coon will preach.

MEN'S MEETING

The men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock will be conducted by the evangelistic band. Miss Clara Belleghem will sing, and the Y.M.C.A. quartette will also otake part.

MISSIONARY MEETING

A meeting of the United branches of the Women's Auxiliary will be held on Monday in St. John's school Mroom. Addresses by Miss Strickland from Tara Taran, India, and Miss Jones, diocesan secretary. Afternoon, 3 o'clock; evening, 8 o'clock.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box nearest to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the War number is given first, then a pause, and then thereafter the remaining numbers of the Box.

CHAS. HALCROFT RETURNS HOME

Will be Married in England—Several Bandsmen Bade Him Good-bye

On last night's C. P. R. midnight Mr Chas. Halcroft, who has been connected with the Salvation Army Band as first cornetist for the past two years, left for Montreal, and will sail from there on the S.S. Lake Erie for England. Mr. Halcroft's destination is South Shields, Tweed County, England, and the object of his visit is to take unto himself a life partner. He is not likely to return to Canada. Mr. Halcroft is an able musician and was a popular member of the band. About a dozen of his fellow bandsmen were at the station to see him off, and as the train drew out of the station played "Praise March 3" a selection from the Salvation Army repertoire of band music.

LOCAL TEAM NEEDS MONEY

May go to Montreal if Sufficient Amount is Guaranteed

Secretary T. W. McDonough, of the local rugby teams has been communicating with Montreal concerning the playing of the match between Peterborough and Montreal for the Dominion championship. The action of the locals largely depends on whether Montreal will guarantee the locals sufficient expense money. The home team needs the money and will probably accept Montreal's offer if sufficient money cannot be raised here.

IT WILL BE A HARD WINTER

Many Persons Seeking Relief From Charity Board

Mr. Finch W. Miller, city relief officer, says this winter will probably be a hard one for the poor people of the city. He is having many applications for relief, some from immigrant families in the city and quite a number from old and infirm people and others who are too feeble to work. With rent high and work scarce the outlook is certainly none too bright for many people.

Dance Last Night at the Keene Town Hall

Affair Was Proceeded by Pleasing Musical Programme

Last night at Keene the Independent Order of Foresters, Court Otonabee, held a most enjoyable dance in the town hall. About 90 couples were present. Good music was furnished by Messrs. Miller and McFarlane, who played the piano and violin respectively, and Mr. David H. Moore acted as floor manager in his usual capable and satisfactory manner. The affair was a success in every particular, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number in attendance.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME.

Before the ball a very entertaining musical programme was given, consisting of much appreciated vocal solos by Miss Harrison and Mr. John McFarlane, and a laughable black-face specialty by Messrs. D. H. Moore and Frank Deane. The number was funy in the extreme and was greeted with uproarious applause.

Part of Thumb Was Amputated

Yesterday morning about 10 o'clock, Mr. Bert McIntyre, of Keene, was the victim of a painful accident, when the upper portion of his thumb was amputated by a circular saw attached to a threshing machine engine for wood sawing purposes. The casualty occurred on Mr. John Coward's farm, Otonabee. Mr. McIntyre's injuries were looked after by Dr. McWilliams, of Keene.

LIVERY HORSE DROPPED DEAD

While Rented by Young Man—Owner Suing for its Loss

W. J. Wolstenholme, a local liveryman is suing a young man for seventy-five dollars which he claims is owing him. The defendant hired this horse, and while it was in his possession it died. The case will be heard in Division Court next Thursday, and no doubt some interesting facts will be disclosed.

Song Service at George St. Church

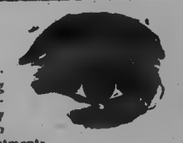
Dr. Browett's Dates at Peterboro'



His Successful Visit. For the past few weeks Dr. Browett, optical specialist, has been teaching opticians at Midland. A large number of persons have taken the opportunity of Dr. Browett's visit to that thriving Georgian Bay port to have their eyes examined for glasses, and thus save themselves the expense of a trip to the larger cities. While there people from Penetanguishene and other adjoining towns have visited him and several very difficult cases have been helped. Dr. Browett will before visiting his next teaching appointment, spend Tues. to Sat., 19th to 23rd at his home office at our store and conduct examinations for those for whom we are making appointments.

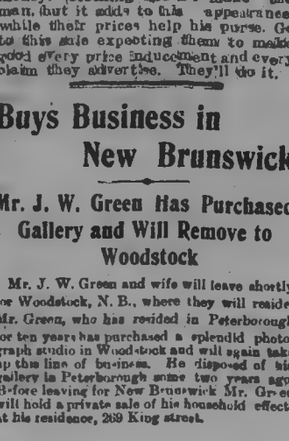
BALLOONIST WHO IS IN THIS CITY



MR. WM J. COON

Above is the cut of an aeronaut at present employed in Mac's barber shop, George street, who made three ascensions at Scarboro Beach last year and one at the Kirkfield fair. An offer of $100 a week for eighteen weeks has been offered to Mr. Coon for the coming season by Capt. Thos. Callaghan, the celebrated balloonist, but it is not likely he will accept it as he thinks he can do much better. He will perform a daring feat next year in connection with his ascensions, discarding his ordinary clothes, which he will wear over his tights, after the balloon has left the earth.

HAVE YOU MISSED IT ?

There's not a man in the city, married or single, that can afford to stay away from Lang & Mather's great money saving sale. The flood gates are open. The bars are down, and their stock is rapidly melting away. "Standing room only" was the order there last Saturday. People will buy where they get extra value for their money. Clothing doesn't make the man, but it adds to his appearance, while their prices help his purse. Go to this sale expecting them to make good every price inducement and every claim they advertise. They'll do it.

Sale And Banquet To be Held at the Old Opera House

Woman's and Girls' Guild, of All Saints', will Conduct Sale of Goods on Dec. 4th and 5th

A sale under the auspices of All Saints Woman's and Girls' Guild, will be held in Bradburn's Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday, December 4th and 5th. Very generous donations toward the sale have been received from local merchants and manufacturers insuring a large variety of articles being offered for sale, among which will be fancy goods, aprons, Christmas dresses, pure foods, toilet preparations, bric a-brac, household needs, etc.

On Thursday, commencing at 6 o'clock a shredded wheat banquet will be served. The proceeds resulting from the sale and banquet will be devoted to the building fund of the new church.

Great interest is being shown in the undertaking by the members of the church and the function, like all affairs connected with All Saints, promises to be a decided success.

Many Attended To-day's Market

To-day's market was the largest that has been for some time and the prices were very reasonable. The farmers simply thronged the building, evidently brought to the city by the fine weather. Butter was plentiful at 28, 29 and 30 cents per pound, while eggs retained their old price, 30 cents per dozen. Fowl was in particularly large quantities. Turkey cannot be such a luxury these days, for the prices are very reasonable and there are many of them. They range from $1.10 to $1.50. Geese were sold at 90 cents and $1.00, ducks at 80 and 90 cents, and chickens at 60 to 90 cents per pair.

On the outside market fresh meat was picked up quickly. Beef sold at 4½ and 5½ cents per pound, pork at 8 and 10 cents and lamb at 10 and 12 cents per pound. Apples sold at from 60 cents to $1.00 a bag, while potatoes brought 85 cents.

Mr. W. C. Brown Returns Home

Will be Accompanied by Mr. Arthur Graham, who is Leaving for Cobalt

Mr. W. C. Brown, the owner of the Silver Mine, Cobalt, who has been at the Oriental for the past couple of weeks, the guest of Mr. Arthur Graham, leaves for his home in Pembroke to-day. He has unfortunately during his visit here, been seized with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism and has found it necessary to return to his home. He will be accompanied as far as Pembroke by Mr. Graham, who has been in the city from Cobalt on a month's vacation. Mr. Graham will assume his duties in connection with the operation of several mining properties, in which he is interested in the Silver City.

The Girls' Guild of St. John's will hold a Masquerade Social on Tuesday, Nov. 26th, admission 10 cents. 3d

Sunday School Association Met

At the regular weekly meeting of the City Sunday School Association, held last evening, there was a good attendance. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, who was to have taken the topic, "The World's Temperance Lesson," was called to Toronto and his assistant, Rev. A. L. Reed, took the topic, which was handled in a thoughtful manner. On Friday night next Rev. J. G. Potter will speak on "The Death of Samson."

NOT PURCHASED THERE

Mr. Kennedy Writes Regarding the Recent Sausage Poisoning Case

To the Editor of the Review

Sir,—I have just returned from a business trip to Buffalo and Columbus, Ohio, and have learned that during my absence the members of a family residing on Harvey street are said to have been poisoned from eating pork sausage. I wish distinctly to state, in case some misapprehension might arise, that the persons affected did not purchase any sausage at my place of business. Our meats are always fresh and clean, and visitors are cordially invited to inspect our premises and facilities at any time. They will be made welcome.

Thanking you for the insertion of this brief explanation, I remain,

Yours, etc.,

Mr. Wm. Anderson in Low Condition

Member for East Peterborough is Not Expected to Recover.

Mr. William Anderson, M.P.P., East Peterborough, was reported as very low to-day and but slight hopes are held out for his recovery. Mr. Anderson has been suffering for some months past from anaemia. He was for a while in a hospital in Toronto and later was removed to Nicholls Hospital in this city. Several weeks ago he went to his home in Otonabee. Dr. McWilliams, of Keene, is in attendance.

You have Not One Reason for Not Using

Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that some cures do this, those, for example, which contain opium, morphine, antipyrene or chloral.

But this is no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

Zutoo Tablets do not contain one iota of any of the drugs above mentioned. They do not contain a single ingredient that does not come from Old Mother Earth herself.

One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach when they had sick headache.

There is not one ingredient in Zutoo tablets that is not approved by both the British and American Pharmacopoeias. And the world has no higher authority in medicine than these.

Your family physician, even if a personal friend, would approve of and prescribe every ingredient.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling bright and well in both mind and body.

It is Harmless as Soda

At Meeting of Lift Lock Tent of Maccabees Last Night.

A very successful meeting of Lift Lock Tent Knights of the Maccabees was held last evening in their hall, Simcoe street, and was attended by a large number of members. Great interest is being taken in this recently formed organization and they have a large membership. Nine new ones were initiated last night, and the same number joined last month. Prov. Commander S. W. Trussler, of Port Huron, and Prov. Record-keeper G. Townsend were present and gave interesting addresses, complimenting the society on the rapid progress they were making. After the meeting the members partook of a supper at the Chinese Cafe.

Father Left for Montreal in Search of Abducted Child

Mr. J. B. Marion of Lindsay Was in the City for Few Hours Last Evening.

Expects to Recover His Daughter—Has Necessary Papers of Adoption

Conductor Arrested for Not Allowing Police to Take Woman and Child

Mr. J. B. Marion, whose little adopted daughter was abducted in Lindsay on Thursday, was in the city last night for a few hours prior to this leaving for Montreal. In a short conversation with a Review reporter he informed him that nothing would be left undone to recapture his stolen child. "The woman has twenty-four hours of a lead on me," said Mr. Marion, "and she has had time to hide the poor child, but with the aid of detectives, I expect to recover her." Mr. Marion is sure that they passed through Peterborough last night on the C.P.R. local, and thinks that he made a mistake by not having that train met by local officers.

"Dorothy would be eight years old next April, and we thought the world of her, just the same as if she was our own child," remarked Mr. Marion. "We have no children of our own. It will be three years next Christmas since we adopted her in Toronto. The child was born in Montreal and baptised in Notre Dame Cathedral. By appointment, the mother, whose name Mr. Marion would not disclose, brought Dorothy to Toronto, where she was met by Mrs Marion, and the necessary papers were drawn up by a solicitor, by which the mother gave up all claim to her, and in writing agreed that she be brought up in the faith of the Church of England. Mr. Marion had the papers in his possession last night and showed them to the reporter. When asked if he thought the child knew her real mother, Mr. Marion said that he did not think so, as she struggled hard to get away from her. Mr. Marion does not know much about the child's people, but considers that the trouble has arose over the fact that the child was being brought up a Protestant.

Referring to the arrest of Conductor Geo. Thompson for not allowing the police to take the woman and child into custody, Mr. Marion said that he was talking to him yesterday, but he had very little to say on the matter.

The Toronto Star last night had the following to say regarding the arrest of the conductor:—

George Thompson, conductor on the train on which the abductor of little Dorothy Marion left here yesterday, came to town this morning under arrest on the charge of obstructing an officer of the law in the performance of his duty. It seems that when officers came on board the train at Markham to make the arrest of the woman claiming to be the child's mother, he would not allow it, and again did the same at Agincourt, where the police had been telegraphed.

A telegram was received today that the woman was seen to get off the train in Montreal this morning.

The child has been with the Marions now for about five years, and was adopted out of a home. The mother was a Catholic, and, it is said, has two brothers who are priests. The Marions are Protestants. The Marions have all the necessary papers of adoption, and therefore the mother has forfeited all her rights. Whether or not the abductor is the child's real mother can't be learned definitely, but everything points that way. The difference in religion has likely something to do with the abduction.

The government has addressed a vigorous protest to the Grand Trunk Pacific, in regard to the delay of construction in the west.

First Anniversary of His Pastorate

Social Time Spent at the Manse at Springville

Special to the Review.

Springville, Nov. 23.—The elders and managers of Springville and Bethany Presbyterian churches met at the Manse, Springville last night, and spent a social time. They were accompanied by their wives and passed a most enjoyable evening. It was the occasion of the first anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Marsh, who is very popular with all the members of Springville and Presbyterian churches. Under his direction the temporal and spiritual affairs of the congregations are in good condition. About sixty members have been added during the past twelve months to Springville church. Last night congratulatory speeches were made, refreshments served by Rev. Dr. and and Mrs. Marsh, and a very profitable hour or two spent in viewing the stars through Rev Dr. Marsh's telescope.

The repairs to the shed and Manse at Springville are nearing completion, and the church property is now in excellent shape. Rev. Dr. Marsh will preach anniversary sermons tomorrow for Rev. M. E. Wilson at Dunsford. Rev. Mr. Phelps, of Bobcaygeon, will preach at Springville and Bethany on Sunday.

On Sunday last Dr. Marsh preached anniversary sermons at Lakevale for Rev. Horace A. Peckover. A large congregation was present. On Tuesday evening a fowl supper was held. There was a big gathering and a fine programme was rendered. Rev. Mr. Peckover conducted the services at Springville and Bethany, delivering sermons in the interests of missions. On Monday night Rev. H. J. Keith, Knox church, Peterborough, spoke on "India," to a crowded house at Springville.

Literature and its Value as Source of Self Cultivation

Interesting Essay Read by Miss Alice Moloney Before Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T. A. S.

A large and appreciative audience was in attendance at the regular meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. in the assembly hall last evening, when a most interesting essay on "Literature and Its Value as a Source of Self Cultivation," was read by Miss Alice Moloney, and a bright musical programme was presented by some of the society's local artists.

So popular are the literary entertainments arranged under the supervision of the committee of this society that the assembly hall is almost inadequate to accommodate the audiences present at each meeting.

Last evening's essay was a most instructive one and held the interested attention of the large audience present. Miss Moloney introduced her subject by showing what an important educational element literature has been in the development of the character and intellect of the ancient Greek and Roman. To be convinced of the far-reaching influence of literature as an educational element, one has but to turn back to the pages of history and find that it has been the educator of the most cultured nations. The literature of Greece refined Rome, and the fragments that survived that of Greece and Rome have been the educational influences under which the barbarian was first civilized and by which all modern culture has been propagated.

Turning from the broader view on the subject the writer then referred to the tangible material of books and their influence as a source of self-cultivation. When perusing the pages of beautiful books one becomes deeply impressed by the subject matter and unconsciously becomes lost to the material world. Reason, imagination and all the faculties of man's intellect were given him that he might exercise and develop them to the full compass of their activity and no other subject affords such a field of opportunity as literature. By it the imagination and the reasoning powers are cultivated and the emotions trained.

The method of reading books in order to obtain their full value was then very ably dealt with. Intellectual progress is not measured by the number of volumes one has read but by the benefit derived therefrom. Hurried and superficial reading is hurtful to the mental powers. They become overtaxed with food, and like the body under similar conditions, become languid and incapable of taking in what is read. In order to read a work properly, be it poetry or prose, one must give it the closest attention. If one desires to learn the message imparted by it. It must be read with a purpose, taking notes and making mental catalogues of the impressions received. Not only will the memory soon be retentive on all essential points, but the art of forgetting thoughts which are neither instructive or ennobling will soon be acquired. Brother Azarius, that brilliant and talented character of recent years, though gifted with an extraordinary memory, a critical taste and a sound judgment, was a most careful and judicious reader. As he read, he kept his pencil and note book ever at hand, not that he always took notes, but the very fact of holding a pencil to him, stimulated thought. When he met a passage that appeared beautiful, or came home to him, he examined it and at once made it his own. In this lay the secret of his varied and profound knowledge. If Shakspere or Dante had no other thought than that which a mere surface gleaning could gather, they could never have become the great influencing agencies in literature that they are to-day. Henry Morley, once told his class in London that it was only after thirty-five readings of Julius Caesar that the central thought of that great masterpiece dawned upon him.

Continuing, the writer stated that through reading good literature one is enabled, as it were, to enjoy friendly converse with the great and wise men of every age. In the printed page is found the most noble thoughts and feelings that ever adorned the human mind. We have at our disposal the whole treasury of the world's experience, which, without books, we would never know.

The duty incumbent upon us with regard to our reading matter was then briefly touched upon. Ours is the duty to develop and make perfect our whole nature, therefore we must look to the development of our character and intellect. The great means of achieving this is good reading and good literature. Many instances of the influence of the reading of good books upon the mind of men were also given. It is a matter of history that the reading of a single passage from the New Testament changed the whole life of St. Augustine.

In conclusion the writer stated that the companionship found in good books is a source of much wholesome pleasure and intellectual profit. They are purifying, elevating and sustaining. They broaden the mind and help to mould a strong and beautiful character. They form a rallying point where different feelings and tempers can meet without discord. They tend to draw each mind out of its petty cares and perplexities. Our thoughts flow in the current we have chosen, in the channels where we have placed them and none are purer or nobler than those suggested by good literature. There is a valley in the soul where bloom the flowers of noble thinking. Pass your life here and you will catch the perfume of eternity.

As a pleasing preliminary to this interesting essay, an exceptionally bright musical programme was presented, each number of which was deservedly applauded. The following was the programme introduced by Miss A. McCarthy, who occupied the chair for the evening:

Mandolin Quartette—Messrs. Theobald, Holland, Brightman and Cranfield.
Vocal Solo—Miss Alice Moloney.
Recitation—Miss Mona Sullivan.

The next meeting of the society will be held on Friday evening, December 6th, when a paper will be read by Miss K. McGrath.

Successful Musical Evening At George St. Methodist Church

Large and Delighted Audience Present at Concert and Cantatta—Some Very Pleasing Solo and Choral Work—A Credit to the Choir and Choirmaster

Last night at the George street Methodist church the large audience that assembled to hear the concert and cantata presented by the choir was amply rewarded by the highly pleasing and artistic production of a varied and excellent programme. The soloists distinguished themselves by their splendid work and the choral parts were rendered with nice judgment, good balance of tone and satisfactory ensemble and gave evidence of careful and efficient training at the hands of Mr. McCann, the organist and choirmaster. Preliminary to the concert hymn 105 "Praise ye the Lord," was sung, followed by devotional exercises led by the pastor, Rev. E. A. Pearson.

The concert programme was opened by Mr. H. Shorphet who sang "Hosanna" in good voice and with musicianly appreciation of its spirit and sentiment. Miss Reesor and Mr. Johnston sang with fine effect a duet by Schmecker, "In His hands are all the corners." Miss Smith recited in a manner that won the applause of the audience a touching piece by Tennyson—"In the Children's Hospital." She earned equal recognition and showed similar elocutionary excellence in the other numbers she contributed during the evening. "Nice Leetle Canadiene," by the late Dr. Drummond, Mrs. Browning's "The Sleep," "Jean Valjean," and the "Bishop," and "Happy in my Lot."

Mr. McCann announced a solo by Mr. Norris, a newcomer to the city, and recent addition to the choir, Mr. Norris possesses a tenor robusto of good quality and rendered "A Dream of Paradise," with becoming feeling and expression, Miss Reesor, the talented soprano soloist of the choir, so well known for her brilliant vocalism, gave us her first solo "Galilee," in her usually satisfying manner. To Miss Reesor's lot also fell the soprano solo work in the cantata, Penitence, Pardon and Peace, a composition of a purely devotional character. In this her three solos which were sung with reverent appreciation of their devotional motive as well as discriminating regard for their musical value.

The other solos of the cantata were taken by Mr. Johnson and Mr. Miles, the former singing in a well governed and musical voice three solo parts, while Mr. Miles, in the solo assigned him sang "Cast thy burden upon the Lord," in a manner marked by skilful employment of a good voice.

As remarked the choral work in its quality well sustained the reputation the choir has won by its splendid work in the past.

THE CANTATA.

A summary of the cantata is given below:

"Penitence"—

Solo—"O that I knew where I might find Him." Miss Reesor.

"Pardon"—

Choir—"Look unto Him and be ye Saved."

Solo—"Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me." Miss Reesor.

Choir—"Behold now is the accepted time."

"Peace"—

Choir—"When the Son of man shall come,"

Solo—"Come ye blessed of My Father," Mr. Johnston.

Solo—"And there shall be no more death," Mr. Johnston.

Choir—"Now therefore our God we thank Thee."

Solo—"Alleluia." Miss Reesor.

Choir—"Now therefore our God."

CANNOT KEEP THEM OUT.

Department Does Not Know How to Deal With Unemployed.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—The attention of the officials of the Provincial Immigration Department has been drawn to the reported influx of unemployed from the United States. The difficulty is admitted, reports having been received from London, but no clear way of dealing with it can yet be seen. It has been suggested that a Dominion immigration inspector should be placed at Niagara Falls, but under the present conditions of the immigration law even the presence of such an officer could have little effect in restraining the influx of unemployed from south of the line. As the law stands, only the physically or mentally unfit can be prevented from entering Canada, or deported, no financial qualification being necessary.

Hon. Nelson Monteith regards the problem of dealing with the indigent immigrant as being one of the most serious which the country will have to face this winter. Already the number of unemployed is considerably in excess of what it has been in former years. The lumber business, which usually absorbs a number of men who are prevented by the cold weather from following their usual avocations, will not afford such relief this winter. Owing to the stringency of money there are indications that the lumber cut will be much smaller this year. Already men who are not usually laid off until April are being sent out of the woods.

DOCK LABORERS STRIKE.

C. P. R. Defies the Men and Declare They Will Stand No More.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 23.—Shortly after the winter port season opened yesterday morning by the arrival of the Empress of Ireland, the longshoremen of the port struck. They refused to go to work unless the schedule of pay was raised from 30 cents to 40 cents an hour.

This the steamship companies emphatically declare they will never pay.

For some hours work on the big liner was suspended, but when the C. P. R. found the men would not work they put white men of their own to work.

The longshoremen last night met and resolved to stay out unless the increase is granted. As soon as this decision was learned the C. P. R. officials communicated with the head office in Montreal and the reply came to pay all 30 cents and no more.

Capt. Walsh, marine superintendent of the C. P. R., said that there will be no more nonsense with St. John ship laborers who give trouble every year and are never satisfied.

The C. P. R. will bring men direct from England, who will do all their work in future. Feeling in this city is strongly against the men, who, it is evident, are being led by a few disgruntled leaders.

Lemieux Still Waiting.

Tokio, Nov. 23.—Minister of Foreign Affairs Hayashie has been indisposed and unable to meet and confer with Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, the Canadian Minister of Labor, and American Ambassador O'Brien, on the occasion of his regular weekly reception. Pending his recovery and the arrival of Baron Ishii, chief of the bureau of commerce of the Japanese Foreign Office, who is on his way back home from a visit to America, negotiations on the immigration proposition are at a standstill.

Workman Killed on M. C. R.

St. Thomas, Nov. 23.—At 9.20 o'clock Thursday night, Engineer Smith of the M. C. R. found the body of a man lying on the eastbound track about three-quarters of a mile east of Montrose. The body was cut in two, one-half lying outside and the other inside of the rails.

The man was unknown and there was nothing on his person to identify him. The body was given in charge of Dr. Wilson, coroner, of Niagara Falls.

Death List Now Nine.

Kenora, Nov. 23.—But few new details of the terrible dynamite explosion Wednesday in Webster's construction camp, G. T. P. works, near Dryden, are known here. The list of dead is now placed at nine, two having succumbed Thursday afternoon to injuries received in the explosion. Four of the dead men are brothers, by the name of Johnson.

Knocked Down by Horse.

Kingston, Nov. 23—A runaway horse with a portion of a runabout behind him struck an elderly man named Corrigan yesterday afternoon, knocking him down, breaking his collarbone and otherwise injuring him.

Fell From High Windmill.

Forest, Nov. 23.—Daniel Dunham, a highly respected resident of Plympton Township, living on the 12th con., about a mile from Forest, fell from the top of a windmill yesterday morning and died almost instantly.

Where Is It?

Hamburg, Nov. 23.—The instruments of the seismological station here recorded an earthquake at 9.15 yesterday morning. The disturbance lasted two hours, and was at an estimated distance of 5,000 miles.

Revelations in Bribery Case; Adjournment Until Monday

Meant It For Legitimate Expenses—Mr. Corry Had Frequently Contributed to Funds of Both Parties—Crown May Not Call Tom Lewis—Instruction Was Given in Folding Ballots.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—The London bribery case went on for a short time yesterday, but nothing new was developed. An adjournment was made until Monday.

It is very unlikely, although Tom Lewis, now famous in elections, has been subpoenaed, that he will be called. The defence believe that the crown is afraid to put Tom in the box, for fear he will tell too much.

Alex. Milne, who acted as deputy returning officer in the bye-election of 1905, was examined by Mr. Staunton. He admitted that Jerry Collins showed him how to fold the ballots. He had, witness admitted, been drinking.

Ernest A. Larmouth, secretary of the Reform Association in Ottawa, said that he accompanied a Mr. White to London. He had no money, nor had he acted as a mysterious stranger.

James Corry, the Ottawa contractor, had been in London during the election while on his way to St. Joseph. He had seen Reid and given him $300 "for legitimate expenses."

"Wasn't it $1,000 you gave Mr. Reid?" he was asked, and replied, "I do not think so." It was not an uncommon thing to contribute in this way; in fact, he had done so frequently to both parties.

Asked if he was a Conservative, he replied: "I would not like to say what I am."

Suffered Excruciating Pain While Hand Was Slowly Cooked

Man Got Firmly Fixed in Door of Furnace.

Terrible Experience of John Everson—Was Alone In Shack When Accident Happened — Could Not Get Free — Torture Was Awful—Building Afterwards Caught Fire—Became Dazed With Pain.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 23.—After having suffered most excruciating agony since Tuesday morning last, when his hand was burned to a crisp in an accident, John I. Everson, manager of the St. John & Boston Tripolite Co., had the member amputated at the General Public Hospital here yesterday afternoon. Everson's company has leased a lake, seven miles out, a deposit of which is used in making stove lead and other polishes. He has been experimenting there and lived in a shack alone. He got his hand caught in the door of a stove while trying to put some water on a fire, and before he could withdraw it it was cooked through. His sufferings were agonizing beyond expression, and, becoming dazed with pain, he has not a clear idea of what took place after that. He remembered, however, that just as soon as he got outside the house the flames were shooting through the roof and in very short time the building was in ruins. Everson started to walk to the city, and had actually proceeded two miles on the journey in that condition when he was overtaken by a milkman, who drove him to the hospital. He stood the shock of the operation well, but is now in a serious condition.

New Presbyterian Pastor is Inducted at Havelock

Rev. J. A. G. Stirling Will Minister There in Future—Rev. H. J. Keith of Peterborough Delivered the Charge to the Pastor.

Havelock, Nov. 22.—Before a very large congregation, Rev. J. A. G. Stirling, of Peterborough, was inducted as pastor of the Havelock Presbyterian church, in the sacred edifice of that congregation this afternoon, Nov. 22nd.

A call, signed by a large number of the congregation, was presented to Mr. Stirling at a meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery at Peterborough last week, by Mr. Jas. Thompson, of town, and Rev G A MacLennan, of Norwood, Moderator for this district. Mr. Stirling decided to accept the offer, and today that reverend and respected gentleman was inducted as pastor of this parish, in which we feel sure he will show his good works in abundance, much to the advancement of the congregation of that church in Havelock.

The induction services commenced at 2.30 p.m. before a crowded church, the sermon being delivered by Rev. P. W. Currie, of Warsaw, who highly delighted the congregation, and left a lasting impression with them by his forcible and earnest manner.

Rev. G. A. MacLennan, of Norwood, Moderator for this district, presided over the induction services, which he satisfactorily and most earnestly carried out.

Rev H. J. Keith, of Peterborough, delivered the charge to the new pastor, in which he definitely laid down his duties, and all those who have the honor of knowing Mr. Stirling feel quite confident that he will carry them out to the last detail and to the satisfaction of the citizens of Havelock and to the credit of himself.

Rev. D. A. Thompson, of Hastings, delivered the charge to the people, and if they be faithful and honest, and carry out their duties as well and as earnestly as we are sure Mr. Stirling will do, we can easily say that Mr. Stirling's pastorate in Havelock will be a successful one in every respect.

The Anglican church was represented by Rev. Mr. Caplan, and the Methodist church by Rev. Mr. Balfour and Mr. Frederick.

In the evening the annual dinner and concert was held in the town hall, when a first class supper was served in the basement from 5 to 8 o'clock. When ample justice had been done to the good things provided by the large number in attendance, they repaired to the auditorium, where an excellent programme, which highly delighted the audience, was listened to.

Rev. Mr. MacLennan and a male quartette from Norwood, Rev. P. B. Thornton, of Colborne, Miss McLenaghen, of Perth, and Mrs. Tuck, of town, were heard to advantage in the musical part of the programme. Special music rendered by the choir added much to the entertainment. Pleasing and enjoyable addresses were ably delivered by Rev. Mr. Currie, of Warsaw; Rev. Mr. Keith, of Peterborough; Rev. Mr. MacLennan, of Norwood; Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Hastings; Rev. Mr. Stirling, and the resident clergymen. The induction of Rev. Mr. Stirling will long be remembered by the citizens of Havelock.

NO REPORT RECEIVED ABOUT POWER

City Council Has Had no Information From the Hydro-Electric Commission

The City Council has received no word from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission regarding the report which the commission's engineer was to make in connection with the power facilities in the neighborhood of Peterborough. It will be remembered that the engineer visited Peterborough about two months ago and was to make a report at an early date, but nothing has since been heard of it here. Apparently the Commission is too busy with the Niagara Power question to deal with the Peterborough matter, but the Council expects to hear something at an early date. The report of the Commission is awaited with interest.

BABY SMILES

One mother happily expressed her opinion of Baby's Own Tablets when she said "there's a smile in every dose." In homes where the Tablets are used there are no cross, fretful, sickly children. The Tablets make children well and keep them well. They cure indigestion, colic, constipation, diarrhoea, teething troubles and all the other minor ailments of childhood. They can be given with absolute safety to the new born child, for the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that the Tablets do not contain one particle of opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. Isn't such a guarantee worth something to you, mother? The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 25 cents a box.

FATAL BUFFALO FIRE

Two Others Will Die—Cook Suffering From Suffocation—Ottawa Italian Seriously Injured—Many Narrow and Exciting Escapes—Inmates Rush Half Clad Into the Streets—Building Was Gutted.

Buffalo, Nov. 23.—One man is dying, another is dead, a third is at the hospital in a serious condition, and a score of persons had narrow and exciting escapes, as the result of a fire which broke out in Sawtell's Hotel, No. 110 Exchange street, early yesterday.

The name of the dead man is unknown to the authorities. His body is at the morgue.

The seriously injured are:

Nearly eighty persons sleeping in Sawtell's, McLeod's and Lawrence's hotels were rushed into the street half clothed when the smoke and flames from the fire began to get into their rooms. Three men, one of whom was the dead man, were carried unconscious from the Sawtell Hotel by firemen.

Herbert Sawtell, the proprietor of the gutted hotel, awoke the sleeping inmates, and on returning to the second floor found that his escape was cut off by way of the stairs. He ran to the roof. The flames rapidly approached him and he jumped to the adjoining roof unhurt.

SUNFIELD GETS RESPITE.

Execution of Hamilton Man Postponed For Four Weeks.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—Jake Sunfield, the man convicted some time ago at Hamilton by Chief Justice Falconbridge, of the murder of Andy Radzyk, and sentenced to be executed on Friday, the 29th instant, has been granted a reprieve.

The Court of Appeal gave its decision yesterday morning on the appeal of Mr. Farmer, of Hamilton, prisoner's counsel, from the refusal of the trial judges to state a case. Chief Justice Moss said that the court had been hampered by having only one copy of the evidence furnished to it, and that to this was due the delay in giving judgment. His lordship said that the court had concluded that the arguments of counsel for the prisoner and the evidence disclosed points that should be elucidated further. A stated case was therefore directed, to be argued at the present sittings.

Chief Justice Falconbridge shortly after issued the following order: "The King against Jacob Sunfield, alias Tamillo. The Court of Appeal, having decided a case to be stated herein, I hereby, for the purpose thereof, reprieve the prisoner for four weeks, and order his execution to be delayed until Tuesday, Dec. 27, 1907."

SHOT FOR RESISTING.

Constable Wounds Old Man Wanted on Serious Charge.

Grenfell, Sask., Nov. 23.—R. Braithwaite, a farmer living a few miles south of here, was shot and seriously, if not fatally, wounded by a mounted policeman named Moses, while resisting arrest Thursday.

Braithwaite is an eccentric who refuses to pay taxes, when compelled by legal process to do so, and last spring shot at a bailiff who was attempting to serve a distress warrant. He was arrested for this offence, but let out on bail. Efforts have been made since to secure him for trial, but he has resisted successfully all attempts until yesterday, when Moses, assisted by another mounted policeman from Regina, decided to take him at any cost. In the scrimmage he was very seriously wounded and is now under a surgeon's care at Wolseley. He has a brother in Vancouver.

Street Cars In Fatal Crash.

Sandusky, Ohio, Nov. 23.—In a head-on collision early yesterday between an Inter-urban Lake Shore Electric Railway motor and a city car, a dozen men were injured, five so seriously that they were taken to the hospital, and two may die. The police arrested the motorman and conductor of the Inter-urban car and attempted to arrest William Jakes, conductor of the city car, but Jakes, although injured, escaped.

A heavy fog hung over the city when the collision occurred.

MAURETANIA ARRIVES.

New York, Nov. 23.—Poking her nose through a dense fog which hid even her mast tops from the sight of those on deck, the biggest, and most luxurious ship ever launched safely finished her maiden voyage yesterday, when at 11.03 o'clock yesterday the Cunard line turbine steamship Mauretania, anchored off the Sandy Hook lightship, five days, five hours and 10 minutes from Queenstown.

Bearing $12,500,000 in gold from the west she struggled against tempestuous weather to beat the world's transatlantic speed record of four days, 18 hours and 40 minutes, held by her sister ship, the Lusitania. Head winds and heavy cross seas baffled her, but she won the right to one blue ribbon. On Thursday, Nov. 21, Captain Pritchard drove the huge ship 624 knots (677 miles), thanks to a shift in the wind to the north-northeast, which is six knots better than the best day's run of the Lusitania, and leads all marine records.

The Mauretania left Queenstown Nov. 17 at 11 a. m. and arrived at quarantine, New York, at 3.54 p. m. Nov. 22. Her runs were: First day (one hour's run), 30 knots; second day (noon to noon), 571; third day, 464, fourth day, 563; fifth day, 634; sixth day, 528.

The average speed for the passage was 23.21 knots, or 23.89 miles an hour. Her average speed on her record day run of 624 knots was 25.86 miles an hour. Her poorest days average was 20.81 miles an hour, from noon of Nov. 18 to noon of the 19th.

Though the new liner demonstrated a capacity for greater speed by day, under favorable conditions than the Lusitania has thus far proved herself capable of an uncommonly stormy passage and fog off this coast, combined to make her time 10 hours and 30 minutes more than that established by her sister ship. But Captain Pritchard believed that with fair weather he can beat the Lusitania from coast to coast.

The Mauretania is 792 feet in length over all, two feet longer than the Lusitania; has a beam of 88 feet, a depth of hold of 80 feet; is 155 feet high from keel to funnel tops, and 216 feet from keel to masthead; draws 37 feet and 6 inches of water (mean estimate) has a tonnage displacement of 45,000, an indicated horse-power of 70,000; was launched on the Tyne (England), Sept. 20, 1906; carries a crew of 800 men and officers; has accommodations for 550 passengers in the first-class cabins, 500 in the second-class and 1,200 in steerage, and cost approximately $7,500,000.

MUST FACE FORGERY CHARGE.

Blind River Fire Chief Said to Have Written Bogus Letter.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 23.—George Raymond, the blind River fire chief confined in the Soo jail, charged with incendiarism, will have still another charge, a very serious one, to answer when he appears at the Criminal Assizes in December.

Thursday he appeared before Magistrate Elliott on a charge of forgery in connection with the letter which he himself received, dated in October. The letter was signed Thomas and Adelard Ouellette, Blind River, who appeared on the charge recently and were dismissed. The letter was in the nature of a suggestion from them, offering Raymond $500 to fire the Terrier building.

The authorities claim Raymond wrote the letter himself, but for what reason is not yet apparent, other than that he wished to divert suspicion from himself upon the Ouellette brothers.

In the Criminal Assizes.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—William Eccles, a young married man, was convicted in the Criminal Assize Court yesterday of attempting a criminal assault upon a five-year-old girl with whose mother he had been boarding.

Robert Spinks and Hayden O'Brien were discharged by Judge MacMahon yesterday morning. They were charged with assault upon a girl about their own age, 15 years. The judge commented strongly on the evil of parents allowing their children to roam the streets after dark.

A PLEASING STRIDE

"One of the 14"

Some women walk heavily and clumsily, while others have the pace of an "unfolding nymph."

An unpleasing carriage may be due to many causes, but chiefly to awkward shoes.

This is why Dolly Vardens give "A Pleasing Stride."

Their narrow construction and newly devised steel arch support hold the foot at every point with gentle firmness. You can't walk pleasingly in loose harness.

Their Arch Rest Flat Tread guarantees that every step will come down "sure and firm set."

Their Dead Level Ball and Heel Balance throws the body into vertical athletic erectness.

Their New Steel Arch Support and Dead Level Ball and Heel Balance strengthen the ankles by properly exercising the ankle muscles. Strong ankles are essential to pleasing carriage.

Purchasers or investigators equally welcome. $4.00 to $5.00 in Canada and the States. Every pair Goodyear welted.

BIRDS OF ANOTHER COLOR.

"The purple finch," read the man, as he stood before a glass case of birds in a science museum. He squinted at the bird and then remarked scornfully, "But the bird is not purple; it is wine color." In the next case he encountered the label "Great Blue Heron" at the feet of an extremely long legged creature who was not blue at all, but a decided gray. The neighbor of the blue heron was the "green heron," a bird almost brown, with the tiniest flecks of green on it. Only by a big stretch of the imagination could it be called green. A familiar looking water bird bore the name "black duck," although it was brown with its wings tipped a tawny shade. In the next case there were three birds whose names the visitor read with disapproval. One was the "snowflake," a small bird of a decided brownish hue. Another was the "purple grackle," a brown bird with only the merest suggestion of purple. And lastly there was the "redstart," which was not red at all, but an undeniable orange and black. When he read the next label, "Rose Breasted Grosbeck," and observed that only the throat of the bird was rose color, while its breast was gray, the visitor hurried to find the curator to tell him how wrongly and absurdly birds were named.

The curator laughed. "My dear fellow," he protested, "you have happened on about the only birds in the museum that are incorrectly named. As a matter of fact, the birds found in this part of the country are very well named indeed, and you have picked out only the exceptions. What could be better named than the scarlet tanager, the bluebird, the cathird, the yellow bird, the woodpecker, the phoebe, the red winged blackbird, the bobolink, etc.? If you'll examine the wild flowers you'll find much more incongruous names. For instance, there's the oxeye daisy—and, by the way, the oxeye daisy is the common white petalled daisy with the yellow center, and not the yellow daisy with the brown center, as is generally supposed. Now, I cannot conceive how that little flower appears like the eye of an ox. The black eyed Susan, commonly known as the yellow daisy, is better named, but it is certainly extremely fantastic. It is a crying shame that a certain little sweet pale lavender flower which grows profusely should bear the hideous name of one flowered cancer root because its root vaguely resembles a cancer. But the name sticks.

"Then there is the lady's slipper. Can you imagine a lady's slipper fashioned like that? It is pouchy and clumsy, and its name is no compliment to the fair sex. Another far fetched name is Solomon's seal. You know the flower is a tiny greenish or creamy white affair and is very unattractive in appearance, something like wintergreen blossoms. Well, it gets its name from its root, which bears a round scar left by the broken off old stalk which is so unlike the impression of a seal that it makes one wonder how any one could possibly have seen the likeness. The false Solomon's seal, by the way, is disgracefully named. It is far prettier than the real Solomon's seal and should have a pretty name of its own.

"Now, the name dogtooth violet is another bad one. In the first place the flower does not at all resemble a tooth of any sort, and in the second place it is nothing at all like a violet. The wild geranium is a fragile flower, lavender in color, something on the hepatica type, only considerably larger, so you can see how much likeness it has to the sturdy garden geranium.

"You've seen that crimson flower which at a distance looks like a wild rose and whose leaves are much like grape leaves and whose stems are very sticky? Well, its name is purple flowering raspberry, while its color is an unmistakable crimson.

"The blue vervain is a tall weed, with tiny, homely flowers, which grows in waste places beside the road, and it is purple, not blue. The iron weed has a queer Latin name which means 'Mr. Vernon, belonging to New York,' and is named after an early English botanist of New York state.

"How do you suppose those pink, fragrant blossoms along the roads which are near cousins to the garden phlox got the name of bouncing Bets? It seems incongruous and flippant for this delicately tinted flower. On the other hand, who do you suppose gave the name cowslips to the small flowers of the meadow? It is certainly an appropriate one, but I wonder who conceived the pretty name."—New York Tribune.

A TRIM FITTED JACKET

There are many occasions when it becomes necessary to have one's coat made at home, and a model of excellent style is here shown. Many smart coats this season are made in hip length, and as a rule they are distinctly jaunty and becoming. The coat illustrated is double-breasted and is well adapted for fall and winter wear. It is admirably suited to development in covert cloth, broadcloth or any of the popular suitings, and with collar of velvet and seams stitched or braided it will prove altogether pleasing when completed. For the medium size the jacket requires 2¼ yards of 54 inch material.

TRIALS OF THE RICH.

Financial Prosperity and Its Worries and Perplexities.

Once upon a time a young man and a girl loved each other fondly. He was poor, but bright, energetic and persevering. She was pretty, cheerful and amiable. They married. Their friends thought they might have waited until their prospects were better, but they laughed prudence to scorn.

"How are you getting along?" asked the friend.

"Very nicely," said the wife, beaming. "My husband is so good, and I have such a lovely baby. And, just think, we have $1,000 in the bank, and we don't owe a cent to anybody!"

Five years later the friend met her again.

"I hear you are doing very well," she said. "Some one told me your husband had $10,000 invested in real estate."

"Why, yes," said the wife, "but it's such a worry. There are repairs and taxes and interest on mortgages, and one of the tenants has just moved out owing us a whole month's rent. Isn't it a shame?"

Five years more elapsed, and again the friend met her.

"They tell me you're growing rich," she said.

"Ye-es, but I'm anxious about the stock market. My husband has $50,000 in stocks, and he thinks they're going up, but I'm not so sure about it. Indeed, I didn't sleep a wink last night."

Five years later—another meeting.

"From what I hear your husband will soon be a millionaire."

"Oh, I don't know," said the wife. "He hasn't more than half a million yet. And it is so tied up in all sorts of investments—one never knows how they will turn out. I just wish we had enough to put the money in government bonds so that we wouldn't have to worry. But of course the income from half a million in government bonds wouldn't be enough to make both ends meet. And yet, do you know, some people have such absurd notions about the amount of money we have! One crank has even sent a letter to my husband threatening to shoot him just because he is rich. I declare, sometimes I'm so worried I don't know what to do."

It would be pleasant to give this story a happy ending, but that isn't the kind it had. This lady's wealth continued to increase as long as she lived, and she never ceased to be uneasy except in those brief intervals when she forgot all about it.—Bohemian.

THE BABY POST.

A Curious Institution That Once Flourished in England.

Although few people are probably now aware of it, the fact remains that there once flourished in England a regular "baby post," the rates of postage being fixed on a strictly business basis, according to distances traversed.

The curious institution came into existence in connection with the foundling hospital in Guilford street. When this charity was first established, it was understood that its operations would be confined to London and its environs. But the people of the country towns and villages heard of it and showed a decided disposition to share in its advantages; hence the "baby post!"

All over the country there were men and women who entered vigorously into the business of carrying children to London and depositing them at the gates of the foundling hospital. The charge was 8 guineas from distant localities like York and Monmouth, down to a guinea from places situated within thirty to fifty miles of the metropolis. The unfortunate infants were borne on horseback in panniers, two to each pannier, or in wagons lined with straw, for which the charge was somewhat less.

Naturally abuses grew up in connection with the traffic. But, even apart from them, the mortality among the "posted" babies was terrible. Thus, out of 14,934 received at the hospital in four years, only 4,400 lived to be "apprenticed out," being a mortality of more than 70 per cent.

Eventually parliament passed a measure abolishing the practice, and the "baby post" ceased.—London Answers.

THE RATTLER'S BUTTONS.

Do Not Rely on Them to Tell the Age of the Reptile.

It is a very common fallacy concerning rattlesnakes, that each segment of the rattle indicates a year of the serpent's existence, and it will probably be accepted until some one devises a safe method of examining the teeth. One has only to stand for a half hour in front of the rattlers' cage at any zoological garden or museum to hear it repeated several times, together with many other bits of misinformation which make the average "nature story" seem a statement of bald fact by comparison.

Although the young rattlesnake comes into the world equipped with but a single button on the end of its tail, when a year old it may have as many as a half dozen segments, while three a year may be taken as a fair average development. In hunting, trawling over rough country and through tangled brush the rattles are apt to be injured or lost, and occasionally a very large specimen is seen with but two or three segments, while one of the banded variety procured in Pennsylvania for the Bronx zoo was less than three feet in length and possessed seventeen perfect rattles, the absence of the terminal congenital button demonstrating that one or more pieces had been lost.

A segment is added to the rattle each time the snake casts its skin, and this may occur every month of the snake's active season, which in the northern states lasts from early May until the first severe storm of winter drives it to the den for its long hibernation. This casting of the skin, which is common to all serpents and many of the lizards, is a curious provision to protect the reptile from disease and discomfort, and, like most of nature's provisions, it is a wise one.

Since the day when the serpent was condemned to crawl abjectly on its belly, instead of wriggling gracefully upon its tail, as a punishment for whispering suggestions for the fall into the eager ear of Eve it has been peculiarly liable to injure its sensitive integument, and, spending its existence in close contact with the ground, it becomes the unwilling host of many ticks and parasites which are harbored by the decaying vegetation. Any unfortunate who has accumulated a few wood ticks and laboriously removed them from his hide with the point of a knife and ammonia will appreciate how much easier it would be to grow a new skin and envy the serpent the ready means at its disposal to rid itself of the unwelcome pests.—Francis Metcalfe in Outing Magazine.

KILLED BY A COW'S TAIL.

Binghampton, N.Y.—Wm. A. Wells, of Neward Valley, was milking, when a cow swished her tail, striking him on the forehead with the fleshy part of the appendage. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Wells returned to the house, complaining of a pain in the head, which rapidly grew worse. Physicians pronounced it apoplexy, brought on by the blow from the cow's tail. Mr. Wells died the same night.

Apoplexy is the result of poisoned blood. Bowels become constipated, kidneys get weakened, skin action becomes poor, and the blood is loaded with impurities, which produces weakness in the blood vessels.

Whenever there is headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, it means blood poisoning. "Fruit-a-tives" are a certain cure for all these troubles.

"Fruit-a-tives" are made of fruit juices and tonics. 50c a box. At all dealers.

She Didn't Roost With the Chickens.

The homely forms of speech used by the country people with whom little Edith and her mother boarded last summer were frequently very puzzling to the child.

One evening the farmer's wife, in talking for a few minutes with Edith's mother, remarked that, as she was very tired that night, she believed she would "go to roost with the chickens."

When Edith's bedtime arrived a little later the youngster was nowhere to be found. After a considerable search she was discovered sitting on a large stone near the chicken house quietly watching the fowls as they came in one by one.

"Edith," called her mother, "what are you doing there? I've been looking for you everywhere. It's time to go to bed."

"I know, mother," was the reply. "But they're nearly all in now, so she'll be here soon, I guess."

"Who are in and who will be there? What on earth are you talking about, child?" asked the mystified mother.

"Why," explained Edith rather impatiently, "you know Mrs. —— said she was going to roost with the chickens tonight, and I'm waiting to see how she does it."—New York Times.

The Greeting at the Pier.

"One of the most unsatisfactory experiences that I know of," said a man who likes to make his fine count, "is meeting people, home from Europe, at the pier. They are glad to see you, as you are, of course, to see them, but I have never yet greeted a relative or friend under these circumstances without realizing the fact that my presence was more or less of a nuisance. What with the collection of the baggage from the stateroom and the hold, the fussing with the customs inspectors and the getting of the impediments to the express office or the cab the returned voyagers are fully occupied, and it is asking too much to expect them to pay particular attention to those who are right on hand to say 'how-de-do.' I imagine that ninety-nine out of a hundred travelers wish that their welcomers would wait until there was a chance for a breath or two to be drawn."—New York Press.

DEAR SIR,—

Your favor of the 24th inst. received enclosing statement of profits allotted to my policy 7001, in the "Sun Life" for the past five years.

Above policy is for $1,000 on the whole life five year distribution plan on which I paid an annual premium of $28.36, or $141.78 for the five year period.

I find the CASH PROFITS amount to $53.35, or about 40 per cent. of the total premiums paid during the five years. This is certainly a splendid showing and speaks volumes for the earning powers of the Sun Life Company's investments.

Thanking you and wishing your company continued success,

BREADTH IN NATIONAL LIFE IS OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE.

Sympathetic effort to understand the views of others is what Dr. R. A. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, told the members of the Canadian Club was necessary for the development of a national life in Canada. Dr. Falconer was the club's guest at a recent luncheon. He pointed out that by geographical condition the provinces of the Dominion were divided into three great groups. This geographical condition has, coupled with the diversity of the peoples of the Dominion, raised difficulties in the way of the formation of a national life, but in spite of them a certain welding had already taken place.

Welded Together.

Canada had already been welded together to a considerable degree. In the far west they had a people whose underlying principles and conceptions were almost similar, whose religious beliefs were very much the same, and whose national ideas were fundamentally the same as those of the east. At the same time in a twenty-four hour journey from Halifax to Boston the traveler was in a new atmosphere. This proved the existence in Canada of a national spirit, in the extension of which lay the hope of the future.

One of the most potent influences towards the creation of this spirit was the outstanding position occupied by the Dominion Parliament. As the days passed that influence was likely to be greater, for from Ottawa came those questions which formed the staple of political thought all over the Dominion. In the influence of religious bodies who were in closer touch with the old land than with influences south of the line they had another factor in the formation of Canada's national life, while the universities through the men they sent out were helping to mold character in the new territories where they made their home.

Diversity of Influences.

Canada, said Dr. Falconer, offered opportunities for the development of the highest type of statesmanship from the very fact of the diversity of its conditions, for it was diversity of influences that gave breadth of view to statesmanship, which really consisted of the adjustment of broad national principles to local conditions. It was the holding of the balance so that beneath the great mass of detail appeared the broad fundamental principles, and when broad national policies had been outlined they became of great force in educating the people. It was complained that frequent elections interfered with business; that they were marred, and to this all would theoretically agree, by a narrow partisanship. Still those elections would render a great service if they were conducted with a national spirit. Too often the educative effect of a political campaign was overlooked. If the best thoughts of Canada's great men were crystallized and carried throughout the land it must have a great influence towards the uplifting of the whole people. Therefore it was to be hoped that broad policies would be initialed, which were sympathetic towards the great mass of the people.

Cliques and Coteries.

So in the provinces they must seek to free themselves from the charge of narrowness. In this connection the greatest responsibility lay on Ontario, which from its position should become a guiding influence in the Dominion. No other province had benefited so much by Confederation. Its political difficulties had been largely removed and its trade had benefited, and therefore the confederate provinces had a right to expect not monetary but sympathetic assistance.

In conclusion Dr. Falconer urged men to travel, to get out of their cliques and coteries, to endeavor to understand the problems confronting others, and instead of dreaming about right to get out and do it. Possibly the political condition of the Dominion was not so stable as they sometimes supposed. They had the great problem of race fusion in their midst, and Canada needed the educative influences of her best men to help her solve the great problems with which she was confronted.

Whale Towed Steamer.

The little 110-ton steam whaler St. Lawrence has just completed her season's work on the west coast of Vancouver Island, having since the end of March caught 245 whales and earned over $500,000, a sum never before approached in the annals of whaling.

During September the vessel took 49 mammals within sixteen days. Of these more than one-third were sulphur bottoms, a species three times as large as the humpback, for which the Vancouver Island coast is renowned.

On one occasion a monster sulphur bottom towed the 110-ton steamer a distance of twenty-five miles, taking 300 fathoms of line, and with the engines half-speed astern to tire the monster out. At times the vessel tore through the water at a speed of twenty miles an hour, and in all it took seven hours and a couple of bombs to end the struggles of the whale.

Again, an eighty-foot-long mammal on being struck dived beneath the vessel, the bomb exploded, and the craft rose out of the water with the tremendous shock occasioned by the explosion and lashing of the wounded giant. Incidents like this were of common occurrence, yet in spite of many hair-raising episodes the whaler escaped throughout the season undamaged. Within a few weeks she proceeds to the east coast of the island, where she will hunt during the winter.

Eglinton Castle.

One of the most remarkable castles in Scotland—and there are many historic piles north of the Tweed—is Eglinton castle, Ayrshire. It is not an ancient castle—having been built about 100 years ago—but it contains much of interest. From the town of Irvine to the lodge gates is a mile, and then there is another mile to traverse before the castle itself is reached. All the principal rooms open out to a circular saloon with a cupola roof, which contains many mementos of the famous tournament of 1839, organized by the present Lord Eglinton's father, who spent £10,000 in an attempt to reproduce the chivalrous forms and ceremonies of olden times. In the saloon, too, are kept, among other objects of interest, the gun with which a poacher slew the tenth Earl of Eglinton and the battle ax used by the Percy who was killed by Montgomerie at Chevy Chase.—London Tit-Bits.

CATARRH CANNOT BE CURED with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. THE WEASEL.

His Ferocity Unbounded and His Courage Invincible.

The weasel is the most bloodthirsty of all our native carnivors. His ferocity is unbounded, his courage invincible. He is one of the few British wild animals from whom man has to fear attack.

If you meet a group of weasels you will do well not to interfere with them, for those who have done so have occasionally suffered for their temerity. His dwarfish size rather accentuates than diminishes the detestation in which he is held, for there is something uncanny in the idea of so much relentlessness and cruelty being compressed into so small a frame.

The rabbit, who will fight a fierce and bitter battle with one of his own kind, is paralyzed with fear at the mere sight of this puny foe, whom he could probably pulverize could he brace his heart to the attempt. Squealing with fear, he hops stupidly about until the little vampire springs upon his neck and buries his fangs in an artery.

Then the victim either sinks to the ground and submits to his fate or, suddenly acquiring the use of his muscles, he speeds aimlessly along, the weasel clinging to his neck till his work is done. There are few more pitiful sounds in nature than the panic stricken cry of a rabbit when he finds that he is being stalked by a weasel.—London Answers.

CANDLES POPULAR.

The World Uses More of Them Now Than It Ever Did Before.

The "tallow dip" of our grandfathers is no longer made of tallow, exactly. It is made of stearic acid, which is only one ingredient of the tallow that grows in the sheep and in the steer.

Neither is the "tallow dip" of today a real "dip." They used to take long wicks and dip them in hot tallow, time after time, till the candle had acquired the proper thickness. Today they run hot stearic acid into molds and make a hundred candles instantaneously.

The "tallow dip" on the market today, therefore, would be more accurately described if it were called a "stearic acid mold." But nevertheless it remains a tallow product. It is the direct lineal descendant of the "tallow dip" of our grandfathers. And it is still so popular that just about 130,000,000 pounds of tallow, according to the calculation of one of the best informed manufacturers of Chicago, are consumed every year in the candle factories of the United States. Although gas and kerosene and electricity have deprived the candle of a large part of the popularity to which it might be entitled, it is probable that in both hemispheres today there are more candles shedding their mild and humble radiance than in any previous period of the world's history.—Technical World.

Too Enthusiastic.

Edwin Forrest once produced a play called "Metamora." Supers were engaged to personate Indian warriors, and among them was a bright Irish lad who had a deep admiration for the great tragedian. At a point in the play where Metamora asks, "Am I not the great chief of the Pottawatomies?" the supers are supposed to grunt "Ugh, ugh!" The stage manager had carefully drilled them in what they were expected to do, but on the night of the performance the young Irishman was so transported by Forrest's acting as quite to forget that he was impersonating an Indian. When Forrest turned to the assembled warriors and thundered forth, "Am I not the great chief of the Pottawatomies?" the Irish boy's enthusiasm broke through all restraint. He leaped into the air with a wild shout and, twirling his tomahawk about his head, replied, "Begorra, ye are!"—London Standard.

Water on Gibraltar.

On the eastern side of the rock of Gibraltar there is a curious looking white patch which led an American tourist to ask whether the rock was being armor plated. It is really a catchment for rainwater to increase the reserve of water on the rock. The catchment covers ten acres. It is made of galvanized corrugated iron fixed to piles driven deep into the sandy slopes above the village of Catalan. The water collected at the foot of the catchment runs through the rock into a tunnel 2,000 feet long and is delivered into reservoirs on the western side. The yield to the inch of rainfall is 240,000 gallons.

Accounting For It.

"No," said the stubborn man, "nobody can alter my regard for Jiggins. He's a man you don't meet every day."

"I admit that," replied Markley, "but I attribute it to the fact that I loaned him $10 several months ago."

A Faint Resemblance.

"Ah, my boy," said the purse proud individual as he handed round the Flor de Tootas, "that's something like a cigar!"

"Yes," responded one of the victims; "what is it?"—London Opinion.

OF ROYAL LINEAGE.

Mrs. William Marconi Is Descended From an Irish King.

William Marconi, whose success in the establishment of regular commercial wireless telegraph service across the Atlantic is the talk of the civilized world, went to Ireland for his bride. Though he himself was born in Italy, Marconi's mother was an Irish girl, and so it was natural that the son should seek a bride in the Emerald Isle. Mrs. William Marconi was the Hon. Beatrice O'Brien, daughter of the fourteenth Baron Inchiquin and one of eight sisters. She traces her descent from the famous Irish monarch Brian Boroihme, King of Ireland in the eleventh century, who was slain at the head of his army at the battle of Clontarf. His grandson, King of Munster, had four sons, the third of whom was the progenitor of the Barons Inchiquin.

MRS. WILLIAM MARCONI.

MAKE THEM EAT DIRT.

Market Gardener's Cure For Fast Motoring.

The sequel to a collision between two expensive motor-cars, in which both were badly damaged, was an action for damages in the King's Bench Division, Loudon, which ended in a verdict for the plaintiff with one farthing damages without costs.

Some amusing evidence was given by Mr. Miller, a market gardener, who is an avowed enemy of all motorists. Counsel was unable to get from him any estimate as to the speed of the plaintiff's car. "I have ridden slower in a train," and "I have watched an express train which went pretty fast," are specimens of his answers.

In cross-examination he said he refused to give any information to the solicitors because he had had experience in giving evidence. He objected to motors altogether, and if he had his way he would make every motorist eat two pounds of dust a day. Then there would not be so much of it to spoil his strawberries. He had never ridden in a motor, and did not intend to. Continuing, he said, "I had a nice bed of strawberries, but after a few days of motor dust I should not like to have offered them to your lordship."

The Shark Papers.

A paragraph in a London newspaper the other day said that the famous "shark papers" were not damaged by the catastrophe that befell Kingston, Jamaica, last January. There are many remarkable manuscripts relating to the West Indies in the library of the Jamaica Institute, but few attract as much attention as the "shark papers" on account of the unusual story connected with them.

The brig Nancy left Baltimore for Curacoa late in the eighteenth century and was captured by the British cutter Sparrow as "a lawful prize, having been seized as the property of enemies of our sovereign Lord and King." An Englishman named Wylie, commander of the cutter, brought suit in the Court of Vice-Admiralty to be placed in possession of the Nancy and her cargo. Her owners tried to have the suit dismissed, claiming that she was not lawfully seized. They backed up the claim with what purported to be the brig's papers. Just then a remarkable find upset the defence.

Lieut. Filton, of the British navy, who was cruising on the Ferret, caught a shark off the south coast of Hayti and was much astonished to find in its stomach the papers of a brig called the Nancy. The authenticity of the shark story and of the papers was established to the satisfaction of the court, and on the strength of this and other evidence the brig and her cargo were condemned.

The actual papers found in the shark reposed until 1890 in the archives of the Vice-Admiralty, but are now in the Institute of Jamaica, wrapped in a piece of paper on which is a memorandum of their authenticity written by John Fraser, who was Surrogate in the court at that time. The head of the shark is in the United States Museum, London. The captain of the Nancy appears to have thrown her papers overboard when she was threatened with capture.

"The Devil Is Dead."

Two of the young friends of Bishop Wilberforce of Oxford, gave the authorities of the university so much trouble that they won the nicknames of Hophni and Phineas.

One day, says Mr. T. H. S. Escott, in "Society in the Country House," they were lounging about the hall at Cuddesdon Palace, singing the Lutheran refrain, "The devil is dead," when the bishop suddenly appeared.

He walked very gently up to them, and in his most caressing manner, placing one hand on each head, said in a consolatory tone:

"Alas, poor orphans!"

Growth of the Hair.

A boy's hair grows one-half slower than a girl's. In boys the average rate of growth is three feet three inches in six years, being an average of .018 inches per day. During his twenty-first and twenty-fourth years a man's hair grows quicker than at any other period.

Fooling the Fox.

The expression "as cunning as a fox" has passed into the language, but, as is the case with most extra cute gentlemen, there are occasions when Master Reynard overreaches himself. Any visitor to the country who has ever examined a chicken house in the middle of a field has probably noticed two or three short pieces of chain hanging over the hole by which the fowls enter. Although they form no obstacle to the birds, who push their way in without the faintest difficulty, they will infallibly prevent a fox from raiding the house. The latter in his superior wisdom takes them to be a trap for his capture, and although he may sit outside hungrily "licking his chops" nothing will induce him to put his head through the chains, truly a case of a little learning being a dangerous thing.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Sundowner.

A "swagman" or "swaggie"—so called from the "swag" or personal luggage wrapped up in a blanket strapped to his back—is a genuine Australian traveler in search of work, but a "sundowner" is the antipodean professional tramp. The sundowner strolls from one squatter's station to another, always taking care to arrive at sunset, for it is the traditional practice of Australian squatters to give food and shelter to all comers for the night.

Respecting Her Oath.

"Judge, will you do me a great favor?" asked the lady who was about to be put upon the stand as a witness.

"Certainly, miss. What is it?"

"Will you please ask me my age before I take the oath?"

Yes, money talks; but its favorite remark is goodby.

Danger.

"She was even more afraid of cows than most girls, so when she spied a placid animal recumbent under a tree, peacefully chewing its cud, she at first refused to go through the pasture at all. Her husband calmed her fears to some extent, and they started by, when the cow slowly commenced to get up, hind legs first, as they always do. At this the little lady shrieked with terror and said:

"Oh, Bob, hurry, hurry. He is getting ready to spring at us."—Exchange.

The Correct Way to Oil Machine

THE decreased prices of sewing machines bring them within the reach of thousands who once could not have dreamed of this time-saving device, and naturally also it popularizes the machine to such an extent that constantly new ideas are being discovered to produce fresh aspects of its work.

The machine with embroidery attachments is a standard article, but not every one knows that fancy work can be done on an ordinary machine.

Of course, only the satin or filet stitches are possible.

The entire foot is raised, and the material, stretched on the hoops, is placed under it. What beautiful work may be done in this manner is shown by the example of filet lace in the illustration.

The buttonholing on the edge is done with the plain buttonhole attachment, and with its aid even eyelet work may be done. The work is fine and even, and it would take an expert to tell it from exquisite handwork.

The oil holes should never be clogged.

In case of this accident, however, a crochet hook will be found invaluable as a means of cleaning them. When a machine has been put away for a time, it is best to clear away all stagnant oil before attempting to work or to relubricate the machine.

DIRECTIONS FOR OILING

This may be done by squirting paraffine liberally into the holes as the oiling then, and then working the needle for a few minutes on a piece of calico until the bearings are quite clear. Machine oil may then be applied.

Never drop the oil from the bottle, but pour it first into a regulation can, and then squirt it into the oil holes.

Do not oil too frequently, and be careful not to overlook any of the holes, as this causes an undue strain on some part of the mechanism.

After oiling, work the handle or treadles for a minute or two to allow the oil to diffuse, care being taken to wipe off any superfluous grease.

Before sewing, carefully wipe off with a small duster kept for the purpose the platform and the wheel, and see that the shuttle is free from cotton waste or dust. Never leave the machine unprotected when not in use.

PROTECTION FROM DUST

Make a cloth or felt cover exactly fitting it and leaded at the foot, and throw this over the machine whenever you must leave it even for a short time.

Use this cover, too, even when the wooden lid is on, as it will doubly protect the delicate mechanism.

Most seamstresses have at times been troubled by the silk tangling while they worked. Wetting the spool is often advised, and this is excellent, except with light colors, where the silk fades or spots. A good plan is to thread the silk exactly as usual, and then, instead of placing it on the rod intended for it, to put it directly beneath this on the platform of the machine. For some reason the silk will never tangle when treated thus.

If the article to be sewed is a skirt or some similar large article, place the spool of silk in a small box with a lid, and put it on the floor at the foot of the machine.

It cannot escape from the box, and one can work away for hours in this manner, with the silk dancing merrily away in the box, but never tangling at all.

The kinds of work that may be done by machine are innumerable. Even a quilt may be pieced and worked by it, and there are attachments for every variety of sewing.

Proper Method to Secure Even Hanging Skirt

In fact, the costume does not exist that may not be made entirely by machine, with the exception of sewing on buttons, hooks and eyes and boning the waist.

With all these virtues it seems strange that any one should still cling to the drudgery of continued hand sewing.

There can be no more sentiment connected with the product of a hand guiding a needle than with that of a hand guiding a machine wheel. One might as well insist on spinning and weaving one's own cloth.

So it is reasonable to expect that in the near future even trousseaus and layettes will be exclusively machine-made.

And, since so many improvements have arisen since the invention of the sewing machine, one may predict, also, that new ones will continually take place until the clumsy and inefficient needle will become a thing of the past, and will be relegated to the realm of tallow candles and spinets, while a new and resplendent type of machine will accomplish fine lace making and dainty embroidery, close darning and button sewing, as well as it now does plain hemming and back stitching.

To Have Friends

BE NEAT. There is a great charm in neatness.

Don't gush, but at the same time don't be too indifferent.

Don't have moods. Avoid the blues Be natural. People are quick to discern affectations of any kind, and have a contempt for them.

The Business Woman

THE successful business woman never loses her dignity

That does not mean that she is haughty, or unduly reserved. She must feel that her own self-respect demands that she give courteous treatment to every one she comes in contact with.

She must not snub any one, nor give obsequious attention to persons whose favor she seeks.

She must not have more theories than she can practice.

She must learn to recognise the practical side of business and meet its issues in a sensible and practical manner.

She never forgets her early struggles.

Every woman in the business life has had them—hard places, difficulties and disappointments to overcome.

Photographing Baby

IT IS a mistake to curl or dress a child's hair in some fashion different from that employed every day, as it will make the picture seem unnatural.

This same idea applies to clothes worn. If a child is in the habit of being dressed in very fancy clothes, well and good, but if only its best clothes are ruffled and betrimmed the mother must decide whether she prefers a good picture of the child or one of the clothes.

Sometimes the best photographs are secured by leaving the baby entirely to the photographer's care. He will often understand, by reason of his larger experience, just how to secure a baby's attention and to catch just the right expression on the little face.

Often this is impossible if he is interfered with by numerous loving aunts and grandparents, in addition to the mother.

The Madonna pose of mother and child may be made very pretty and artistic, but the mother should always be careful to wear something pretty and soft and white to get the real artistic effects of such a pose.

When a child is first able to stand alone, a very pretty pose is to get him to stand on a chair of the open wicker variety and allow him to lean over the back with his hands, his arms resting on the back of the chair.

Little baby hands are so often outstretched for various articles that a very pretty picture is the result if baby, when in a position, is induced to stretch forth his little right hand naturally by holding out to him some pleasing object.

Beautifying the House

THERE is no reason why city houses should present so uniformly ugly an appearance.

So many little things may be done to beautify them that it seems a pity that every householder does not attempt them.

The color of the shades has much to do with the appearance of the building. A brilliant pea green or a bright blue may spoil all its beauty.

A brownish yellow or a very dark green are the best choice, and dark blue is to be preferred to white for summer use.

At the same time, it is not necessary to maintain too prim an appearance; neatness is all that is required.

See that the paint on the door and window sills is renewed at frequent intervals. Dulled varnish makes the entire house seem shabby.

Be careful to remove immediately any dirt or mark made upon the steps and frontage.

Often the children of the neighborhood delight in defacing buildings with chalk or crayon. Remove all such marks as soon as possible after they are made.

The back of a house is just as important as is its front. Never let the back yard become littered with rubbish, even in winter.

Cut down dead vines. Remember that as many people form an opinion of you from your back view as gaze at you from the front.

Let your watchword be tidiness, keep things constantly in repair, and your house will present an improved appearance from the very beginning which it will never lose.

The Girl Who Succeeds

THE girl who succeeds in business is always neat in her dress and her work. No slipshod girl can hope to make herself a necessity in any office, factory or shop.

The girl who acts as if business bored her to death and who says she would give anything if she did not have to work downtown is the one that loses and comes in the business offices, and she is the one who is spelling out failure for herself.

The girl who is liked in the business world and becomes a fixture in the office or factory is seldom a very pretty girl, with pink cheeks, faultless complexion and naturally wavy hair.

But she is often an ordinary looking girl, who realizes that she must work for any promotion, while the pretty one will very often trust to her good looks to take the place of concentration and effort.

The girl who looks as if she really enjoyed her work, who looks out for the interests of her employer, the girl who wears a contented expression when she comes in the morning and who does not keep an eye on the clock as the hands approach the closing time, is the one who will get the most out of the business world and is the one who will always be appreciated by her employer.

One Piece Garments for Children

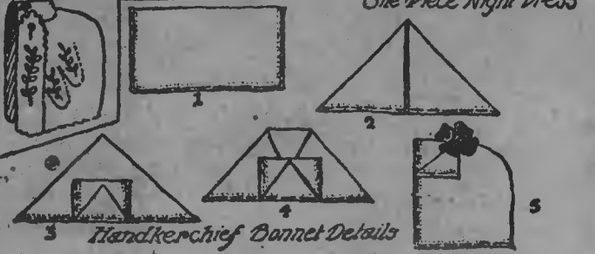
Attractive Flannel Coat

Diagram of Kimono Sacque

Dainty Little Frock of Muslin

Rabbit Bonnet Detail

One Piece Night Dress



Handkerchief Bonnet Details

BABY'S clothes are so small and must be so dainty that they afford the pleasantest of all hand-sewing, but no one wants to sew long seams and put in diminutive sleeves, and some wise woman has contributed to universal motherhood the night slip made in kimono style. These are so quickly put together that with a sewing machine six may be made in an hour and a half.

With a material, preferably nainsook, a yard or twenty-seven inches wide, tear off a strip sixty-four inches long for each "nightie." Fold it in half and then together lengthwise. Four inches from the fold on the outer edge cut in seven inches and then in a curve slope off gradually to the edge of the goods at the bottom.

In the middle of the fold a hole large enough for the neck is made about four inches wide and curved out a little lower in the front than in the back.

Tear a slit down the middle of the back about ten inches long and face one side and put an inch-wide band on the other the first for buttonholes, the second for buttons

Make a double French seam at both sides of the "nightie," hem the sleeves up the right length, and bind the neck. Cut straight around the bottom, hem up two inches, and the garment is finished and ready to wear.

The kimono idea of the Japanese was indeed a blessing now that it is so very much in vogue. Many dress patterns can be put together and cut as one-piece garments.

The only difficulty is in the under-arm seam, but the strain on this may be allowed for with a little calculation.

Kimono seams are pretty and easily washed. The French models are all open up the back to the yoke line, while the front is open down to the waist line only.

Thus the coats can be easily slipped over the head of an infant without disturbing it at all.

Petticoats are made with a waist line that buttons around the body, and it is wise to leave a large turning at the bottom of the waist where the skirt fastens on, and a large hem down the back on each side under the fastening so that the skirts will last over a year.

And now we come to the really one-piece garments. The daintiest of these novelties are the caps.

For winter they are made of a single handkerchief worn over quilted lining to keep the little head warm, and in the summer one-piece sunbonnets are made of pique or linen. The latter are called "rabbit bonnets."

The caps are made by folding a large, embroidered, lace-edged handkerchief together. Then fold the two corners at the double edge back to the middle.

From there these are turned back an inch, the apex of the triangle is brought forward to join the point where the second turning is made, the lower fold is dropped and the cap is complete.

This forms a triple edge of lace around the face and a single edge around the neck in the back. The turned back edges of the lace and a little bow to hold the completed cap together to make it both lacy and artistic.

The "rabbit bonnet" must be cut from a pattern and buttons fastened on the bonnet where the flaps of pique turn back so that the bonnet may be buttoned together, and when soiled it may be easily unfastened and ironed flat in one piece.

The advantage of the rabbit bonnet over ordinary bonnets is two-fold. First, there are no detached pieces to get lost, and secondly, the flaps of the material afford nice edges to sew lace to, and the whole bonnet is made more dressy and dainty in consequence.

Next comes the one-piece flannel sacque. This has no seams, and is only bound all round by wash ribbons and held in place by tiny bows.

Cut a complete circle of flannel, making the diameter the same length as the length of baby's arms from wrist to wrist across the shoulders.

For infants this will be about twenty-two inches, and for 1-year children about twenty-eight inches. Fold the circle together, making the material run straight along the fold. In the middle of the fold cut out a hole large enough for the tiny neck, and then cut the sacks up the front with the straight of the flannel.

With the circle still folded in half measure four and one-half inches from the corner along the edge of the semicircle and slit the sacque across the bias about five inches, or the length of baby's arm from the wrist to the armpit.

Then measure again four inches from the slit toward the front and cut a wedge out of the flannel. Do likewise with the other side and the sacque is finished all but the binding and sewing or lacking of the under-arm and sleeve seams.

Any coat may be made in this way, and circular capes may be cut and fastened separately around the neck. These may be as elaborate as desired, and the coat is most easily washed and ironed.

And here we will leave the one-piece garment for a minute and remark on the folly of making any lined coat for the very young children.

They are the most difficult things in the world to keep clean and fresh, and white flannel or white corduroy coats made unlined, with a double circular cape, will wear twice as long as a lined coat of the same material and retain their shape until they are rags. In cold weather the unlined coats may easily be worn over a quilted lining, which is warmer than any other style lining, and does not need washing, as only the overcoat gets soiled.

Then when the flannel or corduroy is soiled, it may be thrown in the tub and is not sent to the cleaners. Good soap and water is a much better cleanser for children's things than chemicals could be, and the wear and tear on the materials is less.

Bearing in mind the circle and its possibilities, it is easy to construct one-piece garments for any child who is not too big for the circle made on the full width of the material.

For a one-year-child whose skirts are short, the circle makes both cotton and flannel skirts. It also makes capes of any size desired or required, and it makes flounces for skirts or to hang over the shoulder to form half sleeves for the little girl. It can be wired and lost into a lingerie hat.

Altogether its uses are endless, and any woman with a little imagination and a straight eye may find, with the assistance of a compass, that patterns are a superfluous luxury.

CHAPTER II.

THE household at Avenue Lodge consisted at this period of Nicholas Harding, M. P., J. P. (also of Fish Street Hill, E. C., and Winwood Hall, Suffolk); his five daughters, his manservants and maidservants and a certain stranger within his gates.

Nicholas Harding was fifty years of age and a widower for the second time. He was a big, blond, jovial, loud, overbearing man, without a gray hair in his massive reddish head or a sign of sorrow upon his healthy, pink, countenance. Yet private bereavement was not the only misfortune that had fallen to a lot otherwise enviable enough. Since the last general election a little charge of flagrant bribery had found its way even to an assize court, where it had indeed broken down, but not in a fashion wholly satisfactory to the accused.

An important witness had refused to open his mouth, as some said because he was well paid by Mr. Harding to keep it shut and endure the penalty. In any event the charge was not permitted to be withdrawn, but the action merely dismissed to allow of a new trial, of which nothing had been heard up to the present time. But a naked sword thus dangled over Nicholas Harding's ruddy, hard head, whose true temper the situation served to prove. So far from resigning his seat he returned to the house with a shrug and a half smile and in the whole matter continued to bear himself with such modest gallantry as to remove the prejudices of many who had at first sided with the enemy.

Claire was not yet twenty-one. The only child of his first wife, Claire had never occupied the place of the younger ones in her father's affections, had been consistently repressed in childhood, but had since contrived to please that critic by her clever management of an enlarged establishment. Indeed, the girl had come home from school very capable and shrewd and self possessed, with an admirable drawing room manner and even better qualities of which Mr. Harding would have thought less, so they were carefully hidden from his view, for Claire had also her faults and was both secretive and politic in the home circle as a result of that early repression and injustice. Given that cause and this effect and some clandestine folly may be counted upon in nine cases out of ten, and Claire's was not the tenth.

It came about at Wiswood Hall, the Suffolk shooting box where the family had spent the last three autumns. Nicholas Harding had begun there in characteristic fashion by quarreling with the gentle, white haired parson (who would yet be neither domineered nor overborne by an interloping Landgrave) and by forbidding his daughters the church, glebe, rectory or any communication with its inmates from that day forth. A week or two later he came full upon Claire and the rector's idle son comparing notes in the lane, and a pretty scene ensued. Mr. Harding shook his stick at the lad, who snatched it from him and snapped it across his knee. Claire was imprisoned under lock and key for four and twenty hours, and young Tom Erichsen shinned up the waterspout and sat on her window sill while the rest were at dinner. But this and succeeding incidents never came to the ears of Nicholas Harding. And partly in revenge for the indignity to which she had been subjected and partly by reason of those adventitious traits already touched upon, the motherless and then all but friendless Claire disobeyed and intrigued thenceforward without a qualm.

The single page known to Nicholas Harding was a thing of the past in his mind. He never thought of it now and for the best of reasons. He firmly believed that Claire intended to marry an entirely different person, of whom he himself most cordially approved, and it made him for the first time as cordially approve of Claire.

And Claire on a sudden divined it all and saw (also for the first time) the false position in which she had placed herself and yet never regretted it, but rather gloried in having the least little thing to suffer for Tom's sake.

Now, the other man in her mind and in Nicholas Harding's, too, was the stranger within their gates.

James Edward William, Sir Emilius Daintree's son and heir to the baronetcy and entailed estates, was a melancholy, brooding bachelor little worse than thirty years of age. Unlike Mr. Harding, however, he looked much older, with his swarthy, saturnine countenance and the white threads in the coal black whiskers that curled beneath his deep set chin. His lines had fallen in very different places from those of Mr. Harding. He had spent most of his restless life abroad. His soul had been burdened with a very different temperament; he had that of a poet, and his manhood had been poisoned at the fount by one of those wretched family quarrels which redound to nobody's credit and of which the outside world never get the rights. It was only known that Sir Emilius and his son had not been on speaking terms for years.

Such sympathy as is felt in these matters was entirely on the side of the son. The present baronet was not a popular man. His character was eccentric and his morals so notorious that in many quarters the quarrel was from the first considered creditable to young Daintree. When, however, after an absence of eight years the latter came home on leave from New South Wales, where he was a magistrate and a man of some importance and more promise in the young colony, and when the old savage, his father, not only still refused a reconciliation, but publicly cut his son on every possible occasion, then—well, the indignation might have been greater had James Daintree been himself a more popular man. But the truth was he had come home a morbid, sensitive misanthropist, and this treatment made him ten times worse. He was seldom seen by his old friends anywhere, but he happened to make a stanch new one in the person of Nicholas Harding, whose house, indeed, became the wanderer's home.

Claire's attitude will be readily apprehended. Daintree opened his bruised heart to her, and she considered his father the most abominable old man alive. It was at Avenue Lodge that a parcel of faded flowers arrived for Daintree and drove him almost crazy with rage and grief. He had placed them a day or two before upon his mother's grave. He burst into a storm of oaths and tears before the girl, who thought the worse of him for neither. Lady Daintree had died the year before. In fact, it was her death that had brought the outcast home for the reconciliation for which he pleaded in vain.

He had the sympathy of all who knew him. That of Claire was spontaneous and heartfelt and frank. But it never blinded her to Daintree's faults, which were those of a warped, egotistical, but yet an ardent nature. She cured him of one or two. But he was a man with a weight upon his soul, and she could not cure him of that. She was not told enough. After all, too, her head and her heart were full of another. And thus she was slower to detect the new lover in the new friend than would or could have been the case in normal circumstances.

Indeed, it might never have dawned upon her until he spoke but for the calling in of Lady Starkie to lead her distinguished countenance to the first dinner party given by Nicholas Harding after his late arrival. Lady Starkie was a lieutenant general's widow and a shrewd woman of the world.

He stood askance before her.

CHAPTER III.

THE garden was the ordinary one, but with top heavy additions beyond and behind its neighbor on either side. And the arbor was, so to speak, in the bottle's neck. There was no getting to the meadow without passing within a yard or two of its rustic portal.

There was, however, a shallow shrubbery down either wall of the original garden, and when Daintree had been alone about a minute the laurels on his left began a risky rustle in the still evening air. Luckily he was already in too deep a contemplation of his last and angriest wound to hear aught but the girl's voice and his own still ringing through the arbor. But as for Claire, one moment she held her breath in horrid certainty that he had heard: in another she was satisfied that he had not and had forgotten his existence the next. Indeed, by the time she looked upon the meadow, asleep beneath its soft gray coverlet of dew, the wide world contained but one live man, and he was at the gate upon the farther side.

Yet was he? Around the meadow ran a gravel path, upon which she thought her feet pattered loud enough for all the world to hear. Then she dropped the key in reaching it from its accustomed crevice, and it rang upon the gravel, and in her nervousness she was an age fumbling at the lock. Yet no sound of hers brought a word of greeting from the other side. He had not come! As she pulled the gate open she felt certain of it; and then beheld and heard him, advancing shyly through the sibilant grass, with some white thing in his hand and a young moon just risen over Primrose hill.

"Tom," she cried softly, "you are come! Oh, thank God! I have kept you"—

The words failed upon her parted lips. He stood askance before her, shamefaced and never noticing her tremulous, outstretched hands. His own held out to her a folded note.

"Read that," he said hoarsely. "I am only here because I had not money for the stamp!"

A great chill struck to the girl's loyal heart. It was the doubt that had kept her awake, now a doubt no more. Her trembling ceased. She turned her back on Erichsen and read by the moonlight the candid words that he had written in St. James' park.

"My own poor boy!" she whispered through her tears. "Oh, thank heaven you had no money for those stamps!"

"Claire," he gasped, falling back, "do not speak to me like that! I am not worthy. You don't understand. You should go your way and never think of me again."

"There is somebody else," said the girl calmly.

"Hush!" he said hoarsely. "It is not that. I love you, my darling—ah! God knows how truly now! Yet I have come to contemptible grief. I have been everything that's bad."

He groaned. She said nothing, but caught his hand and pressed it.

"Oh, Claire," he cried, "it was madness, I think! I was mad at leaving you and Old England perhaps forever.

And the ship wouldn't sail, Claire; the ship wouldn't sail! When I went to the office, thinking I had about three days, they told me she would be three weeks. I walked out of that office swearing I'd find some other, but all I found was the road to the bad. Drink and dice and cards! You asked me to tell you all. I tell you all I can. I tell it you to set you against me and make you hate me forever. That is the kindest thing. Claire, Claire, why don't you strike me? Why don't you scorn me and leave me to my fate? Oh, oh, I could bear it better than this!"

Her warm arms were about him. They clasped him tight. He could hear her heart and his own.

Suddenly she stood apart from him, with small clinched fists glittering with rings. He held his breath.

"The man who is at the bottom of all this," said she, "who is he? How was it? You speak of him in your letter. Tell me more."

"What is the use? The thing is done. It's past mending, and it was my own miserable fault. Most of my money went in fair play and—riot! He only relieved me of the residue. Yet I tell you, Claire" (with sudden fury), "I'd go contentedly to my account if I could only kick him along in front of me the whole way! Yes, I'd hang for the hound and think the satisfaction cheap at the price!"

"What is his name?" demanded Claire.

"Blaydes," said Tom, "B-l-a-y-d-e-s. Captain Blaydes, forsooth, on half pay! Blaydes of the guards, who disgraced themselves for all time by not"—

He broke off and stood looking at the girl.

"By not what?" whispered Claire, who had glanced involuntarily through the gate toward the distant lighted windows, and who was now trembling again, with a new and dreadful agitation.

"By not cashiering your friend, Captain Blaydes!"

"He is no friend of mine!"

"He is at your house tonight!" cried Erichsen, with uncontrolled excitement.

"No—he is not."

"Then give me his address."

"Tom—I cannot."

"You cannot? You who said you would do anything in your power to help me? And this is all I ask—this villain's address! Oh, Claire, he is not fit for you to speak to!"

Claire answered with deliberate reservations. Her duty was clear as the stars. Tom and Blaydes must be kept apart—that night at all events. Then many things must be done, but quietly and with due forethought. Above all, no fresh fuel must be added to the vindictive fires now smoldering in her lover's speaking eyes. So Claire decided to keep to herself her own opinion of Captain Blaydes.

She had noticed without comment the heavy stick lying in the grass. She turned faint at the thought of her fiery Tom encountering the captain so armed and so aggrieved, but she insisted on his telling her of his wrong.

Tom promised not to seek an interview with Blaydes for two clear days and not to harm him then, and on this understanding Claire at last confessed that the captain had taken rooms for the summer in the village of West End, a bare mile from where they stood.

They had finished with Blaydes and were beginning to say goodby, when Claire started and vowed she heard a rustle at the gate. At that instant there came a breath of wind; the gate shut with a clean metallic click; she was locked out, for on this side there was only the keyhole, and the key was within.

He was over the wall and back at her side within the minute. She was trembling terribly. All her nerve seemed gone. She must fly—she must fly—but he would come again the next evening? And again she was looking up divinely in his eyes, his right hand clasped in both of hers, and again the burden of past weakness bowed him down, but this time there was a counterpoise of hope and high resolve, a vision of atonement and self respect regained that gave to his voice a clearer, manlier note and to Claire in the thin moonlight a first and last glimpse of the Tom Erichsen of Winwood uplands and red autumn afternoons. But it was now her turn to be refused.

"No, Claire," he said, "I am coming back no more. You have put it in my power not only to have my little own again, but to redeem the past, and I must set to work at once. If I don't get that £35 now you may hear of me next in Horsemonger lane. If I do there's an Indiaman—the Jean—sailing on Monday, and I sail in her if there's a steerage berth still going. At all events my debts here will be paid and done with. There may even be a few pounds over to make me decent when I land, and if that firm won't have me now some other may. You shall hear of me from there. There are not going to be two false starts. And one day, Claire, I am coming back a better man than I go away, and it will all be thanks to you. Oh, thank you for your noble letter! It has saved me on the brink, little as I deserved it. I shall never stoop or sink—like this—again. That I promise you. But you should think no more of me! I was never worthy of you. I never can be that. It is best to forget me, dear. You must not spoil your life by waiting for a man"—

Her palm sealed his lips.

"For the only man I want," she whispered through her tears. "Darling, I could wait forever!"

"I will write and tell you about the £35," he continued, regaining control of his voice. "It will be all your doing, my own brave Claire. No, no! Not my own! Never that any more!"

"Forever, darling! Forever and ever and ever!"

"No, no! Only be happy yourself, and forgive me for all I made you suffer. I shall never forgive myself. Goodby, beloved! Oh, goodby, goodby!"

He strained her to his breast, but left no kiss upon those pleading, praying, upturned lips. He was not worthy to touch them with his. He remembered this up to the end.

It was twenty minutes past 10 by Captain Blaydes' gold repeater when through the window of a hackney coach, creeping all too slowly along the Finchley road, the captain recognized a wayfarer, who also recognized him, and thrust his iron gray head through the opposite window to curse the coachman and bid him drive faster.

As he pulled it in again Tom Erichsen scrambled into the coach upon the other side, an unpleasant smile upon his set face and his thick stick in his hand. He had not promised to avoid Blaydes if chance threw them together, and chance had done so, for Tom was on his way to make his bed once more in the fields.

"You infernal ruffian!" roared the captain. "Hi, coachman! The police!"

"You miserable swindler!" retorted Tom. "If you don't stop the coach at once and step outside with me you're a ruined man. I'll go on to the Hardings with you and expose you"—

"The Hardings!"

"Yes. You see, I know all your little plans."

"Little plans!"

The captain gasped and stopped the coach.

CHAPTER IV.

THE half pay officer was a thick set, youngish man, with a smooth, sly, yellow face and hair like spun steel. He walked with a chronic limp and a stout gold headed cane and was seldom without the genial, flattering smile that had tempted Tom Erichsen and other young flies before him into a parlor from which no pocket returned intact.

"Come, now, my good fellow," said his normal voice, "what the deuce is all this? You have treated me very cavalierly and I you very obligingly, I think, for the elder man. What is it you want, Mr."—

"My £35."

"Your £35? Yours? Look here, I begin to remember you. Your name is Eric—Eric something or other. And I was fool enough to play with you, Eric. I remember that too. You were going off to the Cape or somewhere. You begin to take shape in my mind. But £35! I recall nothing of the kind. My impression was that we settled up and parted friends."

"You settled with a check not worth the paper it was written on. Your name was unknown at the bank! It was a check for £35."

"I should like to see it. At least, you won't mind telling me whether it was drawn on Stuckey's bank?"

"It was."

"Exactly!" cried the captain. "It's as plain as a pikestaff now. My dear young fellow, I apologize from the very bottom of my heart, for it has been my mistake after all. What do you think I did? Wrote out my check in Dick Vale's check book. You recollect Dick Vale? He banks at Stuckey's. 'Pon my soul, I'm sorry. Here's my hand!"

"I prefer your money."

"Well, you shall see it tomorrow. I don't carry £35 about in my evening clothes."

"Then suppose we turn back to your rooms and you pay me there and now!"

"And where are my rooms, pray?"

"In the village of West End."

Blaydes swore a puzzled oath and thumped his cane upon the ground. "You know a lot!" he snarled.

"I know where you're going, and I'm coming too. I don't lose sight of you tonight."

And they stepped out with no more words, though Blaydes ground his teeth and gripped his cane and tried his best to drop a foot or two behind. But Tom's eye was on him. So he stopped at a stile, whereupon Tom stopped, too, and as they stood there passed a laborer, who stared and wished them good night.

"See here, Erichsen," exclaimed the captain, "I object to discussing private matters on a turnpike road. Here's a path that's a short cut back into town. Suppose I come a past of the way with you and talk this thing over without fear of being heard. What do you say?"

"As you like. Your way is mine."

Blaydes shrugged his broad shoulders, tucked his cane under one arm and laboriously crossed the stile. Tom then followed him into a sloping field, with a beaten right of way running uphill through the dewy grass. They climbed this path with the young moon in their eyes, but not a word upon their lips, and Tom's thick stick grasped tight by the knob. The ascent brought them to a second hedge, backed by a row of horse chestnuts all hazy with tiny leaves, and to a hollow beech beside the second stile. Here the captain dropped his cane in the grass and, limping pitiably, begged the other to pick it up. But Tom merely shifted it with his foot, keeping a strange eye on Blaydes as he did so. The cane in the grass had no gold knob, and the captain's right hand was tucked inside his cloak.

"Very prettily planned," said Tom, with a sneer, "but I should like to see the rest of that sword stick!"

The other laughed.

"I only drew it in case of need. You are such a violent young blood! Ah, you will have it, will you? There, then—and there—and there!"

The yard of thin, tempered steel had been casually produced, and Tom had instantly struck at it with his stick. Next moment the point was within an inch of his body, but Tom retreated nimbly, hitting high up the blade with all his might. It snapped at the third blow, whizzed in the air and came down sticking in the grass. Only the gold head and three inches of blade were left in the captain's tingling hand.

"Chuck it away," said Tom, "and I drop my stick. That's better. Now about that money. You didn't bring me up here to run me through the body, of course! What was your object?"

"To settle with you—fairly," said Blaydes, with a lurch in his low voice. "I am overdue elsewhere, as you have found out—the Lord knows how! If I had the money on me, it should be yours this minute. As I haven't it I propose this compromise—wait till tomorrow and I'll make it fifty and give you an I. O. U. on the spot!"

"No, no, Blaydes. Once bit—once bit! Very sorry, but it can't be done."

Blaydes muttered an oath as he took out his watch, pressed the spring, and it struck 10 and then the three-quarters, like fairy bells. He did, not put the watch away again, but stood with it in his hands and presently detached the chain from his waistcoat. He had already turned his face to the moon, and he now glanced over his shoulder and beckoned to Tom.

"Just have a look at this," he said. "No; take it in your hands and examine it properly."

The watch was a repeater of a type even then old fashioned. It was very handsome and heavy and fat, with a yellow dial and a back like a golden saucer. Tom turned it over, and the moon shone on the captain's monogram.

"Well, but what have I got to do with this?"

"Pawn it!"

"Pawn your watch!"

"And lend me the ticket and never pester me again! It won't be the first time it's been in. I've had £40 for it before today and never less than thirty.

Tom retreated nimbly, hitting high up the blade with all his might.

You may get what you can. All I want is the pawn ticket and your undertaking to leave me alone from this day on!"

"Leave you alone! I shall get a berth of some sort aboard an Indiaman that sails on Monday. Do you mean it, Blaydes? Do you mean what you say?"

"Mean it? Of course I mean it! Put the watch in your pocket and give me a pencil."

"And the chain?"

"And the chain."

It was made of long gold links and short silver ones, with a huge bunch of seals at one end. Tom pocketed the lot without compunction and then produced his stump of lead pencil.

"Here you are."

"Got any paper?"

"Not a scrap."

"Well, well, then we must make this do." And Blaydes produced a small sheaf of bills paper tied with pink tape, leaned upon the stile and, without untying the tape, wrote for a little on the outside sheet, moistening the pencil with his tongue.

"Sign that," said he and handed the packet to Tom, who held it to the light and read as follows:

Received from J. Montgomery Blaydes, late captain Coldstream guards, his watch and chain, etc., in settlement of all claims, and in consideration of which I undertake to return pawn ticket for same to said J. M. Blaydes, Ivy cottage, West End, within three days from this date. Signed, ——, April 27, 1897.

Tom read this paper aloud twice through, looked again at the watch and chain, weighed them in his hand, took a third look at the paper and signed his name in the blank space without a word.

China has just demanded of Russia an indemnity of £12,500 for the death of a Chinaman killed during the recent mutiny of Russian sailors in Vladivostock.

SLEUTH WAS IN PERIL

STIRRING ADVENTURE IN LONDON'S VILEST SLUM.

Inspector Walsh, Famous Scotland Yard Detective, Has Had Exciting Career—Arrested Three Thousand Criminals—Attacked by Gang of Safe-Breakers—Had Close Call But Landed His Men.

Ten million dollars' worth of stolen property recovered and three thousand men arrested, among them many of the cleverest and most desperate criminals of modern times. That is a record, which, shared between half a dozen detectives, would suffice to give each one of them a claim to more than ordinary distinction. Considered as the work of one man alone, it stamps Inspector John Walsh, the famous Scotland Yard sleuth, as a veritable Napoleon of his profession, writes a London, England, correspondent.

"I have been in many tight places, but I think the adventure that brought my life into the most peril was the arrest of a gang of safe-breakers in the old Seven Dials in the early days of my career," said Mr. Walsh. "I was attached to the Bow street station. The Seven Dials in those days was one of the worst, if not the worst, places for criminals in the world. Every type of crook sought refuge there.

"One of the worst gangs of this district included, among others, probably the most desperate special safe man in the history of crime—'Blinkey Tim' Davey and his partner Morrison. The gang had committed a series of bold and successful robberies in the north of England and had come to the Seven Dials to enjoy the proceeds. I noticed Davey at a race meet, flashily dressed and with plenty of money. I was known to him, so I put another on to him, and he was followed to a house at King's Cross. Subsequent watching showed that the men entered the house only from the rear, the front being perfectly dark.

"We finally decided upon a raid, and three of us repaired to the house one night after Davey had been followed there. One man remained on the outside, while another man and I let ourselves in by a false key. As we entered we ran plump into Davey and four other men. Davey seemed to be the only one armed, and his gun stared me right in the face.

"'Put your handcuffs on the floor,' he said, 'or you're a dead man.'

"I saw there was no good delaying matters, so, making a bluff to obey, I jumped at Davey, and before he could pull the trigger, knocked the revolver from his hand and in a moment was rolling on the floor with him. My companion grabbed the gun and held the other four men at bay. I broke two of Davey's ribs in the fight, and we finally handcuffed the men and took them to the station.

"Davey was eventually identified as the man who during a burglary in Birmingham shot twice at a man and wounded him in the shoulder. He and another of the gang got 15 years, another ten and another seven. Jerry Schriven, the remaining member, was turned over to the Liverpool police, who had something against him."

unwritten law that the keeper of the great seal must not leave England, but the present Chancellor, Lord Loreburn, received permission from the King to visit Canada. The seal in formed of two heavy silver plates which fit closely, and they are kept in an eight-inch box.

Freak Societies.

England, too, can boast of her freak societies. There is, for instance, the Appendicitis Society, a fashionable and select circle, the members of which must give proof that they have undergone an operation for appendicitis.

The Society for Putting Woman in Her Proper Place was formed in London a few months ago with the object of combating the movement for woman's suffrage.

There is also a society of bald heads and two or three societies of bachelors and a few run in the interests of old maids.

In Germany not long ago was formed a Society for the Encouragement of Adipose Tissue, an organization which stoutly defended the cause of fat men.—Manchester Guardian.

Fasted For 34 Days.

"Although he has been enclosed in his glass prison for 34 days," says The Gazette, "M. Beaute is still alive and hearty. He has subsisted for this time on either soda water or plain water, to the extent of one pint daily, and a couple of cigarettes per day. Audiences averaging 2,800 per day see him. Some do no hesitate to describe him as a fake, but mere wasting of a strong man to the extent of two stones in two weeks ought to convince the most skeptical."

On coming out, M. Beaute selected a cup of bovril and a biscuit out of the pile of various foods put before him.

Not by the Police.

Bill—Were you ever in a drinking place when it was being pulled, Jill?

Jill—Sure! I was in a dining car once!

Seventeen men busy at making road near Nice, France, yesterday, were buried in a mountain slide, and only three were rescued.

GRATEFUL MEN AND WOMEN PRAISE PE-RU-NA.

Mrs. Ellen Nagle, 414 4th St., Green Bay, Wis., writes: "I have often heard Peruna praised and it is more widely known here than other medicines, but I never knew what a splendid medicine it really was until a few weeks ago when I caught a bad cold which settled all over me.

"The doctor wanted to prescribe, but I told him I was going to try Peruna and sent for a bottle and tried it. I felt much better the next morning and within five days I had not a trace of any lameness or cough."

Prince Jonah Kalanianaole, Dewey Hotel, Washington, D. C., Delegate to Congress from Hawaii, writes: "I can cheerfully recommend your Peruna as a very effective remedy for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."

Hon. C. C. Brooks, Mayor of Sunbury, Ohio, also Attorney for Farmers' Bank and Sunbury Building and Loan Co., writes: "I have the utmost confidence in the virtue of Peruna. It is a great medicine. I have used it and I have known many of my friends who have obtained beneficial results from its use. I cannot praise Peruna too highly."

Cystitis Entirely Relieved.

Miss Mattie McArthur, care of Hospital, Medical Lake, Wash., writes: "I have not written to you for some time, but, Oh, I have given you many words of praise. I am so well. I had cystitis very badly and could not walk any distance without suffering intense pain, but I do not have a touch of my old suffering now. I can never praise Peruna enough. I am telling every one how much good Peruna has done for me."

Catarrh of Head and Throat.

Mrs. William H. Hinchliffe, 20 Myrtle street, Beverly, Mass., writes: "I have taken four bottles of Peruna, and I can say that it has done me a great deal of good for catarrh of the head and throat. I recommend Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh. I do not think I ever felt much better. I am really surprised at the work I can do. I do not think too much praise can be said of Peruna."

Suffered With LaGrippe.

Mrs. H. A. S. Marsh, 2128 Reservoir St., Los Angeles, Cal., President Woman's Benevolent Association, writes: "I suffered with la grippe for seven weeks, and nothing I could do or take helped me until I tried Peruna.

"I felt at once that I had at last secured the right medicine and I kept steadily improving. Within three weeks I was fully restored, and I am glad that I gave that truly great remedy a trial.

"I will never be without it again."

Used Pe-ru-na For Bronchitis.

Mr. Frank Battle, Jr., First street, near Charlotte Ave., West Nashville, Tenn., writes: "I desire to say for the benefit of others that your Peruna has unquestionably cured me of chronic bronchitis. It is the grandest discovery of the age for throat and lungs."

Peruna is not simply a palliative to relieve some of of the distressing symptoms. It brings permanent relief.

Malarial Fever For Several Months.

Mrs. Sue M. Morris, 2214 Patterson St., Nashville, Tenn., writes: "Last fall a severe attack of malarial fever laid me up for some months. My condition was serious for a time and the doctor who was attending me did not seem able to cope with the trouble.

"A neighbor advised me to let the doctor's prescription alone and try Peruna, extolling its virtues to the skies, and I am now ready to do the same, for in three days I was much better and in ten days I was able to be up and in two weeks every trace of malaria had left my system.

"I now use Peruna off and on when in need of a tonic and it braces me up wonderfully."

"The Doctors Gave Me Up."

Mr. Lewis Kitchen, Hulington, Ohio, writes: "I cannot thank you enough for the good your Peruna has done me. About six months ago I could not leave my bed, and the doctors gave me up saying that I had consumption and could not live. Then a friend recommended Peruna to me, and I commenced using it.

"When I started to use your Peruna I weighed 117 pounds, and now I weigh 172 pounds. I had been sick for ten years, and was so sick I could not turn over in bed when I began the use of Peruna. I think it is the greatest medicine of its time.

"I am now feeling well and hearty and would not be without Peruna."

Weak and Nervous.

Mr. Charles Brown, Rogersville, Tenn., writes: "I feel it my duty to write you a few words in praise of your Peruna. I have tried many different remedies, but have found that Peruna is the greatest tonic on earth, and a perfect system builder.

"A friend advised me to take Peruna for indigestion, and it cured me in a short time. I was very weak and nervous, could sleep but little at night, but Peruna cured that tired, all-gone feeling, and made me feel like a new man, so I heartily recommend it to all who are weak and run down. Peruna will give new life and energy. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and will not forget to recommend it on every hand. I will answer any letter from those desiring to know what Peruna has done for me."

Systemic Catarrh.

Miss Marie Lesser, 926 W. 36th street, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I am glad to give a good word for Peruna, and I hope that all who see this who are troubled with systemic catarrh as I was for years, will profit by it. I had tried many remedies, but none did more than give me temporary relief and some did not even do that. I took Peruna at the suggestion of a friend and was more than pleased and surprised at the results. I am now perfectly well and strong."

True Cause of Disease.

IN these days almost every ailment is supposed to be caused by disease germs.

The medical profession as well as the people, seem to have gone mad over the germ theory of disease.

The universal fear and dread of disease germs is becoming a very serious matter to the welfare and happiness of the people.

Dr. Hartman has consistently contended through all the rise and spread of the germ theory, that most diseases are caused by climatic influences.

For instance, catching cold is responsible for more than one-half of the ills to which human beings are subject.

Danger of Neglected Colds.

A person catches cold easily, thinks nothing about it, neglects it, when it finally becomes settled in some organ of the body, and chronic disease is the result.

A few doses of Peruna in the beginning of the cold would have saved months of suffering, as well as great expense for treatment.

Instead of trying to dislodge or kill some imaginary germ, if Peruna was used at the proper time its tonic properties and anti-catarrhal qualities would soon convince the patient that he has found the right remedy.

Keep Peruna in the house. Use it whenever cold or climatic affections assail, and sickness in the household will become greatly lessened, if not entirely prevented.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

Mr. Christian Hofmann, R. F. D. 1, Slatington, Pa., writes: "For many years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach. I was coughing day and night. After having tried three doctors and many remedies, one of your almanacs came to my hand, and I bought some Peruna. So far I have taken six bottles, and I have not suffered with catarrh this summer. I am cured and Peruna did it. I give Peruna to my children when they feel bad and you should see how healthy they are."

Nose, Throat and Stomach.

Mr. Delbert B. Craft, Lowell, Ind., writes: "For a long time I suffered with chronic catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach. I would continually take cold and my stomach was in bad condition. I truly suffered untold misery. I took various medicines and tried the treatment of several physicians, but I felt no better. A friend advised me to take Peruna. I wrote to Dr. Hartman, who prescribed treatment. As soon as I commenced to take Peruna I was surprised at the relief it gave me. I kept on taking it until I had taken thirteen bottles and was cured."

Some Very Interesting Pointers on Problem "Travelling Steerage"

A Trip, Third Class, In a Modern Atlantic Liner.

PASSING THE SHIP'S DOCTOR

Each "Emigrant" Examined as He Boards the Vessel—The Meals and the Bill of Fare—The Bunks, the Bedding and the Washroom.

To be a real bona fide emigrant it is necessary to be very particular, for nowhere does etiquette abound as it does in the steerage of a ship. To begin with, never refer to "emigrants or steerage passengers;" talk always of "third class passengers." Then be careful to find some fault with every dish that is served. "The tea is too strong or too weak," "I never pay less than 60 cents a pound for mine at home," "I would not offer a beggar coffee like this," "I cannot touch soup," "I cannot eat beans, I have such a delicate digestion," "My doctor has forbidden me to touch bread, and I never eat anything but toast"—these are favorite and popular remarks.

It does not matter whether you have ever before had meat more than once a month, grumble you must. For what other purpose did you pay your $30?

Dress also is an important item. It is well to travel provided with a silk or lace blouse and a large white shawl. It is also customary to regret deeply that you have not traveled second class, as you at first intended doing. Of course all your friends think you are traveling second. Whatever would Amelia say if she knew the truth? Then it is a great pity that you have packed your fur coat away in the box in the hold, and it is inconsiderate of the steward not to let you get it out. And your beautiful blue silk dress with the pearl trimming!

I learned all this while traveling from London to New York as an ordinary emigrant, says a British writer.

The ship I crossed in carried between 600 and 700 third class passengers. As we board her in single file the ship's doctor dexterously turned our eyelids inside out to see whether we were in good health. Then came a long wait, the children crying pitifully and the women too tired to hush them, until at last we again passed in single file before the ship's officers. Then our tickets were taken, and we were at liberty to go to our cabins.

Soon after the bell was rung for dinner, followed by the arrival of the second and first class passengers, and at 4 p. m. we sailed away.

The food on board was plentiful and excellent of its kind. For breakfast, which was served at 7 a. m., we had tea and coffee, porridge and milk, a meat stew or fish, bread, butter—generally fresh—and jam and marmalade. At 10:30 beef tea could be had for the asking. For dinner, at 12 m., there were soup, meat with two vegetables, a milk pudding with some stewed fruit, and every other day a couple of oranges or apples each. For tea, at 5 o'clock, we had some kind of meat stew or sausages, potatoes, milk pudding with stewed fruit, bread, butter, cheese and tea. At 7 o'clock gruel was served and biscuits and cheese placed on the table.

Clean white tablecloths were laid for every meal, which, what with the rolling of the ship and the babies—who mostly ate, unreproved, with their hands—were absolutely necessary. The stewards—some sixteen in number—had clean linen jackets and aprons twice a day, and the cabins and passages were cleaned out and washed down twice a day.

It was the sight of my berth which gave me my first shock. I had read in the regulations that a bed and bedding were supplied, and I had pictured linen sheets and feather pillows. I found a hay mattress and pillow in a clean linen overall, a gray woolen blanket—and that was all. The hay is taken out and burnt at the end of each voyage.

The washing accommodations were perhaps the worst inconvenience. There was one large room, with rows of basins all round it. As a matter of fact very few of the passengers really minded. I was told that one line had once fitted up a bathroom in the steerage quarters of a vessel, but the bath had rusted away long before it was used. Steerage passengers also never want to undress. Not even the children are put to bed properly. There was one little chap of three in the cabin next to mine whose boots were not taken off from the day he left England to the day he landed in New York.

It was a particularly rough crossing for the time of year. Nearly everybody was ill, including the stewards, and the chaos that reigned for one day and a night was indescribable. Men, women and children simply lay under the hatchway in bunches, and when the ship rolled to one side they rolled, too, and when she lurched forward they rolled forward.

Perhaps it was because of the rough sea that the doctor became so popular. He was singularly kind and never minded being fetched at any hour of the day or night. He had something good for every ache and pain, and the children adored him. About the fourth day out we had to show our vaccination marks or be vaccinated again.

After seven days at sea we were told that the next morning we should be at New York. The girls put their hair in curlers, the women washed their babies, and the men had their boots cleaned. All that night nobody seemed to think of sleeping, and by 4 in the morning most of the emigrants had their luggage strapped up and were ready to land. At 4:30 there was a cry of "All on deck!" and on deck, breakfastless and cold, we had to go. One man who went up to have a wash was not allowed down to his berth again, and there he stood in the chilly dawn, with the rain pouring down, without coat or shirt.

For two hours we stood and shivered, watching the mail being taken off by a tug, while within a couple of hundred yards of us lay land. Presently a little, round, pompous looking tug steamed up, and a round, pompous looking man in a heavy fur coat stepped on board—the United States of America doctor for whom we had waited two long hours.

We marched past him, a long line of cold and shivering humanity, and then we had breakfast.

Then we steamed into the New York harbor.

We stood, baggage in hand, all ready to be landed and taken over to Ellis island, when suddenly the cry went round, "No steerage passengers landed today; perhaps tomorrow, perhaps not till next week. The dockmen are on strike!"

The sides of the steamer touched land, the noise of the street cars would be heard above the shouts of the workmen, but for all the chance of us walking on that land and using those cars we might as well have been in the middle of the Atlantic. That was the longest day I ever spent. To stay still and inactive while the life of a big city rolled past me—the minutes seemed hours and the hours days.

But it was better than it might have been, and the next day we were taken to Ellis island, packed together as tight as sardines in a box on board a round, many decked steamer. There we were made to march in single file before inspection officers and doctors, our vaccination cards pinned to our coats as the card of a prize cow is tied round its neck. About three minutes is devoted to each person under ordinary circumstances. One's eyelids are again turned inside out. Sometimes the doctors chalk something on an emigrant's shoulder, which means that they think something is wrong. "H" means heart, and "L" means lung. Then the emigrant is detained for a thorough examination, and, if necessary, is "deferred." He then has to pass before a jury, who decide whether he is to be permitted to land or shall be deported. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Playing.

To most people who have had a real childhood, not cramped by overwork, physical or mental or starved by sordidness or filled with an intellectuality beyond their years, "Alice's Adventures In Wonderland" is not far afield, the children of Kenneth Grahame's "Golden Age" are real people, and "Peter Pan" is more than a delightful play. Lewis Carroll and Mr. Grahame and Mr. Barrie have all told the truth, because with real children things are always being "made believe" just a little different from what they actually are. Playing house is a fig tree where your roof is made by broad leaves and where wide branches make your floor, your successive stories, your easy stairways; playing ship on a sofa or in an invalid's chair; playing street cars with chairs for horses and quarreling as to which child should be conductor and which driver—that was before the days of electricity; playing that you are a horse eating hay in your stall, "a real horse, you know," as a child said to me last summer; playing wild animals in the most grewsome places until you are paralyzed with terror and afraid of yourself in the dark; "making believe" in every instance that you are grown up or different from what you really are—that is a wonderfully rich life.—Louisa McCrady in Atlantic.

A Trifle Misleading.

When Lucy Seaver married William Edson and was able to have calling cards with "Mrs. William Edson" engraved upon them, she felt that life had no higher pride in store for her. She preserved this attitude through all the years of her married life.

When Mr. Edson died she was inconsolable, and even after several years of widowhood she hotly resented any indication that her friends had forgotten her lamented William for one moment.

"It makes me so angry," she said to one whom she suspected of carelessness in the matter, "to be spoken of or thought of as 'Mrs. Lucy Edson.' It is an insult to William's memory."

"Oh, I'm sure it's never meant for that," said the friend, hastily. "Only it's quite customary among certain people, you know, for a widow to take her Christian name—have letters addressed to her in that way—and so on."

"It will never be with me," said the widow, indignantly. "I prefer always to be known as the late Mrs. William Edson."

Blind Justice.

Little Willie—Say, pa, why do they always have a bandage over the eyes of Justice.

Pa—Probably because the lawyers have talked the poor woman blind, my son.—Exchange.

His Remedy.

"Out of a job?"

"Yes—and they put a woman in my place."

"Gee! Well, I'll tell you—why don't you marry the woman?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A BECOMING TEA GOWN

The tea gown is as indispensable to the modern woman of cultured tastes as her slippers or her bath gown, especially during the cool days, when the fireside and the afternoon cup of tea are luxuries to be anticipated with delight. The model illustrated is an especially pleasing one, the long straight lines being becoming to almost any type of figure, while the tucked collar, wide at the back and shoulders and narrowing in front to a point, has a most graceful effect. A charming result, too, is afforded by the tucked yoke, below which the full front falls in unbroken lines to the hem. The gown is adapted to the figure at the waistline by a series of small tucks, over which a ribbon girdle may be adjusted if desired, though this is not necessary. Lansdowne was selected for developing the gown, dotted foulard being used for the full front and embroidered ecru batiste for garniture. To model the medium size 8½ yards 36 inches wide will be needed.

6957—6 sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

Presentation to Mr. Louis Bolin

Recording Secretary of St. Peter's T. A. S. Given a Gold Pin

At the regular meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. held yesterday afternoon, a number of new members were received.

Mr. Louis Bolin, for the past two years the efficient recording secretary, who has resigned owing to his removal from the city, was presented by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, spiritual adviser of the T. A. S., with a handsome gold pin. Dr. O'Brien referred to the excellent manner in which he had discharged his duties and to the great interest that he had always taken in the work of the society. He expressed extreme regret at his departure. Mr. Bolin, in reply, warmly thanked his friends for their evidence of esteem and spoke of the happy relations which had always existed between him and the members of the T.A.S.

WHO MAKES THE BETTER WIFE?

City Girl and Country Girl Subjects of C.O.C.F. Debate

A matrimonial debate was held Friday night under the auspices of the C.O.C.F. Dr. Marshall led off with his assistant, Mr. Thomas, on the affirmative side, maintaining that the country girl's constitution was superior to the city girl's, and that she was a better baker than the city girl and was able to knit, sew and patch and acceptably fill her vocation in life, while Mr. Thomas also followed the cooking line.

Mr. A. Hanna took up the city girl's side with the assertion that a woman was a trinity, being a composition of physical being, soul or mental being and spiritual being, and that it was more important to cultivate and develop the intellect and moral growth of the girl, which was being done in the city by the city girl having the privilege of coming in contact with circumstances which generated a higher ambition, which would make her equal to the occasion.

Owing to Mr. Hanna having no assistant the debate closed without a decision, and the city young man is still left in the dilemma of having to use his own resources in making the choice of a partner for life

The Girls' Guild of St. John's will hold a Masquerade Social on Tuesday, Nov. 26th, admission 10 cents. 3d

The C.P.R. Will be Double Tracked

Work Will Begin Next Spring—Arrangements Being Made

Arrangements are being made for the double-tracking next spring of the C.P.R. line from Smith's Falls to Toronto.

The line between Montreal and Smith's Falls is almost completed, and the western end is expected to be ready for traffic by this time next fall. This means that next year the line passing through Peterborough will be double tracked.

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from female trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation she felt that her death knell had sounded.

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Mrs. Robert Glenn of 424 Marie St., Ottawa, Ont., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so well and widely known that it does not need my recommendation, but I am pleased to add it to the many which you have in its favor. I have suffered untold agonies from a serious female trouble for nearly three years, and the doctors told me that I must undergo an operation, but as I was unwilling to do this, I tried your Vegetable Compound, and I am only too pleased that I did so, for it restored me to perfect health, saving me the pain of an operation and the immense bills attending the same. I pray accept my hearty thanks and best wishes."

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness, severe shooting pains through the pelvic organs, cramps, bearing-down pains, and an irritable disposition compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said that I had a serious female trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation as my only hope. To this I strongly objected—and I decided as a last resort to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"To my surprise the ulceration healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared, and I am once more strong, vigorous and well; and I cannot express my thanks for what it has done for me."

Serious feminine troubles are steadily on the increase among women—and before submitting to an operation every woman should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been curing the worst forms of female complaints, all functional troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement, weakness, irregularities, indigestion and nervous prostration. Any woman who could read the many grateful letters on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office would be convinced of the efficiency of her advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands a Woman's Ills.

Collision Off Niagara Point; Three Men Meet Watery Grave

Tug Escort Goes Down With Scarcely Minute's Warning.

Captain Dunlop, Engineer and Helper All Drowned — Tried to Cross Barge Ben Harrisen's Bows—Was Struck Amidships and Sunk Immediately—Tugs Were Racing to Get Tow—Other Men Injured.

St. Catharines, Nov. 25.—The sinking of the steamer Oriental, in 120 feet of water, some ten miles down Lake Ontario from Port Dalhousie, and three miles off the land, the same distance from Niagara Point, will be recalled by the sad fatality which occurred in the same place Saturday night, three men being drowned as the result of a collision of the tug Escort with the barge Ben Harrison.

The Ben Harrison is a pulpwood barge, and she was expected to be the last tow of the season to go up the Welland Canal and tug-owners were keenly on the lookout for her. Word was received by Capt. Harry Dunlop, that the barge had left Kingston in the afternoon in tow of the steamer Westmount (Capt. Milligan). Steam was put on, and Capt. McCoppen of the tug Golden City did likewise, and also prepared to meet the barge. Shortly before 8 o'clock, though no sign of the barge had been seen, both tugs left the harbor, and it was soon apparent that a race was in progress.

That was the last the people of the village knew of the affair till the Golden City returned with the barge and brought tidings that the Escort had collided with the Harrison and had gone down with scarcely a minute's warning, and that Capt Dunlop, Albert Dunlop, engineer, and Charles Christmas, canal helper, who had also been aboard, had been drowned.

It seems from stories told by rescued members of the Escort's crew, and by Capt. McCoppen and Capt. Hovey of the barge, that when tugs neared the steamer the Golden City had a slight advantage in distance over the Escort, and, as is customary when meeting a tow, she made a circle and came up alongside.

The Escort made a straight run for the bow of the schooner, endeavored to cross in front of her, but was struck in the centre by the bluff of the Ben Harrison's bow, turned over and sank.

Capt. Hovey's Storey.

Capt. Hovey is a clever Norwegian. He said he was standing in the bow of the barge when the two tugs hove into sight. The barge was being towed at the rate of ten miles an hour. The Escort came up, and Capt. Dunlop called out to him to throw a line, but as the Golden City had first reached the barge he did not do so. The first thing he knew the Escort was under the tow line and Captain Dunlop gave one short whistle to cut the line. This could not be done, as the cable was of heavy steel. Captain Dunlop then sounded the jinglers and blew eight or ten whistles for help. The Ben Harrison struck the tug, which turned over and went down. Life boats off the barge were instantly lowered and lines were thrown out over the bow.

Selvin Barnes, fireman, whose father was drowned on the Resolute in Toronto Bay, a year ago, was rescued from the water soon after the collision. He says he was standing close to the engine house door and was watching the course of the tug. Seeing the accident was about to happen, he called to the engineer to back up, but just as he did so the captain gave the forward signal and the tug plunged on and was struck abreast of the fire hold door and he was thrown into the water.

Cook Seriously Injured.

Mrs. Bartlett, cook, was in the front of the pilot house watching the race, when the collision occurred, and was thrown into the lake. When picked up by the Golden City's crew she was clinging to a fender which had fallen from the Escort. She is suffering with two broken ribs and several bruises.

Herman Cook had been on the top of the cabin endeavoring to release the life raft and was thrown with the raft into the water, but was easily picked up.

Accidents very much like that of Saturday night have happened once or twice before, but no damage resulted and no warning was taken from them. The night was moonlight and the lake was unusually calm. The fatality is the sad result of a little over-zealousness.

Surgeon's Knife For Kaiser.

New York, Nov. 25.—A special despatch from London says:

The real cause of Emperor William's remaining in England after the termination of his state visit to the British court was to prepare for an operation, which will take place within a few days.

The operation will be through the ear, affecting the throat. It touches the Kaiser's original trouble there, which is hereditary.

The operation is not a serious one.

La Tuque Branch Open.

Quebec, Nov. 25.—The La Tuque branch of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway is now open for traffic. The directors of the company will celebrate the event next Saturday, the 30th inst., by a special excursion.

Halifax Exhibition a Failure.

Halifax, Nov. 25.—The exhibition commission reports a total deficit of $14,363.54.

EDITOR SHOOTS PRESIDENT.

Shooting Sensation In Newspaper Office at Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 25.—Gen. Richard C. Horne, editorial writer on The Kansas City Post, shot twice and seriously wounded O. D. Woodward, president of The Post Co., on Saturday, and then shot H. J. Groves, managing editor, in the right hip. Woodward was hit in the right arm and in the right side. The shooting occurred in the editorial rooms of The Post.

Horne, who is a stockholder in the paper, and one of its founders, was discharged because of business depression. Saturday he bought a revolver and went to The Post office. When Woodward appeared Horne displayed the pistol, exclaiming, "No man can rob me," and began to shoot. Woodward fell wounded. Groves, who was in the room, tried to escape, but was shot while running. Horne surrendered to a policeman. Woodward is a theatrical manager, and controls two theatres in Kansas City, one in Omaha, and one in Sioux City. Horne was a brigadier-general on Governor Stones' staff. He has been prominent in Missouri politics for many years. He formerly published a newspaper at Marshall, Mo. At the police station Horne said his whole fortune was invested in the paper, and that the other owners were robbing him. Horne is held at the city jail, but no charge has been filed against him, awaiting the results of the wounds.

PROTECT NIAGARA BRIDGE.

Steel Plates Weighing Thirteen Tons Doubled Up Like Paper.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Plans of eminent engineers, made with all due care for the protection of the north abutment of the upper steel arch bridge on the American side, went awry last evening, when submitted to the critical test. The waters from the outlet of the tunnel of the Niagara Falls Power Co. have been threatening the abutments for some time, and it was decided to protect it from erosion by facing the abutment with a shield or armor-plate.

Accordingly 12 plates, each weighing a ton, were securely riveted together, and at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon lowered over the side of the bridge by means of five cables. When the shield struck the water the tremendous force of the current doubled it up like a bit of paper and snapped four of the five cables. The engineers, seeing the uselessness of the device, ordered the fifth cable cut and the 13-ton plate now reposes on the bottom of the river.

How to protect the abutment is a serious problem. An effort to build a concrete retaining wall was given up as a failure, and now the second plan has proved futile.

THREE SMOTHERED IN WELL.

Shocking Accident Attends Sinking of Shaft on Farm.

Craik, Sask., Nov. 25.—Word has just reached town of a shocking accident on the farm of James Allen, near Aylesbury, where three men were smothered by gas in a well that was being completed.

The dead are: Wm. J. Forfar, a well digger of Ellsmere; Richard H. Craig of Picton, his helper, and Lewis Riswold of Aylesbury, who tried to rescue the other two men. Only one body, that of Riswold, has been recovered, and it may be necessary to pump air into the well before the other bodies can be brought to the surface. The well is a hundred and fifty feet deep, but the bodies are lying on cribbing about thirty feet down.

Prison and Lashes.

Toronto, Nov. 25.—For attempting a criminal assault upon a five-year-old girl, William Eccles, a young married hack driver, was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary with 40 lashes. The young man broke down under the sentence. His young wife sat near the dock in the court room.

After only a short deliberation a jury acquitted John Kelly, Percy Elliot and Joseph King, charged with a criminal assault on Mrs. Alice Poole, at her house on Tecumseh street.

This closed the Assize list in which, beside Eccles, John Boyd, colored, was the only man convicted. He is to hang in January for the shooting of Edward Wandle, also colored.

Mistaken For a Deer.

Macleod, Alta., Nov. 25.—Elmer Dickson, a resident of the Porcupine Hills, met a tragic death on Wednesday. He, alone with ex-Policemen Barvosburg, Darling and McBride, were shooting deer in the mountains. He became separated from his companions, was mistaken for a deer and fatally shot. He was taken to Macleod Hospital and passed away yesterday.

Now For Cheap Postage.

London, Nov. 25.—The Times editorially urges the Government that the moment is favorable for an endeavor to arrange a penny postage convention with the United States because it is believed overtures would now be favorably received at Washington. The Times thinks if this could be arranged, the other powers would not long stand aloof.

Shot Brother-In-Law.

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Following a drunken quarrel, Hartly Woodruff is in jail in Towanda, Pa., on a charge of murdering his brother-in-law, Lewis B. Stanton, by shooting.

Woodruff walked to Silvara, four miles, and gave himself up to the justice of the peace.

Old Man Suicides.

Norton, N. B., Nov. 25.—John Elkins, over 90 years, went to the barn Saturday night and hanged himself. He was found by his daughter, who collapsed when she entered the place where the body was suspended.

A woman has been foully murdered in Frank, Alberta, and a Chinaman is being held on suspicion.

TRAIL OF FIRE FIEND

Big Catholic School Burned at Belleville.

Loss Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars—Origin of Blaze a Mystery—Disorganizes School System—Masonic Hall Destroyed at Port Arthur—Cheese and Butter Factory Completely Gutted at Cayuga.

Belleville, Nov. 25.—A heavy blow fall on the Roman Catholics of this city last night, when their principal school building, known as the Convent School, was burned. The school stood on John street, between the Loretto Convent and John street Presbyterian School. It was used on Sundays as a Sunday school, and yesterday afternoon the classes met there in the usual way.

The janitor made his rounds at 4 o'clock and found things all right. About 4.50 the building was seen to be on fire, and though the firemen worked hard the flames had gotten too big a start and could not be checked, the result being that the building was completely gutted.

While under control of the separate school trustees, the school was taught by the sisters of Loretto Convent. The loss will be heavy, as the building and furnishings could not be replaced for less than $25,000. There is an insurance of $7,500. This is the second time the school has been on fire recently. How the present fire originated is not known, but the authorities say the furnace was modern and first-class. They would not like to hint at incendiarism, but are at a loss to see how the fire could start.

The destruction of the school puts the Roman Catholics of this city up against a serious problem. Not quite three years ago their handsome church, St. Michael's, was burned at a loss of $75,000, and it has kept them busy paying the bills. Now their chief school has gone, and considerable expense again faces them, besides the disorganization of the classes. It will be hard to get a proper building for their purpose in this city at present.

Fire at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, Nov. 25.—Fire yesterday morning destroyed the Masonic Hall, with a loss of $25,000. It was the oldest building in the city.

Cheese Factory Burned.

Cayuga, Nov. 25.—At Kohler about two o'clock Saturday morning the cheese and butter factory and contents were burned. Nothing was saved. The factory is owned by A. E. Brennan of Brandon, Man. Cause of fire unknown. The factory at present was making butter. Loss about $1,500, partly insured.

Two Houses Burned.

Toronto Junction, Nov. 25.—Fire broke out yesterday morning about 3 o'clock in Mr. McComb's house, Nairn avenue, north of St. Clair, and occupied by two families, which resulted in the building being burned to the ground. The houses, which are two-storey frame structures, are situated outside the town limits in the district known as "Little England." Mrs. McComb rose early and having lighted the kitchen fire went upstairs to call the children for breakfast. When she came down a few minutes later it was to find the kitchen filled with flame and smoke. Her husband, who was still in bed till aroused by her screams, hastily snatched up their six months old baby, and rushed down the burning stairway in his night robes. The baby was scorched slightly about the face, but otherwise suffered no serious effects. The whole family managed to leave the house, but clothes, furniture and all effects, including seven tons of coal in the cellar, were reduced to ashes. Mr. McComb had $50 in one of his pockets, which also went up in smoke. Soon the flames spread to the next house, a few yards away, in which a family named Minnis resided. They were a little more fortunate, and managed to save the furniture, but the house was completely destroyed.

Fought Prairie Fire.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Nov. 25.—Driven by a high wind, a big prairie fire swept Friday night to within five miles of this city, and was only stopped then by battalion of citizens marshaled by the mounted police, who armed with sacks, fought the encroaching flames until 2 o'clock Saturday morning before they were finally subdued.

Reports to hand indicate that luckily there were no losses to horses or stock, but a large grassing area has been destroyed, and will be useless for feed purposes during the coming winter.

Thaws Are Ready.

New York, Nov. 25.—According to The World Harry Thaw is ready for his trial, and he fears there may be further postponement. When asked if an application would be made by his counsel for a change of venue, Thaw said:

"Never thought of such a thing. There is nothing intended in that line. I am ready for trial on Dec. 9, which is the date set. Jerome is not ready, but that is not Mr. Thaw's fault."

Turning to his wife, he said: "Are you ready?"

"Oh, she replied "I have nothing to do with it. I am ready any time."

Three Go to Prison.

North Bay, Nov. 25.—A hold-up took place in North Bay Saturday in broad daylight. Three men enticed a German to a lonely spot on the outskirts of the town and robbed him of $18. Chief of Police Mitchell arrested the trio and Magistrate Marter dealt summary justice, sentencing each to one year in Central Prison. The prisoners gave their names as Mark Metremich, William Ellis and John O'Brien.

A French doctor claims to have discovered in the x-rays an absolute test of death.

Broke Through Cell Roof.

Glace Bay, N. S., Nov. 25.—Thompson Ryan, arrested at Dominion Mine No. 4 for assaulting his mother-in-law, made his escape on Saturday. He tore the bunk out of his cell and used the plank bottom of the bunk as a battering ram with which to break through the brick roof of the cell.

Police officers caught sight of him in the woods, but were unable to capture him.

Russia Wipes Out Debt.

London, Nov. 25.—Russia on Saturday wiped out the balance of her indebtedness to Japan arising from the war, the Russian embassy handing over to the embassy of Japan a check for $24,302,200. This represents the balance due Japan for the maintenance of the Russian prisoners.

A Story of Absorbing Interest

The Rogue's March

By E. W. HORNUNG, author of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," "Stingaree," etc.

"Good!" said Blaydes, pocketing the doll. "Now I think you'll have no objection to giving me back that worthless check. Come, perhaps it wasn't such a pure accident, after all, but I was cursedly hard up at the time. And I honestly regret it—I do, indeed!"

Still without a word, Tom handed him the check, whereupon Blaydes twisted it up, struck a lucifer and ignited the paper at one end, and as it burned he picked off and powdered the charred bits between finger and thumb, while the yellow flame made his smooth face yellower than ever. They parted, Tom going his way alone.

* * * * * * *

Tom pushed on with a light step and a swimming brain. The sudden change in his poor little fortunes seemed too good to be true. Thirty-five pounds is not a mint of money, but to Erichsen it was something like one; at least it was his all, for he had no right to another penny in the world. The sum represented his full capital as well as his last chance in life. And he had it safe in his pocket in the shape of Blaydes' watch and chain.

The moon was hidden now. Tom had difficulty in seeing and following the beaten path and was unduly startled by a fellow waif, who suddenly stood before him in the darkness.

"Got the time about yer, guv'nor?" said a high, hoarse voice.

"No, I—I don't possess a watch," stammered Tom, taken as much aback by the question as by the questioner. And he grasped the repeater in one pocket and doubled the other fist.

"Ha, I see you don't," rejoined the other as the moon shone forth at that moment. "No 'arm done, I 'ope. We can't all be real swells, can we?"

And Tom was left shuddering from a single moonlight glimpse of a horrible face horribly disfigured. Disease had raised the nose to the level of the stubby, shrunken cheeks; the very eyes were more prominent, but wolfish, unsteady, and little better to see.

His plans for the night were as yet unmade. Tom looked about him and espied a promising thicket not thirty paces from the path. And here, being tired out, he did actually lie down, after first kneeling, as he had not knelt for months, and thanking the Maker of all good things for having made the world so kind and his love so true and so forgiving.

But he never quite fell asleep. He was near it when a sound of slipshod feet, running downhill through the grass, passed close by the thicket and left him wide awake and wondering. It was hopeless after that. And 2 o'clock struck upon his ears with the sound of his own footsteps trudging down Haverstock hill to no immediate goal.

Yet still the world was kind. A wagon came creaking at his heels, slowly overhauling him and unexpectedly stopping when it did so. It was green mountains high with country vegetables smelling notably in the clean night air, and with this sweet whiff of home and the past there came a hearty, elderly voice evidently hailing Tom.

"Now, then, young man, if you want a lift, joomp oop!"

Tom was not sure what he wanted, but his feet were sore, the voice liked him, and up he jumped. And between darkness and dawn—the quiet foot of the sleeping hill and the half awakened but already noisy purlieus of Tottenham Court road—the lucky, attractive fellow made another friend.

The wagoner was a red faced, red whiskered, frekkie handed fellow, with a genial, broad, communicative tongue. Jonathan Butterfield was his name, and he was a Yorkshireman only recently come south, as he said; with a sigh which left him silent. Whereupon Tom became communicative in his turn and remarked that he, too, meditated a move—to India.

"There's the good ship Jean advertised to sail on Monday, and I'm on my way to the office to see if they've a bunk left. If there isn't I shall go on to the docks and try my luck on the ship herself. I might work my passage out. If not, I'll stow away."

"You're that anxious to leave old England!"

"I am anxious to make my way."

"Ah, well!" sighed the wagoner. "I've got a lad o' my own as far away as you are going. He writes us canny letters, but dear knows what we'd give to see him back!"

But there was no end to the good will of the Yorkshireman, who not only insisted on paying for hot coffee at an early stall, but flatly refused to go about his business until Tom promised to accompany him to breakfast at its conclusion.

Tom's heart rose steadily with the sun and was singing with brave resolve when at length the wagoner returned.

"I doubt I've been a long time," said Butterfield. "It be very near 6 o'clock."

"Ten past," said Tom, whipping out the golden nucleus of his future fortunes, which he had even then been hugging in his pocket.

Tom tried to back out of the breakfast, but it failed. He tried again as they drove past Fetter lane—he could pay his way in Rolls buildings now—but this time the wagoner whipped up his horse and refused to listen.

"No, no," said he; "a promise is a promise, and I warrant they'll be proud to see you."

"You mean your wife and family?" said Tom.

"Nay," said Butterfield, "I doubt you'll not see them there."

"Not at your house?" cried Tom.

"It isn't mine," confessed the other. "It's my wife's brother's. He drives a hackney coach, and I use his stable every other morning. Me an' my missus live out at Hendon, and I come in three nights a week."

"But you mustn't saddle these people with me. Let me get down at once."

"Mustn't I?" chuckled the wagoner. "I'll take the blame, then. We're very near there and dashed if that isn't Jim on his way home to breakfast. Jim! Jim!"

And a hackney coach, crawling leisurely along in front, was pulled up as the coachman turned round and recognised Butterfield.

"Well, Jonathan, how are you?"

"How's yourself, Jim? Early and late, as usual, eh? This is a young gent who has ridden in with me. He's waiting till t' offices open, and I thought you'd give us both a bit of breakfast."

"Always glad to oblige a gen'leman," said the coachman, looking hard, but nodding genially at Tom. Nor would he either listen to a single protest or apology from the youth, who found himself at breakfast scarce ten minutes later in a cosy kitchen close to Blackfriars bridge.

The hackney coachman was a burly old soldier, a jolly ruffian, with a good brown eye. His wife was small and spruce, watchful and quiet, and perhaps Tom liked her less. She was kind enough, however; indeed, the sympathetic interest shown by all in an unknown vagabond was a circumstance that touched Tom deeply, though of a piece with all his most recent experience and but another proof of the world's kindness.

The old soldier had served in India himself. He was full of practical advice for Tom, who listened gratefully, but yawned twice, when it came out he had not slept for some thirty hours. Instantly the household was on its feet. It appeared that Jonathan Butterfield had a snooze there each morning after his night journey with the vegetables, and Tom must and should lie down beside him.

Tom consented—for an hour—and fell asleep wondering where he had seen the good Jim before. When he awoke, the wagoner was gone and the light different. He went downstairs in his socks and asked Jim's wife the time.

"Time?" said she. "Haven't you a watch?"

"Not I."

"Jonathan told me you'd a gold repeater."

Tom remembered the repeater for the first time since awaking, but the woman was looking at him queerly, and he had no intention of entering into explanations with her, so he simply asked whether Jonathan had gone.

"Many an hour ago. It's 5 o'clock."

"Five!"

"And after."

Tom burst into apologies, in the midst of which the woman put on a shawl and went out. He was still standing irresolute in his socks, dazed by his long sleep, when there came a rattle of wheels outside, and in rushed Jim with his whip and an evening newspaper.

"Glad to find you still here, sir!" cried he. "I want somebody as can read to read me a slice out of this 'ere Globe. It's awful, sir—awful! The wery gen'leman I drove last night! I've come straight from Scotland Yard!"

Tom suddenly remembered when and where he had seen the other before. It was overnight on the box of Blaydes' hackney coach.

"Who is the gentleman?"

"Blaydes, it seems, his name is, or, rather, was!"

"Was?"

"He's dead."

"Dead!"

"Stone dead—murdered—by a man I saw as close as I see you now, but never looked twice at! It's all in the Globe, they tell me. Read it out, sir; read it out."

CHAPTER V.

TOM ERICHSEN held out a steady hand for the Globe. His blood ran too cold for present tremors. The hackney coachman had drawn a chair to the table, planted his elbows in the middle of the printed cotton cloth and his hot, flushed face between his coarse, strong hands. Tom sat down at the other end. He found the paragraph, ran his eye from headline to finish and then read it slowly aloud:

SHOCKING MURDER AT HAMPSTEAD.

An atrocious murder was committed late last night or early this morning in the neighborhood of Hampstead Heath. A mechanic on his way to work at an early hour this morning and having occasion to traverse the right of way connecting the Finchley road with the upper portion of Haverstock hill noticed a stout staff upon the grass near the second stile from the former thoroughfare. On picking it up the staff, or, rather, cudgel, was found to be crusted with blood and near it was discovered a drawn sword stick, broken near the hilt. Continuing his alarming investigations, the mechanic made his crowning and most horrible discovery in a hollow tree close beside the stile, in which lay the body of a gentleman in full evening dress. He was quite dead; indeed, life had probably been extinct some hours. The corpse was covered with blood and the head terribly disfigured, as if by repeated blows from some blunt instrument. There can be no doubt that the crime was committed with the cudgel above mentioned (at present the only clew to the assassin) or that the sword stick was vainly used in self defense by the unfortunate gentleman. The police were summoned with commendable dispatch and the body removed to the Marylebone mortuary to await inquest.

Meanwhile in the course of the morning much information has been forthcoming, and we are sorry to state that the victim has been identified as Captain J. Montgomery Blaydes, late of his majesty's Coldstream guards, but for some years past on the half pay list. No letters or papers of any sort were discovered upon his person—

"Go on, sir."

"I will. But that's extraordinary!"

"Not it. He's been robbed as well. That's what I want to get at. That there stick's no clew. We want the things he took."

Tom moistened his lips and harked back:

No letters or papers of any sort were discovered upon his person, and it is only through the marking of his linen that the identity of the deceased has been so promptly established. It now transpires that the hapless captain had been lately residing in the village of West End (not a mile from the scene of the murder) and that he left his lodgings shortly after 10 o'clock last night, in order to attend an evening party, in a hackney coach. The police hope that the coachman will come forward—

"He has!" said Jim. "You may leave out that bit."

"And you couldn't describe the man?"

"Not too well. I could only swear he was neither short nor tall and looked to be wearing a pair of nankeen trousers." (Tom's legs were underneath the table.) "No," continued Jim, "I'm afraid they won't lay hands on him through me. But they may through the things he took. Go on to that!"

"There was a diamond pin."

"I seen it. What else?"

"All his money."

"Ah, he paid like a gen'leman. Anything else?"

"A—gold—watch!"

"That'll do!" he cried. "That'll hang him, you mark my words! What sort of a watch?"

But this time the words would not come at all, for Jim's wife stood in the doorway behind Jim's chair, and her eyes and Tom's—the terrified and the guilty—were locked together in a long, dread stare.

"What's that about a watch?" she said in a sort of whisper, advancing unsteadily and leaning a hand upon her husband's shoulder. "Whose watch?"

"One belonging to a murdered man," replied Jim. "I'm asking what kind of a one. I say it ought to hang the chap what did it."

"It will," said she hoarsely in his ear. "It's a repeater, and him that has it sits in front of you in that chair!"

There followed a silence so profound that Tom could hear the watch itself ticking in his pocket. The coachman then rose and slowly leaned across the table, resting one hand upon it. The other was half way to Tom's throat when he sprang to his feet and in so doing pressed his thigh against the table's edge. Instantly there rang from his pocket a sweet and tiny ting, ting, ting, ting, ting!

Both shrank back as Tom darted to an inner door and so up the stairs which he had descended half asleep.

Ere he reached the top there was a crash below. For an instant he thought the man had fallen in a fit, but a volley of oaths proved it only a slip as Tom slammed and locked the door of the room in which he had slept away the day if not his life. His shoes were still where he had kicked them off. He slipped into them and, exerting all his strength, pulled the large iron bedstead from its place and wedged it between wall and door. Then he crouched and listened. The man was for taking him single handed, the woman evidently restraining him by main force.

"Let me go! Let me go!" Tom heard him cry.

"Never till I drop! Police! Police! He sha'n't murder my Jim too."

"So help me, but I'll strike ye if ye don't let go!"

"Strike away. Police! Police! Police! If you go, I go too."

Her cries were not loud; they were smothered in the struggle, which was still continued—now at the foot of the stairs, now on the stairs themselves and at last on the landing outside the barricaded door. Meanwhile the bird had flown.

No sooner had Tom realized what was taking place below than he threw up the bedroom window. It overlooked a small and filthy back yard, into which Tom quietly dropped while the pair were still struggling on the stairs. To find his way through the house, through the kitchen itself and out into the narrow street was the work of very few moments. The last Tom heard was the belaboring of the locked, blocked door by honest Jim. Nor did his presence of mind desert him yet. He walked out of the narrow side street, only running when he came to the main thoroughfare and after a perilous hesitation as to whether he should strike into the city or over Blackfriars bridge.

He chose the city and, having chosen, lost his head and ran for his life.

He darted across the street and plunged into the busy alleys filling the delta between the bridge and St. Paul's. Here he slackened a little, for the stony, many windowed ravines were so narrow and so crowded that it was impossible to continue running. But he threw up his heels the instant he emerged on Ludgate hill, tearing helter skelter in the middle of the road. He was nearly run over by a van coming out of Paternoster row and cursed to the skies by the driver. Faces stopped and turned upon the pavements. He knew the folly of it, and yet ran on with a fiend in either heel.

The coachman then rose and slowly leaned across the table.

"Ba-nk, ba-nk! 'Ere you are, sir, 'ere you are!"

Tom was almost up to the omnibus before he realized that this was meant for him. Instinctively he waved and nodded, and his mad pace was explained. The omnibus stopped; he jumped in, gasping.

"Thought you was after me," said the cad, with a grin.

Tom had no breath to reply. A rubicund old gentleman made a well meant remark upon the eagerness of youth and was favored with a glassy stare. The newcomer sat panting in a corner, the perspiration trickling from his nose.

But his head was cooler. He saw the needlessness as well as the indiscretion of conspicuous flight. He had slipped through the only hands that were as yet against him. He had eluded the only eyes he need avoid that night, for the hackney coachman might take his new tale straight to Scotland Yard, but it could hardly be given to the world before morning.

Tom's heart leaped as he discovered the temporary strength of his position. Next moment it sank, for the cad was collecting the fares, and his single asset was the watch. His bankrupt state had occurred to Tom as he ran for the omnibus, but not again. It was so small a thing compared with the charge now lying at his door. Yet he had just thought of it—his little fraud was so far deliberate—but he had neither the face nor the foolhardiness to sit there and confess his fault. And, situated like the wanted felon he now felt himself to be, it was wonderful and horrible how a felon's resources came unbidden to his fingers' ends. He began feeling in pocket after pocket, with a face that lengthened under the frown of the cad, the raised eyebrows of the rubicund gentleman and the fixed attention of all.

"I'm afraid I—I don't seem to have a coin in my pocket!"

"Oh, yon 'aven't, 'aven't you?"

"No, I have not! I'm very sorry—I"—

"You may be! Never mind no tales. You can keep them for the beak as'll 'ave a word to say to you tomorrer mornin'!" And the cad winked at the other passengers, stopped the omnibus and called a policeman from the curb.

Tom could have burst into tears. To be wrongly wanted for a crime so terrible and justly taken for a thing so small! He looked forlornly at his fellow passengers, with a wild idea that one might come to his rescue. The sole response was a withering frown from the ruddy old gentleman, who also commended the cad and loudly trusted an example would be made of the case. The desperate Tom began ransacking his pockets in earnest for some overlooked coin, but he had done this so often of late that he felt the futility now. The perspiration froze upon his face, yet even with the policeman's tall hat poked inside the omnibus his twitching fingers continued their spasmodic, hopeless search.

AN AFTERNOON COSTUME FOR A MISS

Style, elegance and general becomingness are displayed in this charming model in no uncommon degree. The gown is made of a novelty woollen in a pretty shade of brown, velvet of a darker shade being used for garniture. The prettily tucked guimpe is made of soft silk, though a lingerie fabric might be substituted. The dress consists of an overblouse cut in the new semi-oriental style, and a 7-gored skirt, the fullness of both being disposed in inverted pleats. The guimpe, which is included in the pattern, provides for either full-length or shorter sleeves. This pretty dress is suitable for modeling in any of the fashionable fabrics, 5½ yards 36 inches wide being needed for the dress and 3½ yards 22 inches wide for the guimpe.

4303—Sizes 14, 15, 16, 17 years.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

Leave your order and 10c at THE REVIEW OFFICE and pattern will be sent you by mail.

Manager Central Ontario Sun Life of Canada
Peterborough, Ontario.

DEAR SIR,—

Your favor of the 24th inst. received enclosing statement of profits allotted to my policy 7691, in the "Sun Life" for the past five years.

Above policy is for $1,000 on the whole life five year distribution plan on which I paid an annual premium of $28.35, or $141.75 for the five year period.

I find the CASH PROFITS amount to $63.85, or about 40 per cent. of the total premiums paid during the five years. This is certainly a splendid showing and speaks volumes for the earning powers of the Sun Life Company's investments.

Thanking you and wishing your company continued success,

Yours truly,

More Changes at Opera House

Electric Interior Signs Placed Over all the Exits in the Building

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, proprietors of the Grand Opera House, evidently believe in not only looking after the comfort and entertainment of the patrons of the theatre, but their safety as well. The building has several exits to be used in case of fire or panic. Over each door there has just been placed an electric sign, "Fire Exit."

When the house lights are on these doors can be plainly seen and found, but, when the lights are turned out, and a play is in progress, the entrances could not so easily be located. Over every doorway there is now an electric sign, "Fire Exit," so that when the house is in darkness, the exits are constantly illuminated. Thus egress could be made easily and safely in the event of a conflagration or any serious mishap.

New C.P.R. Service Began To-day

The new night service consisting of an extra train each way daily between Toronto and Ottawa direct, began today. The train which left Ottawa at 10.45 last night passed through Peterborough at 4.48 this morning. The new train which leaves Toronto at 10.45 each night starts this evening and will reach Peterborough at 1.10 a.m. tomorrow morning.

WEDDING BELLS

SMITH—STAPLETON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Augustin's church, Toronto, on Thursday, when Mr. Frank Smith, of London, Eng., was married to Miss Mamie Stapleton, daughter of Mr. Charles Stapleton, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. F. G. Plummer, and afterwards the bridal party, with a few relations and intimate friends, were received at the residence of Mrs. Hunt, cousin of the bride, 180 Jarvis street, where a wedding supper was served. Miss Minnie Dixon was bridesmaid. The bride wore her travelling dress of navy blue with an ermine stole, and hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left by the evening train for Montreal, whence they sailed by the Victorian for Liverpool. The honeymoon will be spent in England, where Mr. and Mrs. Smith will spend the winter.—Toronto News.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY

Meeting Will be Held To-morrow Evening at Mr. Collier's Residence.

The regular monthly meeting of the Astronomical Society will be held tomorrow evening, (Tuesday) at 8 o'clock, at the residence of Mr. Herbert Collier, Weller street. The telescope will be on the lawn and the members will have the pleasure of scanning the starry heavens. Rev. Dr. Marsh will also have on view his wonderful planetarium. A most interesting and profitable evening is being looked forward to.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY CHANGE IN TIME

Commencing Nov. 25th the local train, which formerly left Peterboro' at 8 o'clock, will leave C. P. R. Depot at 7.46 a.m., until further notice.

OBITUARY

CHILD EXPIRES

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gray, 151 Rubidge Street, will sympathize with them in the loss they have sustained by the death of their infant son Wm. Hubert, at the age of eighteen months.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2.30, to Little Lake Cemetery.

PASSEPARTOUT PICTURES AND MOUNTING BOARD

The fad for passepartout pictures is again growing very general. Many who have used this means of decorating their rooms, find there is no other way of treating pictures, that is so economical and satisfactory. The Review has a new line of passepartout in all shades, mounting papers and pictures in the popular sepia tints. Call and see them and fix up a few pictures for your friends for Xmas. Nothing is more acceptable than a pretty picture.

Steps Taken to Decide About The Isolation Hospital

Question Was Chief Topic of Discussion at Meeting of Board of Health—Resolution to be Forwarded City Council.

Peterborough needs an isolation hospital or isolation facilities in case of infectious diseases, is the opinion of the Board of Health. There was a meeting of the Board this morning, and this question was the main issue dealt with. Those in attendance were Mr. W. Eyres, chairman; Mayor McWilliams, Dr. Bingham, Medical Health Officer; Dr. McNulty, Dr. Burnham, R. Neill, Messrs. George Ball, Sanitary Inspector, and S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk.

A letter was read from F. Birdsall, who said that the earth closet on the property adjoining W. G. Fitzgerald's establishment, concerning which instructions were given to have it connected with a sewer, by Sanitary Inspector George Ball. As Mr. Fitzgerald will be doing considerable building on the lot in the spring, it was decided to give the correspondent until the first of June to look after the matter.

Chairman Eyres remarked that Dr. Hodgetts, provincial health officer, had been here about ten days ago. Dr. Hodgetts and himself had talked over the matter of the inspection of Stony Lake by Inspector Hall, and suggested that the report concerning the matter, which had been seen by the Water Commissioners and the Board of Health, be forwarded to the Provincial Board of Health. The Water Commissioners had passed a resolution that the report be forwarded to the Provincial Board of Health. It was moved and seconded that the resolution be forwarded.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL.

The chairman read the following resolution re the isolation of the hospital, and it was decided to present it to the city council for consideration:—

That the Board, believing the city is running a great risk in not having an isolation hospital, which is not warranted by our situation or growing city and an important railway centre; and whereas, this Board ha asubmitted to our city council, and such plans, so far as we know, have not been acted upon. This Board, therefore, respectively urges the city council to attend to this matter without further delay, and make such provision for patients suffering from any contagious disease as will cut short the above risk, which we consider extremely unnecessary, and meet the requirements of the law in the above regard.

The resolution was adopted, and Mayor McWilliams said he would endeavor at the next meeting of the council to have a committee formed to confer with the Board on the matter.

Dr. McNulty thought there should be some means of looking after patients suffering from infectious diseases, whereby arrangements could be made to look after them on immediate notice. His opinion in the matter was seconded by every member of the Board present.

Concerning the isolation hospital Mayor McWilliams thought the council had done their duty in regard to the matter, and said that body would be pleased to do everything in the matter that was in the best interests of the city.

FORMER PETERBORO' DIVINE PREACHED HERE YESTERDAY

Rev. J. P. Wilson Delivered two Strong Sermons at Charlotte St. Church in the Cause of Missions—Large Congregations Present at Both Services.

Large congregations were present at both services yesterday at Charlotte Street Methodist Church, when Rev. J. P. Wilson of Belleville preached two forcible and instructive sermons, bearing principally on the work of the Womens' Missionary Society. Many of Mr. Wilson's former congregation, which he was pastor of George Street Methodist Church, were out to hear him, and no doubt were pleased to see their old minister again.

Preceding his sermon in the morning, Mr. Wilson referred to his four years pastorate in this city, as being the most pleasant of his life. It gave him great pleasure to be back again He remarked, that in this city more than any other, the ministers united in a great brotherhood. They worked harmoniously, with one purpose in view. He was always glad, when an opportunity to come back to Peterborough was given him.

"The Lord gave the word and great was the company that published it" was the text on which the morning discourse of the reverend gentleman was based. They are found in the eleventh verse of the 68th Psalm. That prophesy is fulfilled in these days, began the speaker by the missionaries and ministers. Also by the Womens' Missionary Society. Woman holds a large part in the evangelization of the world. This last century has been great progress in this work of spreading Christ's Kingdom. The Methodist Church alone in Canada, last year gave $450,000 towards missions, while all the Church as combined gave two million dollars. This shows, said the speaker, the great work that is being done, but there is yet much to do. The first thought that should engage the mind of every Christian is to win the world for Christ. Not many years ago, the missionary work only interested a few. Now there is the Students' Missionary Movement, the Womens' Missionary Society supporting evangelists in the foreign field all working in the cause of Christ.

There are yet said the speaker, 8,000,000 people who have never heard of Christ, and the reverend gentleman urged the women who have not already identified themselves with the missionary cause of the Church to do so. The women have done wonderful work. An evidence of what they have done is shown in the fact that 30 years ago, they raised $2,000 while last year the Society raised $94,000 for missions. But there are many methodist women today taking no interest in the evangelization of the heathen. "Arouse the women to join in this work and it will be a success," said this speaker. Women are the educators of men. If the mother is interested her son will be. A woman's influence is great. They are reformers and unless the women are won, the men cannot be.

Business men are beginning to take up the missionary question, and at a recent laymen's banquet a large number of prominent men pledged themselves to help the work.

The reverend gentleman concluded his remarks by urging the society to disseminate missionary literature among the children and thus bring them up in the knowledge of missions. Pray for the missionaries, and give according to your means, towards their support.

News of the City Churches

GEORGE STREET CHURCH

The Epworth League will hold a regular meeting this evening under the direction of the Missionary Committee.

The Mission Band will hold a sale of work and musical 'at home' on the afternoon and evening of December 6th.

The Girls' Guild will meet tomorrow (Tuesday) evening at 7.45 o'clock.

Rev. E. A. Pearson, the pastor, delivered a profitable and timely sermon on "Books and Reading," taking as his text Ecclesiastes 12, 12. Monthly song service was held, the church being filled to the doors. Mr. Norris, late of Lakefield, who has removed to the city, sang a solo in good voice. Mr. James Browne and Miss Reaso rendered a duet in pleasing manner. The latter also contributed a solo, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." The anthem, "There is a Holy City," by Shelley, was spiritedly given.

CHARLOTTE ST. CHURCH

Prayer meeting will be held on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Rev. A. D. Menzies, representing the Point Aux Trembles school, Montreal, preached in St. Andrew's church in the morning and assisted Rev. J. G. Potter at the service in the evening.

The Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's church will meet to-morrow evening. Mr. Bennett, of the Cordage Works, will give an interesting travel talk, and also speak on "How to succeed in life."

MURRAY ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

The Young People's Society of Murray street Baptist church, will meet this evening. Mr. Horace C. Wright, the new Y.M.C.A. secretary, will lead the meeting and afterwards there will be a social half hour spent and a welcome extended to the new secretary.

The regular weekly prayer meeting will not be held on Wednesday night owing to the annual meeting of the Bible Society.

KNOX CHURCH

A social meeting of the Young People's Guild will be held to-night at 8 o'clock.

The Session of the church will preach at the residence of Mr. Bennett, 110 Gilmour street, tomorrow.

An open session of the Home Missionary Society will be held on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

The Managers and Session will meet on Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

The Boy's Club will meet on Friday evening.

ALL SAINT'S CHURCH

To-night the Girl's Guild and Women's Guild will meet at 7.30 o'clock.

On Tuesday the Women's Guild will meet again at 2 o'clock. The Men's Association will meet in the evening at 8 o'clock.

The Junior Boy's club meets on Wednesday at 7.30. Also a cottage prayer meeting will be held at 128 Lansdowne street, at 8 o'clock Wednesday.

On Thursday the Women's Auxiliary meet at 2.30 o'clock. The week-night service will be held at 7.45, after which the choir will rehearse.

The Junior Auxiliary meets on Friday at 4 o'clock. The normal Bible class meets in the evening at 8 o'clock.

Rev. Mr. Major concluded his series of sermons on "Heaven" last evening at All Saints' church, preaching on the subject of "How to get to Heaven." The church was again crowded and it was a very interesting discourse.

Next Sunday Rev. Canon Tucker, of Toronto, will preach at All Saints' church in the evening.

MARK STREET CHURCH

The Epworth League will meet tonight at 8 o'clock.

Prayer meeting will be held on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

A BOX-PLEATED SHIRTWAIST GOWN

No type of costume is more comfortable, convenient and generally becoming than the shirtwaist gown, and the model here shown is one of the most acceptable of the new designs, combining the desirable attributes of elegance and simplicity in a manner that cannot fail to appeal to the woman of refined tastes. A box-pleate ornaments either side of the front and back both in waist and skirt, this arrangement adding appreciably to the graceful slenderness of the figure. The sleeves present an especially novel feature, the combination of wrinkled lower part and puffed upper part—the former extending over the latter—producing a peculiarly picturesque result. The gown is suitable for development in any of the new soft woolens, or taffeta might be used. To develop the medium size will require 8½ yards of material 36 inches wide.

A SWORDFISH DUEL.

Two of the Monsters in a Vicious and Deadly Battle.

The big swordfish had reached the blue waters of the ocean when without warning a blue backed torpedo-like body shot out of the depths, coming at it like an arrow.

The two fish turned and came at each other like mad bulls. Again by some miracle they missed, just grazing one another, to whirl about and begin the circling play for time and opportunity.

Then, like flashes of light, they turned and came on with a strange whistling sound and a compact that tossed the white churned spume high in the air—came together as only bodies weighing 200 or 300 pounds can when impelled by animate vibrant engines of unknown power—came together and remained there, whirling, tossing tails in air, rolling over and over. The long slender fish had pierced the other, and the terrific efforts on the part of the fish were to unsheath the sword, which was only accomplished after a struggle for several minutes.

Then both fishes shot away, then again came together, giving mighty side blows, and then out of the red stained water one broke and fled.

The writer found the largest of these fishes a few days later on the sand, where it had been washed or thrown by the waves. Four or five deep wounds marked the body.

In one rush the sword had entered the eye, coming out at the gills; another cut a furrow along the top of the head, another still had entered slightly from below, but the real cause for defeat was evident in its sword, which was splintered and broken against its enemy.—Recreation.

The Truth Anyway.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken quite ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

"Yes, teach', I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped tugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horisontal arm and finger, "but she dowastair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.—Harper's Magazine.

Great Foreign Exodus.

New York, Nov. 23.—The exodus of foreign laborers returning to Europe, owing to the shutting down of industries since the financial stringency has reached such proportion that the steamship companies are hard pressed to furnish accommodation for them.

Hundreds of foreigners have been obliged to wait until next week because berths could not be found for them. This week all the big transatlantic lines raised the steerage rate from $21 to $32, but still the demand for tickets has increased. A representative of the steerage department of the Hamburg-American line said that from New York alone the number of foreigners departing weekly was 25,000, and that $5,000,000 was being taken away weekly by these returning immigrants, either in cash or in drafts on foreign countries.

Outgoing steamers are carrying thousands of steerage passengers, and the President Grant, which will sail for Hamburg next Wednesday, will have aboard 3,200 foreigners. They will be largely Russians, Poles and Hungarians.

TEACHING ELEPHANTS.

The Tall, Fat Legged, Small Eyed Kind the Best Pupils.

On a number of points all elephant trainers agree, says Appleton's Magzine. These are, first, that the tall, fat legged, small eyed elephant of big girth is not only the handsomest, but also the most docile and intelligent of his kind; second, that an elephant is fully aware of his prodigious strength compared with man's and that the reason an elephant obeys his master is not because he is afraid of him, but because he has an affection for him; third, you may beat a bad elephant to death or kill him by ramming red hot irons down his throat in an effort to press the "squeal of surrender" out of him, but the one and only way to train an elephant to perform tricks is through kindness and patience unending; last, but not least, without exception the intelligence of the elephant far exceeds that of any other animal.

Elephant trainers maintain that training an elephant to perform is like teaching a boy circus riding, only less difficult.

A number of the simpler tricks with which an elephant entertains his audience come as natural to him as the lapping of milk comes to a cat—for instance, the blowing of the month harmonica.

Twenty feet to the right or to the left of the candidate to be taught to lie down four heavy stakes are driven into the ground, and from each of these runs a block and tackle connecting with each leg and manned by ten or a dozen men. When all is ready the trainer stands in front of the animal, raises his hook and "Down! Down!" he orders. The elephant pays no attention. He stands waving his trunk and swaying his body from side to side. "Down! Down!" shouts the trainer again, and upon a signal some forty men begin to heave and tug, the blocks squeak, the ropes creak, and while the trainer continues shouting his command the pachyderm's legs begin to be drawn from under him. With a scalp raising trumpet, the startled creature begins to struggle, lashing with his trunk from side to side and groping with its tip against the floor, frantically seeking for a hold to steady himself, but the relentless ropes continue to draw his legs. The huge beast leans at a forbidding angle, bellowing like a herd of steers and drowning the "Down! Down!" of the trainer. The great body begins to totter. For an instant it regains its balance; then it falls, crashing with a dull thud on to the bed of straw. Trumpeting like the screech out of a cracked steam calliope, the brute tries vainly to struggle to his feet, until at the end of three or four minutes he begins to realize that nothing so very startling has happened and that really he ought to feel very comfortable indeed.

To teach him to stand on his head the trainer again uses the block and tackle. To forestall the effects of a bad fall the floor of the training stable is thickly littered with straw. Then the candidate is harnessed with chains and the bellyband and block and tackle as he was when learning to rear, the difference being that the chains from under the belly lead between the hind instead of between the forelegs, so that the hindquarters instead of the forequarters may be raised.

A Wasp Nurse.

A story of how one wasp cared for another that had been injured is told by a gentleman who, while reading the newspaper, felt bothered by the buzzing of a wasp about his head and knocked it down. It fell through the open window and lay on the sill as if dead.

A few seconds afterward, to his great surprise, a large wasp flew to the window sill and, after buzzing around his wounded brother for a few minutes, began to feel him all over.

The injured wasp seemed to revive under this treatment, and his friend then dragged him gently to the edge, grasped him around the body and flew away with him. It was plain that the stranger, finding a wounded comrade, gave him aid as well as he could and then bore him away home.—London M. A. P.

Cup Plates.

"These cup plates assure us that this 100-year-old china service is the real thing," said an antiquary. "They stopped making cup plates 100 years ago. Cup plates," he went on, "show how table manners change. Now, do you know what they were for? They were to hold your dripping cup of tea—after you had poured a part of it into the saucer to drink from—so that the cloth should not be stained. Yes, in the past, everybody drank hot tea from the saucer. Kings and queens, emperors and generals, all, with a gurgling sound, tilted the full saucer with careful balance to the lips. The cup, meanwhile, reposed on the cup plate."

Awful Blunder.

Newspaper Office Boy — Oh, there's been an awful time up in the editorial room today! Business Manager—Eh? What's the trouble? Office Boy—The hall porter made a mistake and put the "No Admittance" sign at the subscription office and the "Welcome" doormat in front of the editor's room.—London Tit-Bits.

A Delicate Hint.

Two very cadaverous looking tramps looked in at the window of a railway station where a telegraph operator sat at his key.

"Say, pardner," one of them said in a very husky voice, "report a couple o' empties goin' east."

WIVES IN KOREA.

A Humorist Who Draws a Moral From Their Silence.

It is said that in Korea after a native woman is wedded she becomes practically speechless, says Newton Newkirk in the Boston Post. This is in conformity to custom and caste. A Korean wife does not after marriage become absolutely mute, but she does not speak unless necessity demands it. And, by the way, if none of us talked any more than necessity demanded this world would be full of large chunks of silence. The Korean wife does not chatter like a parrakeet. Hot air is something in which she does not deal. Of course if the house got on fire she would mention it, or if she were to step on a snake she wouldn't try to keep the fact a secret, but she does not talk over the back fence when she is bringing in the wash or converse with her neighbor when she is washing the windows. If she did, she would lose her caste and her social rating would slump faster than a copper stock.

Probably many a brutal husband who reads these lines will sigh and say, "Ah, that my wife were a Korean!" There has an impression got abroad in this land of the free and the home of the grafter that our women are endless and tiresome talkers. In the eyes of the masses the American wife holds the long distance record as a continuous conversationalist. And upon this impression jests and jokelets are freely built. The eternally talking wife is a prolific source of inspiration for comic weeklies and the vaudeville stage. Two comedians come down front and, with their noses touching each other, engage in a rapid fire conversation:

"I got a talking machine down to my house!"

"Oh, you got a talking machine down to your house! How much did you pay for it?"

"I didn't pay nothing for it—I married it!" (Shrieks of laughter from the large and select audience.)

But if the wife is voluble of speech, is her husband a sphinx? If a woman is a human phonograph, is a man a clam? Not exactly—not so that you could notice it from the road through the binoculars. Most of the husbands who like to joke about the wagging tongues of their wives are living expounders of the hot air theory. They are the chaps who have nothing to say and devote most of their time to saying it; they are full of persiflage, verbosity and prunes. When they open their mouths their tongues run away with them. Stand one of these tiresome expounders of the obvious up beside a talking machine and he will make it sound like a whisper. Man, as he averages up, is full of bluff, brag and bluster, and that's worse than you can say of the average woman.

Boiler Exploded.

Ericau, Nov. 23.—The boiler in the Pere Marquette pump-house exploded here yesterday afternoon.

Robert Bell, the engineer, and Charles Robelle, a car repairer, were caught in the building and badly scalded.

A special train hurried the men to Blenheim, where they are being treated. Their condition is precarious.

CENSUS HUMORS.

Returns of Occupations That Are Difficult to Classify.

According to an official of the census bureau at Washington, that organization is often puzzled to know how to classify the returns of occupation in cases where the enumerators have given a too literal description of a person's employment. There are two census terms to cover such cases. Occupations not included in the regular list may be entered as "O. T.," meaning "other things," or "N. G.," which stands for "not gainful." To choose between the two sometimes suggests amusing complications.

An enumerator in Iowa reported "drunkard" as the occupation of one of his men. The census bureau entered him as "N. G.," since the next column asserted this to be his occupation for twelve months in the year.

A New York enumerator who seemed to evince the inclinations of a detective reported several men in his district as "crooks," "pickpockets" and "gamblers." They were entered as "N. G.," although their occupations may have been more gainful to them than to their victims.

An Alabama man whose occupation was reported as "odd jobs" goes on the records under "O. T."—"other things."

While some of the occupations which the enumerators give are unusual, they are probably correct. A tramp was described as "loafer, not gainful, unemployed twelve months." An extra thrifty person in one instance was reported as "occupation, miser," and another "lives on savings." A New England woman whose husband was described as an "idler" gave her own occupation as "washing and wishing."

Municipal Motor Cars.

In Birmingham, England, the tramway, water, electricity, and fire departments have already adopted motor cars, and the results are reported to be satisfactory. Every car used is of British construction. The tramway department has a car that has been used for two and a half years, which is employed for inspection purposes. Another car is used for the purpose of collecting tramway receipts from the various depots. This car has also a large platform space so that it can be used for delivering stores. There is, further, a motor tower wagon for inspection and repair of overhead wires and another wagon for general maintenance of overhead equipment. As Birmingham's water is brought 75 miles from Wales, it has been found desirable for the municipality to employ two motor cars for inspection purposes. The electricity department employs two motor cars for inspection purposes as well as for visiting prospective consumers of electricity. The fire department has two large cars which are sent ahead of the engines at the time of a fire in order to prepare for their coming. It is likely that later on Birmingham will follow the example of several other English municipalities and adopt motor fire engines.

DOUMA AND CZAR.

Address of Russian Lower House to Emperor Nicholas.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 25.—The text of the address of the Lower House of Parliament to Emperor Nicholas is as follows:

"Most Gracious Sire,—Your Imperial Majesty has deigned to greet the members of the third Douma and to invoke the Almighty's blessing on the legislative work before us. We, therefore, take the liberty to express personally to your Imperial Majesty, our feelings of gratitude to the supreme head of Russia, and our thanks for the right of popular representation granted to Russia and secured by the fundamental laws of the empire.

"Have confidence in us, sire. We wish to devote all our ability, knowledge and experience, to strengthening the reform of Government, which is given new life by the Imperial will in the manifesto of Oct. 30, 1905; to pacify the fatherland, to assure respect for the laws, to develop popular education, to promote the general welfare, to be a buttress for the greatness and power of indivisible Russia, and to thereby justify the confidence reposed in us by His Majesty and the fatherland."

JAIL FOR SALOONKEEPERS.

Rigorous Enforcement of Canada Temperance Act at Moncton.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 25.—After many years of fighting the Canadian Temperance Association were supported by the High Court, who dismissed an appeal from sentence given by Magistrate McKay, at Moncton.

For years saloonkeepers in that city have been violating the Scott Act, and regularly paying fines. McKay sentenced some to imprisonment with hard labor.

In Moncton several hotel proprietors intend retiring from business if the sentence is carried out.

It has been announced the cases will be appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada. A determined effort has been made all through the province, especially at McAdam Junction, and to the north. One man was fined nine hundred dollars in one village.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Sweetheart Discouraged O'Connor Because He Was Dissipated.

North Bay, Nov. 25.—Parnell O'Connor, the young man who attempted suicide Saturday night by shooting himself in the North Bay hotel, is still alive, and unless blood poisoning sets in he has a chance of recovery, although the operation performed proved unsuccessful in locating the bullet.

He had written a letter to his sweetheart, a prominent young lady of North Bay, who, it appears, had not been receiving him with open arms, owing to his habitual dissipation. The letter is now in the hands of the coroner, and its contents have not been made known. He told the doctor that the young lady had "threw him down" and that was his reason for shooting himself.

POWER HOUSE COLLAPSES.

One Killed and Two Injured, One Perhaps Fatally.

Moosejaw, Nov. 24.—An addition to the civic power house in course of erection collapsed suddenly Saturday, killing George Nethercott, and injuring W. J. Lawrence, the contractor in charge, and another carpenter named Fenwick. Lawrence's injuries are likely to prove fatal.

To Reclaim Zuyder Zee.

London, Nov. 25.—According to information received from The Hague, the vast plan for reclaiming the Zuyder Zee is again in contemplation. The Dutch Government has laid before the States General a bill to appropriate nearly $12,000,000 to the work extending over seven years.

Forty thousand acres would be reclaimed, which, of course, is only a small portion of Zuyder Zee, but the successful completion of this section would pave the way to the more ambitious project which was suggested a few years ago, and by which it is hoped that almost the whole of her engulfed territory will be restored to Holland.

Gratton Found Alive.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Relatives of Emile Gratton, in this city, who have been mourning him as dead for two days, on Saturday received the glad news that he was all right. The first intimation came in a press despatch that he had been injured in Sawtell's hotel fire in Buffalo. Later a wire from the chief of police conveyed the news that his injuries had proved fatal. A brother left immediately to take charge of the remains. When he arrived in Buffalo he found his brother all right.

Court-Martial of Mutineers.

Vladivostok, Nov. 25.—The court-martial of 198 sappers and marines, and the commanders of two torpedo-boat destroyers, who were implicated in the mutiny of Oct. 29 and 30, will begin to-day.

The hearing will be secret.

The mutiny at Vladivostok on Oct. 29 was quickly suppressed by the use of machine guns. A battalion of sappers attempted to capture one of the barracks, but was routed by two companies of a loyal regiment. On the following day a naval action took place.

Adams' Jury Disagreed.

Rathdrum, Idaho, Nov. 25.—The jury in the Steve Adams case was discharged at 5.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon being unable to agree to a verdict, after being out since 8.30 o'clock Saturday. The jury stood 8 for acquittal and 4 for conviction.

One of Riel's Ministers.

Winnipeg, Nov. 25.—Almost the last member of the Provincial Government of the northwest founded under the presidency of Louis Riel, at Fort Garry, in 1869-70, Charles Nolan, was buried on Thursday last at St. Boniface.

James Killen, of Niagara Falls, a gardener, was killed by a M.C.R. train on Saturday.

TRAGEDY IN NEW YORK

Wife Shoots Her Husband and Then Suicides.

Before Shooting Herself Set Fire to House—Firemen Discovered Blaze and Saved Lives of Two Servants—Woman Had Only Been Married Six Months—Brooded Over Money Losses.

New York, Nov. 25.—A strange double tragedy which for a time baffled solution, happened in this vicinity early Saturday, when Nicholas Smith, a wealthy New York manufacturer, was shot and killed by his bride of six months, Mrs. Grace Van Schaick Smith, who then killed herself.

After firing a bullet into her husband's brain as he lay asleep, she set fire to their house in New Rochelle, and then fired a bullet into her own heart.

Firemen extinguished the flames and saved the lives of two women servants, who, frightened by the shooting, had locked themselves in their room. After an examination of witnesses Coroner Squire found a verdict that Mrs. Smith killed her husband and then took her own life.

It is believed that the woman became suddenly insane, a theory borne out by the fact that a number of years ago she was confined in an asylum because of melancholia brought on by brooding over the loss of a $2,000,000 fortune.

MARTIAL LAW PREVAILS.

Portugal Almost In State of Revolution—Army and Navy Affected.

Lisbon, Nov. 25.—The city of Lisbon is now practically under martial law. Detachments of police and municipal guards are constantly patrolling the streets, but no violent incidents have occurred. The censorship over telegraphic despatches is most strict and the post officials refuse to accept letters which do not contain the address of the senders on the envelopes.

Much dissatisfaction is reported among the officers of the Portuguese army. Three generals are known to have been relieved of their commands and, according to report, some 300 political prisoners have been placed on board a cruiser which left this port immediately afterwards. Another version of the rumor is that the officers of the cruiser are disaffected. Rebellion is said to be rampant in the navy. A decree is published in the official Government organ proclaiming an extension of the period of restraint governing the liberty of the press.

An official statement by the Government organ declares that the situation in Portugal has been grossly misrepresented. It says the fantastic rumors concerning members of the royal family, the attitude of the political leaders, as well as the stories of an outbreak against order are without foundation.

SUBMARINES COLLIDE.

French Ship Smashed Under Water, But Is Brought to Surface.

Toulon, Nov. 25.—While engaged in making a joint attack on the battleship Jaureguiberry, during the naval manoeuvres off this port, the submarines Bonite and Souffleur collided at a depth of thirty metres.

The Souffleur's conning tower window was smashed and the water began to rush in, but with rare presence of mind, the commander operated the rising mechanism and the vessel reached the surface before it had time to fill completely.

Another Rockefeller Gift.

New York, Nov. 25.—The board of directors of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research of this city have announced an additional gift from John D. Rockefeller of $2,600,000.

The money is to form an endowment fund, the proceeds of which may be used in any way the directors see fit. It is understood that the success of the institute in discovering a remedy for cebrero spinal meningitis, which followed a lengthy investigation under the guidance of Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the institute, was largely responsible for Mr. Rockfeller's gift.

Blew Open Two Safes.

Beecher Falls, Vt., Nov. 25.—Burglars, apparently well equipped with explosives and other safe-breaking implements, entered the Main Central station here some time during the night, blew open two safes and escaped with more than $1,000 in cash. It is believed that they crossed the Canadian boundary.

Fatal Head-On Collision.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Engineer Thomas Edward Vernell, aged 23 years, of this city, was instantly killed in a head-on collision between two freight trains on the Central New England and Western Railroad at St. Elmo, 40 miles west of this city early yesterday. No other person was hurt.

Magistrate Bartlett Injured.

Windsor, Nov. 25.—Magistrate Alexander Bartlett fell down part of a flight of stairs in the City Hall Saturday, and received injuries which will likely confine him to his home two or three weeks. He is 85 years of age, and the oldest acting magistrate in Canada, as far as is known.

For Local Option.

Stouffville, Nov. 23.—Whitchurch Township council were this week called upon to take a hand in the local option business. A petition containing 140 names was submitted asking the council to submit the measure for repeal, while another containing 400 names was submitted praying the council not to submit a bylaw to repeal the measure. The local option people won out.

Seventeen men busy at making road near Nice, France, yesterday, were buried in a mountain slide.

A GREAT POSTAL REFORMER.

Henniker Heaton, M. P., the Apostle of Cheap Letter Rates.

John Henniker Heaton, M. P., the father of the new international postage stamp which has just come into use, is often spoken of as Rowland Hill II. because of his postal reforms.

He was born in Rochester in 1848, says M. A. P., and at an early age emigrated to Australia, where he worked for some time as editor of a weekly paper. In 1885 he was elected Conservative M. P. for Canterbury, and the same year he represented the Tasmanian Government at the Berlin Telegraph Conference. His great triumph came in 1898, when his scheme of Imperial penny postage was adopted. Mr. Heaton is a freeman of the City of London, and has refused a knighthood no fewer than four times. Apart from his Parliamentary and reforming labors, he has found time to write a good deal and is a first-class chess player and a collector of old books.

JOHN HENNIKER HEATON, M.P.

The story of how Mr. Henniker Heaton was induced to become a postal reformer is extremely interesting. A good many years ago he happened to be present in a postoffice when an old woman entered and asked how much it would cost to send a letter to her son in Australia. When she heard that the charge was sixpence, she looked very dismayed, and intimating that this was beyond her means, prepared to depart. Touched by her disappointment, Mr. Heaton offered her a sixpenny stamp, which she gladly accepted, and the letter was despatched on its way to the son in Australia. Some time later, Mr. Heaton was again in the same postoffice and the postmaster asked him if he remembered the incident. On receiving an affirmative reply, the official stated that in answer to her letter the old woman had had an invitation from her son to go out to him in Australia, and that he had offered to pay her passage. This little romance set Mr. Heaton thinking, with the result that he determined not to rest until he had brought about a reduction in the postal rates.

CANNON FOR LONDON FOGS.

Novel Scheme to Rid English Metropolis of Old-Time Nuisance.

A scheme to disperse fogs by currents of air, shot over London from "propectors" six miles away, has been laid before the public control committee of the London County Council, and M. Demetrio Moggiora, the inventor, is ready to start experiments.

M. Moggiora says his apparatus has already been subjected to severe tests at Milan, Italy, where fogs, clouds and hailstorms were quickly dissipated. With his projectors, or "air cannon," placed within a radius of six miles from the Houses of Parliament, he says he will clear away the worst fog in London within twenty minutes.

"The theory is that the fog hangs over London simply because there are no air currents to carry it away," said M. Moggiora, recently. "Now, my projectors, acting like cannon, furnish the necessary currents of air.

"Each projector is about 60 feet long. An explosion is caused as in a cannon, and the concussion has an effect for six miles. Thus, if ten or more of these were ranged over London from different directions, the fog would be lifted immediately to an altitude where the wind would blow it away. After the apparatus was permanently installed the cost would be 7d. for each explosion, and twenty explosions would rid the metropolis of its densest fog. The cost for original construction would be $3,000.

"I am confident," said M. Moggiora, "that my experiments will demonstrate the practicability of a fogless London."

"The suggestion is no more incredible than wireless telegraphy," said an official. "Who knows but in a short time we shall have a department for the control of fogs and rain, with experts to regulate the proper proportions of sunshine and cloudy weather?"

The King and the Artist.

A pleasant little story is being related of an incident which occurred during King Edward's recent holiday at Marienbad. It is said that he made inquiry as to a silhouette artist whom he had met at the watering place years ago. The man was still there, and, as in former years, still made a living by dexterously cutting profile portraits from sheets of black paper. He was presented on the balcony of the Egerlander Hotel, where the King had taken luncheon with the Grand Duke and Duchess of Oldenburg, the Duke of Teck, and several other friends. The King looked on while pictures of the ladies were being made, and then said, "Now, it's my turn," and took his place before the picture man. "Get the hat right," said the King. "Don't forget the cigar. I'll hold it as I did years ago for you; and let the cane show"—all this in that faultless, real German which fascinates. Then, turning toward his smiling friends, he added, "I wonder whether he will flatter me as to figure." The profile picture was true as to figure.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 25.—It is reported here that the steamer Monohasset, burned to the water's edge Saturday night on Thunder Bay, Lake Huron, and that the crew was saved.

Trade Union For Wives.

If women workers take the advice tendered them by Miss Mary Higgs at the recent congress of the National Union of Women Workers at Manchester a trade union for wives will become an accomplished fact.

Miss Mary Higgs prophesied a war of sex, and asked if man were to become "a parasite."

"All the married women in the world are wage-earners," said Dr. Mary Murdoch in discussing "The wage-earning of married women."

"If these women will not band themselves together to protect their interests, something must be done to make them work less, so that future generations may gain in physique and general health."

Dr. Murdoch cited several examples to show the strong independence of married women. One old woman, after 60 years of factory work, said, "A shilling you earn yourself is worth two given you by a man." Another worker, when told that the Government intended to stop the wage-earning of married women, replied, "Well, we wunnot wed."

Cannot Get Bail.

New York, Nov. 23.—Howard Maxwell, the indicted ex-president of the Boro Bank of Brooklyn, being unable to find a bondsman to act as surety for him in the sum of $30,000, on three indictments charging him with grand larceny and forgery, was compelled to remain yesterday in jail. He had his meals sent in from a restaurant instead of eating the ordinary prison fare and he refused to see reporters. Up to last evening the only visitors reported to have called on him at the jail was his counsel.

PEN POINTS

Have you got the walking craze.!

Hartley's victory was a comparatively easy one, as he won on a walk.

Stephens makes ink, but there is another man by the same name who possessed an inkling that Hartley could win.

One month from to-day will be Christmas. How time flies. Do your Christmas shopping early and you will satisfy both yourself and the storekeeper.

Congratulations to Davie Hartley! Peterborough's popular painter pedestrian is certainly progressive when he can cover over fifty-seven miles in twelve hours.

If some one will only start in to make wood sawing or stone breaking popular, the same as long distance walking and running or Limerick writing are just now, what a healthy race we will become.

Alfred Stevens was famed as an English sculptor, Joseph Stevens as a noted animal painter, Henry as an illustrious American bibliographer. George Stevens as the irrepressible backer of David Hartley, the celebrated pedestrian.

Stephenson (George) won fame by building the first locomotive. And it might be added that Stevens'-son—Charlie—was the chap who trained Hartley, the man who won the walking race. There is a great deal in a name.

It may seem paradoxical that Reynolds, the barber, failed to brush up at the latter end of the race. He was decidedly off color, while Hartley, the painter, cut down the tonsorial artist's record; trimmed him to a peak, without turning a hair or ruffling a disturbance of any kind.

"How are you feeling?" was asked of Reynolds after the contest. "Oh, I am quite cut up about my defeat," responded the walking barber. "And how did you stand the pace?" inquired another party of the victorious painter. "First rate, but I am Hartley glad it's over," was the modest reply.

'And the evil days have come upon Port Hope! Truly this is a period of great tribulation and dejection, of weariness of spirit, wakeful nights and sore distress, for the quiet lakeside town, which in rapid succession has lost the southern terminus of the Trent canal, the car ferry and the long distance walking honors. 'And Rachael weeping for her children refuseth to be comforted with the one lone honor—the championship of the Midland baseball league.

Canadians should be thankful for a splendid climate. The present month has been the finest November on record, and more beautiful weather could not be desired. We have boasted of our merry months of May, of leafy Junes and glorious Septembers, but November should be accorded the laurel wreath this year. Of her much is not generally expected, but in competition with other months of 1907, she can this year bear the palm of victory.

The plea which Mr. R. L. Borden, the popular Conservative leader, made last session for an extension of the jurisdiction of the railway commission has borne fruit. The government has decided to draft a bill this session increasing the membership of the board and enlarging its jurisdiction along the lines suggested by the leader of the opposition, namely, by giving the board control of telegraph and telephone. The membership of the board being increased by two or three will enable the commission to hold simultaneous sittings in sections. Score one for Mr. Borden.

No Change in Marriage Law In Ontario

Catholic Girls May Still Wed Protestants—New Law From Rome Has Not Yet Arrived

Toronto, Nov. 20—The policy of Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, in prohibiting marriages between Protestants and Catholics on pain of excommunication has not been adopted in the Diocese of Toronto, nor is it likely to be.

Rev. Father Cruise, secretary of Archbishop O'Connor, in an interview with The Telegram this morning said: "No new rule has been adopted. No change has been made from the ordinary law which has been in force in this diocese for forty years. Catholics are allowed to marry Protestants, but of course a dispensation is necessary. I have heard of no intention to change the law in this respect."

"What about the new law in regard to the validity of marriages contracted between Protestants and Catholics before other than a priest of the Catholic faith?"

"We have not as yet received the official copy of it," said Father Cruise. "It has been delayed for some reason, but there is no doubt of the authenticity of the published reports. I have seen copies of it in the London Tablet and other papers. It only affects the marriages between Catholics and Protestants. Of course it does not affect marriages of Protestants which are valid in their own eyes and in the eyes of the church."

"You hold that marriage is a sacrament?"

"Yes, between baptised per sons."

Murray Street Church Growing in Membership

At the Murray street Baptist Church, at both services yesterday, the ordinance of baptism was administered.

During the past eight months some fifty-four new members have been received into membership—twenty-seven men and twenty-seven women. Murray street Church is growing rapidly and under its able and popular pastor Rev. Mr. Webb, its affairs, both spiritual and temporal, are in a highly satisfactory condition.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES KIDD, SR

Isabella Macnaughton, relict of the late James Kidd, Sr., died at her home in Dummer on Sunday, the 17th of November. She was born in Perthshire, Scotland, in the year 1820. In religion she was a member of the Presbyterian church, Warsaw. The deceased leaves to mourn her loss three sons and five daughters. These are Dr. P. E. Kidd, of New York city; Dr. D. A. Kidd, of Atwood, Ont; W. J. Kidd, of the homestead, Dummer; Mrs. S. Fitz, Omaha; Mrs. Ferguson, Lakefield; Mrs. Williamson, Omemee; Mrs. Kelly, Dummer, and Mrs. W. J. Campbell, Belleville.

JOSEPH CADOTTE

Joseph Cadotte, who died in the House of Providence, was buried in St. Peter's cemetery on Friday. He was 100 years old and came to Peterborough from Quebec three years ago. He leaves no relatives in this vicinity. The deceased had been ailing for about a year.

CLAIMED GOOD FOR THE BLOOD

Good Home Made Mixture Said to Make Kidneys Filter Out Impurities

All medical authorities are agreed that the blood is the great source of disease or of health in the human system. If the blood is pure, the individual is strong and healthy, if the food is impure or diseased then there is sickness or decay in the whole system.

Rheumatism is strictly a blood disease. It is caused by excessive uric acid. Sores, pimples, etc., mean bad blood. Catarrhal affections must be treated through the blood to get permanent results. To get well, to feel strong, hearty and vigorous one must have good, clean blood, and lots of it. You can't clean the blood thoroughly unless the kidneys are made active. Bad blood means clogged, inactive kidneys and liver which causes, too, such symptoms as backache, nervousness, bladder and urinary difficulties and other sympathetic troubles.

Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce. Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime. The ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

Here the readers of this paper have a simple yet powerful and effective remedy for all forms of blood, kidney and bladder diseases, which should relieve rheumatism and catarrhal affections and replace that weak, worn-out, miserable feeling with strength, vigor and health.

This prescription is considered a fine system renovator and, being made of vegetable extracts only, is harmless and anyone can mix it at home. Try this anyway before investing in the secret unknown concoctions of the patent medicine manufacturers.

AMUSEMENTS

WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.

Chas. H. Yale's pictorial comedy melodrama, "The Way Of the Transgressor," was presented to a crowded house at the Grand on Saturday night. There is plenty of action and life, dash, excitement and adventure in the play to sustain the interest, and the production gave general satisfaction. There are several marvellous acting dogs, which are certainly well trained and educated. The scenic embellishments and accessories add to the attractiveness of the play; the twin tunnel station and the water front near the ferry house on the Hudson river are very realistic. The specialties were above the average. Irene and Zazu, the wonderful girl and the wonderful little dog, both did some great acrobatic and contortion work, which called forth tremendous applause. Billy Williams as a colored servant was full of quips and jokelets, which were decidedly funny. Teddy LeDuc, as a Scotland Yard detective, cleverly personated several characters, his makeup, mannerisms and brogue being admirable. Im company with Miss Frances Parker a hoydenish girl, with her heart in the right place, he presented an original travesty, "The Dress Rehearsal." Howard Sydney as John Harris, the transgressor, was an up-to-date villain, while Frank Baldwin as Tom Morley, his confederate, was not far behind him in rascality and turpitude.

Annual Meeting of Bible Society

Will be Held on Wednesday Night of This Week

The annual meeting of the local branch of the Bible Society will be held on Wednesday night of this week in St. John's school house.

Reports for the past year will be presented, officers elected and other business transacted.

It is hoped there will be a large attendance as the regular mid-week prayer services in the various city churches have been withdrawn in order to afford as many persons as possible an opportunity of attending the meeting. Rev. W. H. A. French, of Fenelon Falls, will give an address on the work of the Bible Society and what it has accomplished.

Five New Lodges Within a Month

Mr. James A. Tully Speaks of Progress of Oddfellowship

Mr. James A. Tully, representative of the Oddfellows' Relief Association, is in the city. Mr. Tully has been successful in instituting four new I. O.O.F. lodges within the past few days, and before the present month is over will have added a fifth—the latter being at Arthur, in Wellington county. The four lodges instituted so far in November are at Williamstown, Port Credit, Stouffville and Cayuga. Five new lodges in one month constitute a record. When it is considered that Mr. Tully cannot enter a place and organize a lodge except upon the written invitation and request from resident Oddfellows, his work for the present month is little short of marvellous.

In America progress has been the progress and expansion of Oddfellowship to date that an average of 500 new members are received into the Order every day.

The Cordage Works Resume Operations

About 200 Hands Will be Employed in Various Departments

After being closed down for some weeks for the purpose of making repairs, the Canadian Cordage Works resumed operations this morning. The prospects for a busy season are encouraging. Over 100 hands began work this morning, and by the end of the week it is expected that fully 200 persons will be employed. The preparation department was started today, and tomorrow the spinning gang, balling gang, etc., will be engaged.

GUARDIANS OF THE NORTH.

Interesting visitors in a constant stream pass through the cities of the Canadian West, and the reporters on the newspapers in Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgarry, and every centre large or small along the route from the lakes to the Pacific, have many opportunities for obtaining picturesque interviews. But of all the men who turn up from odd corners of the world to smoke their cigars and relate their experiences in western hotel corridors, few have such real stories of real interest to tell as members of the Mounted Police force, who, after seeing service in the far north, come down for a breathing time to the borders of civilization. The other day there arrived in Winnipeg a party of eight of these intrepid men who have just completed three years of arduous, adventurous service in the great frozen, unknown land of mystery, extending from Fort Churchill to Cape Fullerton. In the party were Sergeant J. D. Nicholson, who came in from Fort Churchill; Leslie Laing, York Factory; H. Verity and F. E. Heaps,, both of Cape Fullerton N. W. M. P. posts.

To a newspaper reporter Sergeant Nicholson gave some idea of conditions and circumstances that enter into the life of the patrol man in the far northern circle of illimitable ice and snow. He has spent two years at Cape Fullerton. Roughly speaking, it is approaching 1,800 miles north of Winnipeg, so far north that distances are incalculable to the untraveled, and where, when the Northwest policeman goes on a beat that requires months to cover it once, he knows after he leaves the fort it is chance alone whether he ever returns.

"We had a particularly rough time coming in," said Sergeant Nicholson. "Leaving Fort Churchill on the first of September, it took twenty-five days of rough travel to reach McLeod's place at Cross Lake, Norway House. In all my twenty years' service it was about the toughest experience I ever went through. The weather was outrageously bad, but the pace set by the Indians in the officers' canoe leading, was a gruelling one at the start, but towards the finish they didn't have much on the white man. We went in by steamer to Fort Churchill and the boys stationed at Cape Fullerton reached the quarters there by water. That is easy enough, and the acme of comfort so far as the north goes; to go in by the straits and across the bay, but we came out by way of Nelson river, and I know now from personal experience why the Hudson Bay Co. used the Haines River. If we had come that way we would have saved several days' time.

"The portages were most trying, and one day we made only two and a half miles. The Nelson river drops between 400 and 500 feet in the first hundred miles, just enough along that entire distance to compel you to take your canoes out of the water and carry them quite 100 miles.

"On September 16 we were in a pitiable plight. It was the first of the usual September storms, and sleet and snow fell until for eight days we did not have a dry stitch of clothing on us. Up to the knees in mud, and long hauls through the brush, such an experience would deter any man from going back.

"At Cape Fullerton the police are simply doing exploration work, and custom collecting, and, I presume, seeing that no invaders annex any territory under the pretext of discovery. The American whalers came into the Hudson Bay for a three-year expedition. They have to be looked after and the custom dues paid. It is the duty of the Mounted Police patrol, which covers half a continent, to watch the northern latitude for anything and everything. It is not possible to define the exact duties of the R. N. W. M. P. A man of the boundary of patrol limits is very much an arbitrator of all things under his observation in the tremendous territory that he covers on his beat. He has instructions, of course, and is amenable to discipline, but he is the only judge of circumstances, and his report must be acceptable. At times his experiences are bitter in the extreme.

"Men who are not equal to the risk are not sent on such rounds. Trips from the Fullerton capes stamp a man as equal to any circumstances of endurance or resourcefulness that may arise. You may take it for granted that men like my friend Heap here, and Mr. Verity, who have done their two or three years at the Cape, have received the training that fits them for any demands that can be made upon men who go as far beyond the frontiers of civilization. Hardships, however, only occur among a people who never leave the confines of urban life. Our provisions are always good. In some respects ours is the finest life in the world. There is no liquor allowed in the posts, which some of us often regret, but it is the best. Liquor and salt mean scurvy. We have very little of that, although we live principally on canned vegetables. The men out on long patrols live on the country for both food and furs."

Saskatchewan's Crop.

The Trade and Commerce Department has received from the Government of Saskatchewan an official estimate of the crop yield in that province, as compiled from statistics furnished by correspondents in all districts. The total production of wheat is estimated at 28,042,106 bushels, an average of 15.17 per acre; oats, 29,167,962 bushels, average 37.74 per acre; barley, 1,903,072 bushels, average 30.08 per acre; flax, 921,043 bushels, average 10.81 per acre. The average yield of wheat last year was 21.40 bushels per acre. This year's wheat crop will grade, according to the Government estimate, as follows: Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Northern, 10,392,657 bushels; No. 4 and 5 Northern, 7,341,597 bushels; No. 6 and feed, 9,777,855 bushels. The aggregate value will be up to last year's crop. Many farmers report the best results in twenty years, others report the worst yield in that time.

Four cases of yellow fever are reported at Barbadoes, and two men of H. M. S. 'Indefatigable' have died.

CRUTCH WALKING.

Trials of the Man Who Tried It For the First Time.

"No one who has never tried to use crutches can have any idea of the trouble it is to learn to walk with them," says a St. Louisan temporarily disabled by an injury to one foot.

"When I was first laid up I anticipated a speedy recovery, but progress was slow, and in order that I might have a little exercise the doctor recommended a pair of crutches. 'There's no trick at all in learning to use them.' He spoke of it as a matter of course, and I supposed that all I had to do was to pick up the crutches, put them under my arms and walk off, fast or slow, just as I pleased. I had seen men with crutches walking at as brisk a gait as I had ever been able to achieve in my best walking days, so I was delighted with the prospect of getting out of the house.

"The crutches were ordered and sent home. I took them with alacrity, and at the very first step I sat down so hard on the floor that it seemed to me my spine was driven halfway into my skull. After recovering from the shock I concluded there must be something wrong with the crutches, and a visitor to the house after trying them himself pronounced them entirely too long. So I took off the rubber tips and cut off an inch, then tried them again and would have had another sitting jolt had I not been held. The crutch expert declared they were still too long, so we took off another inch, then two half inches. That remedied matters some, but I speedily discovered after walking a few steps with a man holding me up that my hands and arms were about to give out and that on the slightest provocation the crutch slipped from under my arms and wabbled so alarmingly that I felt every moment as if I was going headlong to the ground.

"Then I discovered that I must rest more weight on the top of the crutch and less on the handles. This was an improvement, but in five minutes the muscles under my arms were so sore that I couldn't stand the pain. Then I put pads on top, only to find out that a brick pavement is the roughest walking place on the earth. A Rocky Mountain path is like granitoid compared to it. The slightest inequality caught the tip of the crutch and sent me staggering. When I raised my foot to take a step forward my shoe always caught against the bricks, and I would have had twenty falls every fifteen minutes if I had not been supported.

"Crutch walking is a science. It must be studied and learned like other sciences. Now when I see a man traveling along on two crutches I am filled with admiration for his dexterity, but when I observe a one legged man getting over the ground on only one crutch I feel that he is a born genius.' —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Advantage of White Hair.

"Most people regard white hair as a misfortune," said a hairdresser. "They mourn over its coming as a sign of vanished youth, and they try first one thing and then another to withstand this touch of time. I think they make a mistake. Paradoxical as it may sound, white hair, when it arrives, say, in the late twenties or early thirties, really helps in keeping a person young. It's true, anyhow. A man or woman whose hair turns white before the wrinkles arrive is a subject for congratulation, because for many years he or she will appear about the same, and if only proper care is taken of the complexion the impression of youthfulness will continue—I was almost going to say indefinitely. Then, white hair is more often than not extremely becoming. It relieves a heavy face and gives an added tone to the most spirituelle one. People don't realize this; that's all. If they did, they would be content to let nature take its course." —Exchange.

How Different Races Bear Pain.

Moaning and groaning as if she were being tortured to death, a colored woman sat in the accident ward at Jefferson hospital. "Don't wind dat bandage so tight, doctor," she begged of an interne who was skillfully putting a bandage on her foot; "you'll stop de circulation, sure." Wondering what dreadful calamity had befallen the suffering woman, a visitor asked another doctor what was the matter with her. He said nothing but a slight cut on the bottom of her foot. "Colored people always make a great disturbance over any physical injury," he added, "but the Italians are the worst. The sight of a little wound seems to upset them entirely, and they come in here shrieking and crying, accompanied by anxious friends and relatives also shrieking and crying, over the slightest cut or burn. Americans and Germans seem to bear pain with the most fortitude, and in general women do better than men."—Philadelphia Record.

Feeding Zoo Animals.

Not only is much care exercised in the choice of horseflesh, but when a carcass is cut up it is divided in such a way as to insure that in each piece given to the animals there is a bone. Otherwise the lions, tigers and other big carnivora would swallow the piece whole, which would be bad even for their iron digestions. The presence of the bone compels them to take bites at the flesh, which they pick from the bone with their claws and teeth, licking the bone afterward with their sandpapery tongues until the surface shines. For the smaller carnivora, such as polecats and weasels, and for the captorial birds, horseflesh is somewhat too coarse and pungent, so they are fed for the most part on the heads and necks of chickens. These parts are selected also because of the bone in them.—London Graphic.

The government has addressed a vigorous protest to the Grand Trunk Pacific, in regard to the delay of construction in the west.

BEER MAKES BLOOD

MALT has certain food-elements which the body can transform into healthy blood quickly and with the least digestive effort.

HOPS contain a medical principle which tones the nerves without reaction, and so supplies nervous energy and saves it as well.

BEER as brewed in Ontario is made from choicest Ontario barley malt, selected hops, and the purest of water, dealt with under conditions which insure purity and quality.

THE better the blood the sounder the health, and the surer the body to combat disease effectively. Beer, by some counted an intoxicant, is not so—it is a blood-maker, with barely enough alcohol in it to help the stomach do its work far better.

Beer with meals is good for 997 people out of every thousand—and is specially good for women. Ask your own doctor about it—beer is probably good for you.

BEER is a term which covers lager, ales, porter, and stout; and in the practice of Ontario brewers, implies beverages made under most hygienic conditions from Ontario barley (the best in the world) malt, hops and pure water.

Newspaper Makes a Strong Threat

Bobcaygeon Independent is After the Postmaster-General.

The Post Office Department appears to be troubled with the extremely erroneous idea that this great journal is a bloated financial institution wallowing in wealth. A short time since it struck this g. j. for a cent per copy on every paper sent to the States, now it hits up this g. j. for extra pay on what it is pleased to call its free delivery in Peterboro', free to the fellow at the other end, while P.O. Department stands in the middle and absorbs pay for doing the free work. This g. j. is no Standard Oil Trust, it is not even a Tobacco Joint, and these continual demands for cash are somewhat distressing when subscriptions are usually paid in cordwood, pumpkins and farm produce. If the Postmaster General comes around here next season base ball bing, and expects this great g. j. to look up bait for him, he will be disappointed. Any further demands for increased postage, and the relations between the P. M. G. and this g. j. will be strained.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box nearest to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the War number is given first, then a pause, and then the remaining numbers of the Box.

At the Liberal Convention in Fredericton, N. B. yesterday, Mr. W. T. Whitehead was nominated the Liberal candidate.

GUARDIANS OF THE NORTH.

Interesting visitors in a constant stream pass through the cities of the Canadian West, and the reporters on the newspapers in Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgarry, and every centre large or small along the route from the lakes to the Pacific, have many opportunities for obtaining picturesque interviews. But of all the men who turn up from odd corners of the world to smoke their cigars and relate their experiences in western hotel corridors, few have such real stories of real interest to tell as members of the Mounted Police force, who, after seeing service in the far north, come down for a breathing time to the borders of civilization. The other day there arrived in Winnipeg a party of eight of these intrepid men who have just completed three years of arduous, adventurous service in the great frozen, unknown land of mystery, extending from Fort Churchill to Cape Fullerton. In the party were Sergeant J. D. Nicholson, who came in from Fort Churchill; Leslie Laing, York Factory; H. Verity and F. E. Heaps,, both of Cape Fullerton N. W. M. P. posts.

To a newspaper reporter Sergeant Nicholson gave some idea of conditions and circumstances that enter into the life of the patrol man in the far northern circle of illimitable ice and snow. He has spent two years at Cape Fullerton. Roughly speaking, it is approaching 1,800 miles north of Winnipeg, so far north that distances are incalculable to the untraveled, and where, when the Northwest policeman goes on a beat that requires months to cover it once, he knows after he leaves the fort it is chance alone whether he ever returns.

"We had a particularly rough time coming in," said Sergeant Nicholson. "Leaving Fort Churchill on the first of September, it took twenty-five days of rough travel to reach McLeod's place at Cross Lake, Norway House. In all my twenty years' service it was about the toughest experience I ever went through. The weather was outrageously bad, but the pace set by the Indians in the officers' canoe leading, was a gruelling one at the start, but towards the finish they didn't have much on the white man. We went in by steamer to Fort Churchill and the boys stationed at Cape Fullerton reached the quarters there by water. That is easy enough, and the acme of comfort so far as the north goes; to go in by the straits and across the bay, but we came out by way of Nelson river, and I know now from personal experience why the Hudson Bay Co. used the Haines River. If we had come that way we would have saved several days' time.

"The portages were most trying, and one day we made only two and a half miles. The Nelson river drops between 400 and 500 feet in the first hundred miles, just enough along that entire distance to compel you to take your canoes out of the water and carry them quite 100 miles.

"On September 16 we were in a pitiable plight. It was the first of the usual September storms, and sleet and snow fell until for eight days we did not have a dry stitch of clothing on us. Up to the knees in mud, and long hauls through the brush, such an experience would deter any man from going back.

"At Cape Fullerton the police are simply doing exploration work, and custom collecting, and, I presume, seeing that no invaders annex any territory under the pretext of discovery. The American whalers came into the Hudson Bay for a three-year expedition. They have to be looked after and the custom dues paid. It is the duty of the Mounted Police patrol, which covers half a continent, to watch the northern latitude for anything and everything. It is not possible to define the exact duties of the R. N. W. M. P. A man of the boundary of patrol limits is very much an arbitrator of all things under his observation in the tremendous territory that he covers on his beat. He has instructions, of course, and is amenable to discipline, but he is the only judge of circumstances, and his report must be acceptable. At times his experiences are bitter in the extreme.

"Men who are not equal to the risk are not sent on such rounds. Trips from the Fullerton capes stamp a man as equal to any circumstances of endurance or resourcefulness that may arise. You may take it for granted that men like my friend Heap here, and Mr. Verity, who have done their two or three years at the Cape, have received the training that fits them for any demands that can be made upon men who go as far beyond the frontiers of civilisation. Hardships, however, only occur among a people who never leave the confines of urban life. Our provisions are always good. In some respects ours is the finest life in the world. There is no liquor allowed in the posts, which some of us often regret, but it is the best. Liquor and salt mean scurvy. We have very little of that, although we live principally on canned vegetables. The men out on long patrols live on the country for both food and furs."

CRUTCH WALKING.

Trials of the Man Who Tried It For the First Time.

"No one who has never tried to use crutches can have any idea of the trouble it is to learn to walk with them," says a St. Louisan temporarily disabled by an injury to one foot.

"When I was first laid up I anticipated a speedy recovery, but progress was slow, and in order that I might have a little exercise the doctor recommended a pair of crutches. 'There's no trick at all in learning to use them.' He spoke of it as a matter of course, and I supposed that all I had to do was to pick up the crutches, put them under my arms and walk off, fast or slow, just as I pleased. I had seen men with crutches walking at as brisk a gait as I had ever been able to achieve in my best walking days, so I was delighted with the prospect of getting out of the house.

"The crutches were ordered and sent home. I took them with alacrity, and at the very first step I sat down so hard on the floor that it seemed to me my spine was driven halfway into my skull. After recovering from the shock I concluded there must be something wrong with the crutches, and a visitor to the house after trying them himself pronounced them entirely too long. So I took off the rubber tips and cut off an inch, then tried them again and would have had another sitting jolt had I not been held. The crutch expert declared they were still too long, so we took off another inch, then two half inches. That remedied matters some, but I speedily discovered after walking a few steps with a man holding me up that my hands and arms were about to give out and that on the slightest provocation the crutch slipped from under my arms and wabbled so alarmingly that I felt every moment as if I was going headlong to the ground.

"Then I discovered that I must rest more weight on the top of the crutch and less on the handles. This was an improvement, but in five minutes the muscles under my arms were so sore that I couldn't stand the pain. Then I put pads on top, only to find out that a brick pavement is the roughest walking place on the earth. A Rocky Mountain path is like granitoid compared to it. The slightest inequality caught the tip of the crutch and sent me staggering. When I raised my foot to take a step forward my shoe always caught against the bricks, and I would have had twenty falls every fifteen minutes if I had not been supported.

"Crutch walking is a science. It must be studied and learned like other sciences. Now when I see a man traveling along on two crutches I am filled with admiration for his dexterity, but when I observe a one legged man getting over the ground on only one crutch I feel that he is a born genius.' —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Advantage of White Hair.

"Most people regard white hair as a misfortune," said a hairdresser. "They mourn over its coming as a sign of vanished youth, and they try first one thing and then another to withstand this touch of time. I think they make a mistake. Paradoxical as it may sound, white hair, when it arrives, say, in the late twenties or early thirties, really helps in keeping a person young. It's true, anyhow. A man or woman whose hair turns white before the wrinkles arrive is a subject for congratulation, because for many years he or she will appear about the same, and if only proper care is taken of the complexion the impression of youthfulness will continue—I was almost going to say indefinitely. Then, white hair is more often than not extremely becoming. It relieves a heavy face and gives an added tone to the most spirituelle one. People don't realize this; that's all. If they did, they would be content to let nature take its course." —Exchange.

How Different Races Bear Pain.

Moaning and groaning as if she were being tortured to death, a colored woman sat in the accident ward at Jefferson hospital. "Don't wind dat bandage so tight, doctor," she begged of an interne who was skillfully putting a bandage on her foot; "you'll stop de circulation, sure." Wondering what dreadful calamity had befallen the suffering woman, a visitor asked another doctor what was the matter with her. He said nothing but a slight cut on the bottom of her foot. "Colored people always make a great disturbance over any physical injury," he added, "but the Italians are the worst. The sight of a little wound seems to upset them entirely, and they come in here shrieking and crying, accompanied by anxious friends and relatives also shrieking and crying, over the slightest cut or burn. Americans and Germans seem to bear pain with the most fortitude, and in general women do better than men."—Philadelphia Record.

Feeding Zoo Animals.

Not only is much care exercised in the choice of horseflesh, but when a carcass is cut up it is divided in such a way as to insure that in each piece given to the animals there is a bone. Otherwise the lions, tigers and other big carnivora would swallow the piece whole, which would be bad even for their iron digestions. The presence of the bone compels them to take bites at the flesh, which they pick from the bone with their claws and teeth, licking the bone afterward with their sandpapery tongues until the surface shines. For the smaller carnivora, such as polecats and weasels, and for the captorial birds, horseflesh is somewhat too coarse and pungent, so they are fed for the most part on the heads and necks of chickens. These parts are selected also because of the bone in them.—London Graphic.

The government has addressed a vigorous protest to the Grand Trunk Pacific, in regard to the delay of construction in the west.

BEER MAKES BLOOD

MALT has certain food-elements which the body can transform into healthy blood quickly and with the least digestive effort.

HOPS contain a medical principle which tones the nerves without reaction, and so supplies nervous energy and saves it as well.

BEER as brewed in Ontario is made from choicest Ontario barley malt, selected hops, and the purest of water, dealt with under conditions which insure purity and quality.

THE better the blood the sounder the health, and the surer the body to combat disease effectively. Beer, by some counted an intoxicant, is not so—it is a blood-maker, with barely enough alcohol in it to help the stomach do its work far better.

Beer with meals is good for 997 people out of every thousand—and is specially good for women. Ask your own doctor about it—beer is probably good for you.

BEER is a term which covers lager, ales, porter, and stout; and in the practice of Ontario brewers, implies beverages made under most hygienic conditions from Ontario barley (the best in the world) malt, hops, and pure water. 1.

Newspaper Makes a Strong Threat

Bobcaygeon Independent is After the Postmaster-General.

The Post Office Department appears to be troubled with the extremely erroneous idea that this great journal is a blood-sucking financial institution wallowing in wealth. A short time since it struck this g. j. for a cent per copy on every paper sent to the States, now it hits up this g. j. for extra pay on what it is pleased to call its free delivery in Peterboro', free to the fellow at the other end, while P.O. Department stands in the middle and absorbs pay for doing the free work. This g. j. is no Standard Oil Trust, it is not even a Tobacco Joint, and these continual demands for cash are somewhat distressing when subscriptions are usually paid in cordwood, pumpkins and farm produce. If the Postmaster-General comes around here next season bent fishing, and expects this great g. j. to look up bait for him, he will be disappointed. Any further demands for increased postage, and the relations between the P. M. G. and this g. j. will be strained.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box nearest to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the War number is given first, then a pause, and then the remaining numbers of the Box.

At the Liberal Convention in Fredericton, N. B. yesterday, Mr. W. T. Whitehead was nominated the Liberal candidate.

PEN POINTS

Have you got the walking craze?

Stephens makes ink, but there is another man by the same name who possessed an ink-ling that Hartley could win.

One month from to-day will be Christmas. How time flies. Do your Christmas shopping early and you will satisfy both yourself and the storekeeper.

Congratulations to Davie Hartley! Peterborough's popular painter pedestrian is certainly progressive when he can cover over fifty-seven miles in twelve hours.

If some one will only start in to make wood sawing or stone breaking popular, the same as long distance walking and running or Limerick writing are just now, what a healthy race we will become.

Alfred Stevens was famed as an English sculpton, Joseph Stevens as a noted animal painter, Henry as an illustrious American bibliographer. George Stevens as the irrepressible backer of David Hartley, the celebrated pedestrian.

Stephenson (George) won fame by building the first locomotive. And it might be added that Stevens'-son—Charlie—was the chap who trained Hartley, the man who won the walking race. There is a great deal in a name.

It may seem paradoxical that Reynolds, the barber, failed to brush up at the latter end of the race. He was decidedly off color, while Hartley, the painter, cut down the tonsorial artist's record; trimmed him to a peak, without turning a hair or restoring a disturbance of any kind.

"How are you feeling?" was asked of Reynolds after the contest. "Oh, I am quite cut up about my defeat," responded the walking barber. "And how did you stand the pace?" inquired another party of the victorious painter. "First rate, but the Hartley glad its over," was the modest reply.

'And the evil days have come upon Port Hope! Truly this is a period of great tribulation and dejection, of weariness of spirit, wakeful nights and sore distress, for the quiet lakeside town, which in rapid succession has lost the southern terminus of the Trent canal, the car ferry and the long distance walking honors. And Rachael weeping for her children refuseth to be comforted with the one lone honor—the championship of the Midland baseball league.

Canadians should be thankful for a splendid climate. The present month has been the finest November on record, and more beautiful weather could not be desired. We have boasted of our sweet months of May, of leafy Junes and glorious Septembers, but November should be accorded the laurel wreath this year. Of her much is not generally expected, but in competition with other months of 1907, she can this year bear the palm of victory.

The plea which Mr. R. L. Borden, the popular Conservative leader, made last session for an extension of the jurisdiction of the railway commission has borne fruit. The government has decided to draft a bill this session increasing the membership of the board and enlarging its jurisdiction along the lines suggested by the leader of the opposition, namely, by giving the board control of telegraph and telephone. The membership of the board being increased by two or three will enable the commission to hold simultaneous sittings in sections. Score one for Mr. Borden.

No Change in Marriage Law In Ontario

Catholic Girls May Still Wed Protestants—New Law From Rome Has Not Yet Arrived

Toronto, Nov. 20.—The policy of Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, in prohibiting marriages between Protestants and Catholics on pain of excommunication has not been adopted in the Diocese of Toronto, nor is it likely to be.

Rev. Father Cruise, secretary of Archbishop O'Connor, in an interview with The Telegram this morning said: "No new rule has been adopted. No change has been made from the ordinary law which has been in force in this diocese for forty years. Catholics are allowed to marry Protestants, but of course a dispensation is necessary. I have heard of no intention to change the law in this respect."

"What about the new law in regard to the validity of marriages contracted between Protestants and Catholics before other than a priest of the Catholic faith?"

"We have not as yet received the official copy of it," said Father Cruise. "It has been delayed for some reason, but there is no doubt of the authenticity of the published reports. I have seen copies of it in the London Tablet and other papers. It only affects the marriages between Catholics and Protestants. Of course it does not affect marriages of Protestants which are valid in their own eyes and in the eyes of the church."

"You hold that marriage is a sacrament?"

"Yes, between baptised persons."

Murray Street Church Growing in Membership

At the Murray street Baptist Church, at both services yesterday, the ordinance of baptism was administered.

During the past eight months some fifty-four new members have been received into membership—twenty-seven men and twenty-seven women. Murray street Church is growing rapidly and under its able and popular pastor Rev. Mr. Webb, its affairs, both spiritual and temporal, are in a highly satisfactory condition.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES KIDD, SR.

Isabella Macnaughton, relict of the late James Kidd, Sr., died at her home in Dummer on Sunday, the 17th of November. She was born in Perthshire, Scotland, in the year 1820. In religion she was a member of the Presbyterian church, Warsaw. The deceased leaves to mourn her loss three sons and five daughters. These are Dr. F. E. Kidd, of New York city; Dr. D. A. Kidd, of Atwood, Ont; W. J. Kidd, of the homestead, Dummer; Mrs. S. Fitz, Otonabee; Mrs. Ferguson, Lansdell; Mrs. Williamson, Omemee; Mrs. Kelly, Dummer, and Mrs. W. J. Campbell, Belleville.

JOSEPH CADOTTE

Joseph Cadotte, who died in the House of Providence, was buried in St. Pete's cemetery on Friday. He was 100 years old and came to Peterborough from Quebec three years ago. He leaves no relatives in this vicinity. The deceased had been ailing for about a year.

CLAIMED GOOD FOR THE BLOOD

Good Home Made Mixture Said to Make Kidneys Filter Out Impurities

All medical authorities are agreed that the blood is the great source of disease or of health in the human system. If the blood is pure, the individual is strong and healthy, if the blood is impure or diseased then there is sickness or decay in the whole system.

Rheumatism is entirely a blood disease. It is caused by excessive uric acid. Sores, pimples, etc., mean bad blood. Catarrhal affections must be treated through the blood to get permanent results. To get well, to feel strong, hearty and vigorous one must have good, clean blood, and lots of it. You can't clean the blood thoroughly unless the kidneys are made active. Bad blood means clogged, inactive kidneys and liver which causes, too, such symptoms as backache, nervousness, bladder and urinary difficulties and other sympathetic troubles.

Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce. Compound Kamoo one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime. The ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

Here the readers of this paper have a simple yet powerful and effective remedy for all forms of blood, kidney and bladder disease, which should relieve rheumatism and catarrhal affections and replace that weak, worn-out, miserable feeling with strength, vigor and health.

This prescription is considered a fine system renovator and, being made of vegetable extracts only, is harmless and anyone can mix it at home. Try this anyway before investing in the secret unknown concoctions of the patent medicine manufacturers.

AMUSEMENTS

WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.

Chas. H. Yale's pictorial comedy melodrama, "The Way Of the Transgressor," was presented to a crowded house at the Grand on Saturday night. There is plenty of action and life, dash, excitement and adventure in the play to sustain the interest, and the production gave general satisfaction. There are several marvellous acting dogs, which are certainly well trained and educated. The scenic embellishments and accessories add to the attractiveness of the play; the twin tunnel station and the water front near the ferry house on the Hudson river are very realistic. The specialties were above the average. Irene and Zaza, the wonderful girl and the wonderful little dog, both did some great acrobatic and contortion work, which called forth tremendous applause. Billy Williams as a colored servant was full of quips and jokelets, which were decidedly funny. Teddy LeDuc, as a Scotland Yard detective, cleverly personated several characters, his make-up, mannerisms and brogue being admirable. In company with Miss Frances Parker a boyhenish girl, with her heart in the right place, he presented an original travesty, "The Dress Rehearsal." Howard Sydney as John Harris, the transgressor, was an up-to-date villain, while Frank Baldwin as Tom Morley, his confederate, was not far behind him in rascality and turpitude.

Annual Meeting of Bible Society

Will be Held on Wednesday Night of This Week

The annual meeting of the local branch of the Bible Society will be held on Wednesday night of this week in St. John's school house.

Reports for the past year will be presented, officers elected and other business transacted.

It is hoped there will be a large attendance as the regular mid-week prayer services in the various city churches have been withdrawn in order to afford as many persons as possible an opportunity of attending the meeting. Rev. W. H. A. French, of Fenelon Falls, will give an address on the work of the Bible Society and what it has accomplished.

Five New Lodges Within a Month

Mr. James A. Tully Speaks of Progress of Oddfellowship

Mr. James A. Tully, representative of the Oddfellows' Relief Association, is in the city. Mr. Tully has been successful in instituting four new I. O.O.F. lodges within the past few days, and before the present month is over will have added a fifth—the latter being at Arthur, in Wellington county. The four lodges instituted so far in November are at Williamstown, Port Credit, Stouffville and Cayuga. Five new lodges in one month constitute a record. When it is considered that Mr. Tully cannot enter a place and organize a lodge except upon the written invitation and request from resident Oddfellows, his work for the present month is little short of marvellous.

In America a great has been the progress and expansion of Oddfellowship to date that an average of 500 new members are received into the Order every day.

The Cordage Works Resume Operations

About 200 Hands Will be Employed in Various Departments

After being closed down for some weeks for the purpose of making repairs, the Canadian Cordage Works resumed operations this morning. The prospects for a busy season are encouraging. Over 100 hands began work this morning, and by the end of the week it is expected that fully 200 persons will be employed. The preparation department was started today, and tomorrow the spinning gang, balling gang, etc., will be engaged.

Saskatchewan's Crop.

The Trade and Commerce Department has received from the Government of Saskatchewan an official estimate of the crop yield in that province, as compiled from statistics furnished by correspondents in all districts. The total production of wheat is estimated at 28,042,106 bushels, an average of 15.17 per acre; oats, 29,167,962 bushels, average 37.74 per acre; barley, 1,903,072 bushels, average 30.08 per acre; flax, 921,043 bushels, average 10.81 per acre. The average yield of wheat last year was 21.40 bushels per acre. This year's wheat crop will grade, according to the Government estimate, as follows: Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Northern, 10,392,657 bushels; No. 4 and 5 Northern, 7,941,597 bushels; No. 6 and feed, 9,777,855 bushels. The aggregate value will be up to last year's crop. Many farmers report the best results in twenty years, others report the worst yield in that time.

Four cases of yellow fever are reported at Barbadoes, and two men of H. M. S. 'Indefatigable' have died.

LEARN DRESS-MAKING BY MAIL
In your spare time at home, or Take a Personal Course at School.

To enable all to learn we teach on cash or instalment plan. We also teach a personal class at school once a month. Class commencing last Tuesday of each month. These lessons teaches how to cut, fit and put together any garment from the plainest shirt waist suit, to the most elaborate dress. The whole family can learn from one course. We have taught over seven thousand dress-making, and guarantee to give five hundred dollars to any one that cannot learn between the age of 14 and 40. You cannot learn dress-making as thorough as this course teaches in if you work in shops for years. Beware of imitations as we employ no one outside the school. This is the only experienced Dress Cutting School in Canada and excelled by none in any other country. Write at once for particulars, as we have cut our rate one-third for a short time. Address:—

OBITUARY

W. A. EASTLAND.

The remains of the late Wm. A. Eastland, who passed away in New York city on Saturday, arrived in the city to-day on the noon G.T.R. train and were interred in the Little Lake cemetery. Mr. T. G. Eastland, of Apsley, accompanied the body from New York. Rev. Wm. Major conducted the service, and a number of the deceased's friends in this city attended the funeral.

GEORGE GREER.

The death occurred yesterday in Kirkfield of George Greer, a former Peterborough resident. The deceased was working at the Lift lock there and his death resulted from typhoid fever. The remains arrived at noon and will be taken to Pontypool this evening where interment will take place.

MRS. THOMAS EDGAR.

Mrs. Thomas Edgar passed away last night at her home on the Chemong road, Smith township, about half a mile from the city. She had been in poor health for the past four years and last spring underwent an operation from the effects of which she recovered. Five weeks ago she was seized with a paralytic stroke on the left side. This was the immediate cause of her death. The deceased, whose maiden name was Annie Sanderson, was 54 years of age. Her father passed away several years ago, but her mother is still living at the advanced age of 83 years. Besides her sorrowing husband she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Stubbs, of Toronto, and Miss Mary Edgar, residing at home. Five brothers and two sisters also survive. The former are Michael Sanderson, of Selwyn, James of Davidson, Saskatchewan, Frank living on the old homestead in Smith, Edward, of Smith and Wm. of Asphodel. The sisters are Mrs. John Sawers, Peterborough, and Mrs. Joseph McKee, of Smith. The deceased was a faithful member of George Street Methodist church, a kind wife and loving mother, and enjoyed the esteem of a large circle of friends.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence, Chemong road to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. E. A. Pearson will conduct the services.

Euphemisms For "Mad."

In order to avoid the blunt word "mad" many euphemisms are resorted to in the English language. While "lunacy" refers to the supposed influence of the moon, "insane" simply means unhealthy; "imbecile" signifies only weak, and "crazy," meaning decrepit, almost corresponds to the slang "cracked." "A tile off," "not all there," "a bee in his bonnet," are only a few of the efforts slang has made to carry off the sad fact with an uneasy joke. "Lunatic asylum," for the old "madhouse," represents not only a great improvement in the institution, but also in the term used to designate it.

A Tiny Well Digger.

The mole is one of the thirstiest of animals. It never burrows at any great distance from water, and at times of drought when the supply of the needful element is diminished or cut off the "little gentleman in the velvet coat" counteracts the scarcity by digging wells until it comes to a depth at which water may be obtained.

Reassured.

"Say, pa, won't you buy me a drum?"

"No! I'm afraid you'd disturb me with the noise."

"No, I won't, pa. I'll only drum when you're asleep."—Life.

No Stain on His Record.

A New York clergyman, who often spends his vacation in fishing the streams of the Adirondacks, was on one trip adopted by a handsome setter dog, which insisted on following him from camp to camp as he moved along the stream.

One day he met a party of men working upstream with a native guide. The guide immediately recognized the dog as his own property.

"Trying to steal my setter, are you?" he shouted at the clergyman. "I'll have you to jail for this! There's a law in the woods just as big as you have in the city."

The clergyman endeavored to explain that he was an unwilling companion of the dog, which had refused to be driven away, but to little effect until he added a two dollar bill to his arguments.

"It's queer what strange things happen to a man up here," he said to the stage driver who later carried him away from the woods. "That is the first time I was ever accused of stealing a dog."

"Yes, sir," replied the driver, sympathetically, and added, after a moment's pause, "For myself, sir, I have never been accused of stealing anything."—Youth's Companion.

Peterboro's Popular Painter Easily Defeated Reynolds in Great 12 Hour Walking Contest

Led the Port Hope Barber by One Mile in a Strenuous Half Day Grind at the Mutual Street Rink in Toronto—The Result Was Never in Doubt.

Finished Fast and Strong and Was Accorded Enthusiastic Demonstration—Covered 57 Miles and 6 Laps in Good Style—Reynold Made 56 Miles and 6 Laps—Story of the Progress of the Match—Peterboro' Received the Good News in Joyful Manner.

Anc Hartley did it. Nearly everybody in Peterborough thought he would, and his magnificent showing against Reynolds, the celebrated barber walker, proved conclusively that he was the better man of the two, and at no stage of the contest was the local wonder ever headed by his opponent. The distance covered in twelve hours by Hartley was 57 miles 6 laps, and by Reynolds 56 miles 6 laps, showing that Hartley won by a full mile. When the contest finished both men were going strong, considering the amount of ground they had covered. The race lasted twelve hours and was a pretty battle throughout, although Hartley took the lead at the start and kept it until he crossed over the tape for the last time. It was a struggle between two veteran pedestrians, who displayed wonderful endurance, the winner giving one of the cleverest exhibitions of heel and toe walking ever seen in Canada.

The biggest crowd that has been around the local newspaper offices since the last elections assembled in front of the Review and Examiner offices Saturday night and were in the greatest state of excitement as each bulletin was put out. The telephones were also busy from all parts of the city and the sanctums of the offices seemed turned into some place of amusement where a bell ringing contest was being carried on.

On the outside as each bulletin was received those who were waiting for the results pressed forward to see how the two men stood. There was a fancier of Reynolds' here and there, although the money put up by those of a sporting and speculative turn of mind was at a minimum. In fact the wagers in general on the match were very few considering its importance and the widespread interest that was taken in it.

As each bulletin was posted there was considerable enthusiasm shown by reason of Hartley's splendid walking, and owing to the fact that he was always in the lead, but with the exception of an occasional solitary warhoop from some high-spirited admirer there was no cheering as the returns came in. In this respect the great fight between the pedestrians was different from a game of any kind in which local talent figures and in case of the reports of a progress of a match great enthusiasm and vocal music of the loudest and most resounding character usually greets each favorable return.

WENT WILD AT FINISH.

However there was enough din at the finish to make up for any lack of it during the progress of the walk and when the famous victory became known the crowds as by a sudden impulse took up the cry of rejoicing which spread from the main streets to various parts of the city until all parts of Peterborough, in which any enthusiasts were assembled rang with the shouts and yells of the supporters and admirers of Hartley. It would have done the famous Davy good if he could have heard the ear splitting yells and would have given him enough encouragement to buoy himself up for half a dozen other heroic efforts.

PETERBOROUGH WILL WELCOME THE GREAT WALKER TO-NIGHT

At 7.51 o'clock this evening, David Hartley, the champion walker, will arrive at the C.P.R. Station on the local from Toronto.

All the citizens are asked to turn out and greet the man who has brought such distinction to the city.

The 57th Regiment band will furnish music. Cabs will be provided and a civic welcome extended to the popular pedestrian.

A big procession will be held up George Street and merchants are requested to decorate their stores.

The civic reception committee, Ald. Phelan, Chairman, met this morning and decided to extend civic greetings to the "walking wonder." The Mayor, Aldermen and City Officials will be at the C.P.R. Station at 7:51 o'clock this evening.

The procession will proceed from Station, directly up George Street to Central Park, where a congratulatory address will be read to Mr. Hartley and short speeches delivered. The band stand will be illuminated and there will be a big display of fireworks along the route.

Turn out to-night and cheer—Everybody is going to join in the monster reception to the famous long-distance walker.

HARTLEY MAKES ONE HUNDRED

Small Crowd at the Match so Receipts Were Not Large

Hartley, according to Mr. George Stevens, will only make one hundred dollars as a result of one of the most creditable victories ever achieved in the history of athletics. It would be nothing short of a shame if the citizens of Peterborough were not to add in a most substantial manner to this pittance. If Hartley were anything but an athlete of the honest character he could have made a considerably larger amount. If he had held back and made the race closer there is no doubt there would have been more people present. When the people heard it was easy for Hartley many did not bother to go the match. Whereas if the contest had been close and exciting the gate would undoubtedly have been much larger, and consequently Hartley's financial returns would have been swelled considerably.

Messrs. Hartley and Stevens Guests at the Oriental To-night

Tonight at the Oriental Messrs. David Hartley and George Stevens, accompanied by their wives, and Mr. Stevens' son Charlie, will be guests of Mr. George N. Graham, the proprietor. Arrangements are being made to have the 57th Regiment Band play outside the hotel part of the time the "walking wonder" and his friends are at the Oriental.

The Winner of Saturday's Great 12 Hour Walking Match.

Toronto Press on the Result

David Hartley, of Peterborough, defeated James Reynolds, of Port Hope, in the 12hour walking match at the Mutual street rink Saturday by one mile. Hartley covered 57 miles and 6 laps, and Reynolds 56 miles and 6 laps. The track was 15 laps to the mile, and the performances of both men are remarkable. Reynolds is 57 years of age, and Hartley 54. In build they are very dissimilar. Reynolds has the sturdier physique, weighing probably 160. Hartley weighed 128 just before the race started. Hartley's style was the prettier, and conformed to the strictest interpretation of the heel and toe regulations. Reynolds' gait for the first two or three miles, when Hartley set a terrific pace, let the spectators talking, but he eventually settled down, and after that there was not the slightest complaint against his style.

There was a small crowd in the afternoon, but in the evening the rink was comfortably filled. All the details were looked after by Tom Eck, who is a past master at handling such affairs. Mr. Thomas Fitzgerald was the starter, and sent the men off on their long grind at two and a half minutes past eleven. They were plainly nervous. Hartley took the lead immediately and gained a lap on Reynolds in the first mile, which was done in nine minutes. At the end of the first hour Hartley had covered six miles and one lap. Reynolds was just one lap in the rear. The walkers now settled down to a five miles an hour gait, which they practically maintained to the end. There were frequent sprints by Hartley, which generally resulted in gains. There were no stops for rests. Each man stopped several times to take a drink, but they ate their food as they raced around the track.

In the evening the contestants seemed to warm up to their work better. A band was present, and the crowd liberally applauded the walkers. Although the result was never in doubt, the interest never flagged. When the finish came the admirers of the men rushed out on the track, and lifting them in the air carried them to their respective dressing rooms. Both were in good shape considering their long journey.

When they had donned their street attire, and appeared on the streets, the crowd cheered them heartily. They went to their hotels, and will go home to-day.

Reynolds said after the race that he believed he could defeat Hartley in a race on the road.

During the afternoon there were several bets wagered, the Hartley crowd giving 10 to 7.

Peterborough, Port Hope and Oshawa were greatly interested in the race, and the long distance telephone worked overtime.—Mail and Empire.

HEARTLY BEAT REYNOLDS.

In the 12-hour walking match at the Mutual street rink Saturday, David Hartley, aged 54, of Peterborough, beat Jimmy Reynolds, aged 57 of Port Hope, by one mile. Hartley walked fifty-seven and one-third miles to Reynolds' fifty-six and one-third miles. The winner led from the very beginning and continued to increase his lead to the end.

Hartley set a pace from the first that kept Reynolds busy to follow. The Peterborough man went out with the evident intention of walking the confidence out of Reynolds as soon as possible, and succeeded in lapping the Port Hope barber when he had gone two miles and two laps. By the time the men had gone five miles Hartley had gained another lap. After allowing Reynolds to pace for a number of miles, the Peterborough painter lapped Jimmy again, and repeated the performance often throughout the day and night, until he had gained a mile. Between the hours of 5 and 6 o'clock, Mrs. F. H. Elmore presented each of the walkers with a boquet of roses.

On several occasions Reynolds spurted on Hartley, and frequently gained ground, but the Peterborough man always had speed and strength in reserve. Reynolds was bothered with a swollen leg, the result of the accident which he met with while entering this city on his last Port Hope to Toronto and return walk. The injured member was sore before the race, and the swelling increased as it progressed.

Tom Eck watched the race as judge, and not a movement of the men escaped him. Both contestants went fair heel and toe, and there was no playing to the gate. Hartley continuing to increase his lead whenever opportunity offered. The Peterborough man was about six far in front at the end as he could get.

Reynolds' manager says that he has a man in Port Hope who can beat Hartley over the Port Hope to Toronto course and wants to bet $500 on such a match. Hartley's manager will consider the challenge. It is proposed to have Hartley endeavor to walk from Toronto to Montreal in six days some time next spring. If he succeeds in that feat he will be taken to New York next midsummer and matched with the best long-distance men in that city.—World.

CROWD CHEERED FOR REYNOLDS

Hartley Receives Poor Support From Hogtown Tin Horns

Mr. George Stevens, Hartley's manager, is naturally very enthusiastic over the outcome of the race and feels very proud of the invincible Davy.

"His Walking was marvellous," said Mr Stevens, "and was on the square all the way through. We never got off a legitimate heel and toe gait during the entire race." Mr. Stevens spoke very highly of the treatment accorded Hartley and himself at the Hotel Woodbine. Mr. Stevens did not seem to think any too well of the way the Toronto people received the walking wonder. When he (Mr. Stevens) produced a flag with "Peterborough," written on it, a large number of people in the crowd yelled, "Take it away." "Back to the woods," and other expressions that might be expected from a Hogtown audience. In spite of it, however, the Peterborough man never faltered and kept up an heroic pace all the way through. He says the referee and all the officials were greatly impressed with the winner's style, while they thought both men were splendid exponents of pedestrianism, were of the opinion that Hartley was nothing short of a wonder. Mr. Stevens said the betting was no very brisk, and not as much money changed hands as is usual on an athletic event of such importance.

Local Citizens Saw the Match

Messrs. W. McIlroy, Robt. Hicks, Fred Cook, T. Boyd and other local gentlemen, were interested spectators at the contest and boosted along the Peterborough athlete. They were all impressed with his marvellous showing and say he had Reynolds in trouble all the time. At times the Port Hope man made some painfully desperate attempts to make up the lead and received all kinds of encouragement from the crowd, who talked much, but bet little.

Love and Mathematics.

"Do you love me as much as I love you?"

The college girl smiled. "Do you wish me to prove it?" she said.

For answer he bent forward, expecting to receive the usual binding of the promise.

"I mean mathematically," she continued, drawing her face back. "Now, don't be cross! Listen! We belong to a certain circle. We are the radii of that circle. Two radii of a circle are equal to a third radius of the same circle."

He wasn't good at mathematics, but he conceded the point.

"Things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another. Well, supposing that you and I are equal to X, an unknown quantity."

He was perfectly willing to suppose anything.

"X is our love for each other. We are equal to X. Things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another; therefore I must love you in the same ratio that you love me."

He didn't wait for any more mathematics. The X became X'tasy!—Exchange.

The Agreement is Broken Off; Drug Stores to Keep Open Late

The Druggists Now Have Longer Hours and Their Places of Business Will Not Close Until 10 O'clock at Night—Formerly Closed at 8 O'clock.

The drug stores in the city are now keeping open until ten o'clock in the evening. The late hours were started last night. For five or six years past there has been an understanding, or agreement, whereby all the pharmacists closed at eight o'clock each evening, except Saturday, that is all the stores shut up at eight except one, which kept open late, and the one, who was to be open, came in rotation. All the dispensers of pills and potions took their turn in this matter, and the agreement worked satisfactorily.

During the summer months the pharmacists closed up at seven o'clock.

Now this admirable arrangement is all off and the dispensaries will be doing business each evening until ten o'clock or later. Several druggists, when asked who was responsible for the upsetting of the agreement, did not care to discuss the matter and simply remarked: "We will keep open until ten o'clock hereafter instead of closing at eight.

Sad Death of Popular Young Man

Stanley G. Giroux Passed Away This Morning After a Long Illness

The sad intelligence of the death of Stanley G. Giroux, eldest son of Mr. George Giroux, 306 Stewart street, was received throughout the city this morning with the profoundest regret. While it was known that he had been ill for some months, his death came unexpectedly and as a great shock to a wide circle of friends. In his last hours of illness he was attended by Rev. Father Kelly, who administered the last rites of the church.

The late Stanley Giroux was twenty-one years of age and was born in this city, where he always resided. He received his early educational training at St. Peter's Separate School, after which he entered upon a brilliant career in the Collegiate Institute, from which he graduated with honors. He also took a course in the Peterborough Business College and was always highly esteemed by the teachers and those he daily came in contact with. He was an honest, upright young man and had a bright future before him, had not the hand of death taken him off at such an early stage in life. He took an active part in clean, manly sport, and was popular among different athletic organizations.

At the time of taking ill last January he was on the office staff of the Quaker Oats Co.

Besides his sorrowing parents five brothers and three sisters are left to mourn his loss. The brothers are Omer, of Tweed, Leonard, Cyril, Herman and Bertie, residing at home, and the sisters are Bernice, Elmaid and Florence, also at home.

The funeral will take place on Thursday day morning, at 9 o'clock, from the family residence, 306 Stewart st eet, to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

COMPLETING ARRANGMENTS FOR BIG CONTEST

Many Entries From the Irish Canadians—Officials Have Been Appointed

The committee in charge of the indoor meet to be held on December 3rd under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. Harrier Club, held a meeting at the Y.M.C.A. last night when further arrangements were made for the big event of the season. The officials were appointed and numerous other details arranged. The entries are coming in fast and it is now assured that the public of Peterborough is going to be treated to something out of the ordinary. The entries are coming in rapidly and a large field of starters in the different events is certain. The Irish-Canadians of Toronto, have forwarded a big batch of entries and apparently are anxious to add to the laurels they have already won. They have entered "Lou" Marsh and McMurry in the 50 yards Haddilton in the half miles "Lou" Marsh and McMurry in the 220 yds., Haddilton in the mile, and Hilton Green and Sellen in the three mile handicaps, and Coley or Sellen in the three mile special race. T. O'Rourke will give an exhibition of shot putting and of course the great Tom Longboat will be on hand.

Fred McGrath will represent Peterborough in the 100 and 220 yards, and the local club will be well represented in the other events.

THE OFFICIALS.

Judges.—V. Eastwood, J. J. Howden and H. R. H. Kenner.

Starter of the special race.—Thos. Longboat.

Starter of the other races.—T. Flanigan.

Clerk of Course.—A. Poe.

Timers.—W. E. Wasson, Alex Gibson.

Scorers.—F. Craig, C. Yoldome, C. Sisson and W. Richardson.

Announcer.—W. S. Davidson

The prizes will be handsome gold and silver medals. There will be two prizes for each event, with the exception of the mile and three mile handicap race. A third prize as well as a first and second will be given in these two events.

BROKEN SLEEP MORNING TIREDNESS

Unable to sleep indicates starved nerves and weak blood. You'll never be well till the system is better nourished—that's sure.

What you need is a nutritive tonic like FERROZONE, which vitalizes and enriches the blood, fortifies the nerves, instills new energy into worn-out organs. At once you feel better. Your spirits improve, and day by day you gain in strength and power.

FERROZONE
ALWAYS CURES.

No remedy removes that gone, exhausted feeling like FERROZONE. In every case it completely cures the cause of sleeplessness and restores the sufferer to robust health in a short time.

Use FERROZONE and your sleep will be as restful and sound as an infant's. In the morning you'll feel capable and ready for the day's toil. Don't lose the sound, vigorous health FERROZONE is sure to bring you. Get FERROZONE to-day and beware of substitutes.

Ferrozone is sold only in 50c boxes, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

Former Minister of the Interior on the Stand

O'Gorman Chief Provider But Reid Gave One Hundred Dollars—Asked to Commit Perjury—Then to Keep Out of the Country—Taught How to Switch Ballots—Mr. Taylor Called.

Toronto, Nov. 26.—Edgar I. Sifton, the young electrical engineer who skipped out of London to avoid arrest for conspiracy in the London case, took the witness box at the investigation yesterday and told briefly of his three months' stay on the other side.

He told of several visits made by O'Gorman to Buffalo to see him; of his first trying to get him to come back and perjure himself, by swearing that he (O'Gorman) had not given him money to buy votes with, and, when this was useless, promising that he, Reid and Duffield would put through a deal to take over his interests and keep him away. When there was nothing doing and Sifton had to come back, he sent his lawyer, Winnett, of London, to Toronto to make arrangements. An affidavit followed and Sifton was put on the list of crown witnesses.

Sifton told of getting $100 from Reid during the Beck-Rumble election, and of getting between $700 and $800 from O'Gorman in the Hyman-Gray election. He admitted opening a ballot box and said that it was done on the advice of Reid, in order to check up the purchaseable voters who had been bought up in London West.

After the noon adjournment Jerry Collins was recalled and examined by Assistant Defence Counsel McEvoy. In the general election he had nothing to do with O'Gorman at all, in fact, that defendant did not figure, in 1904.

Edgar I. Sifton was sworn. Led by Mr. Staunton he said that he took a slight interest in the general election, but a big interest in the Beck-Rumble election.

Did you get any money?

Yes. I got $200 at the start, but I could not swear where I got it.

How much money did you get, all told?

In the neighborhood of $400.

The witness identified a list of bribed voters, which Collins had turned in, as a list of men he arranged to buy. The writing was his.

Mr. Staunton was anxious to learn where the first $200 came from, but the witness could not locate it.

What occurred after the Beck-Rumble election?

On the evening of the election I was at the committee room when Serviss told me that we could get Sperr's ballot box if he got $10. I had no money and I enquired whether money should be spent for that purpose.

Witness told of discussions with various people about folding ballots. He was present when O'Gorman demonstrated these ideas, although he could not recollect any definite meeting.

"Were you present at a meeting Saturday night before the election?"

"I don't remember."

"Who did you discuss the folding game with?

"Lewis, O'Gorman, Miln, and Collins."

"Did any one ever show you about the blotting paper?"

"Yes, I remember the scheme. I think O'Gorman sprung that one."

Witness then told of his leaving London and going to Buffalo. He heard that he was wanted as a crown witness. Shortly afterwards O'Gorman came to see him and wanted to know what his possible statement would be. When witness told O'Gorman that he would tell the truth O'Gorman commenced to figure to keep him out of the country.

"He wanted me to come back and perjure myself, but I refused."

"Were there any arrangements made concerning your staying out of the country?"

"Yes, I said that if I was to stay away I would have to have a financial arrangement of my business in London, the Power Equipment Co. and the Electrical Construction Co. This was gone into and the promise was made that there would be a deal put through to take care of these. But there was nothing doing. Although Mr. McEvoy had the figures on the Power Equipment Co.

Cross-examined by Mr. McEvoy witness said that the attempted sale of the Power Equipment Co. had been going on long before this investigation commenced. Mr. Duffield or Mr. McEvoy knew nothing of any deal as far as the Buffalo transactions were concerned.

To Mr. Johnston witness said that Collins' story that O'Gorman and he were practicing the folding of the ballot gag the Saturday night before the bye-election was not true.

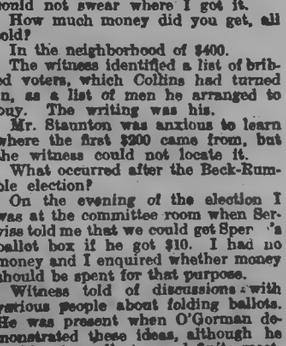
At the morning session, George Taylor, M. P., Conservative whip, was called to tell what he knew of the Brockville elections. Mr. Johnston objected to his evidence, and was upheld by Judge Winchester.

Brock Cowan, James Robertson, C. C. Tyman and Antoine Lindley, deputies in the Comstock-White election in Brockville, told of being instructed on how to switch ballots, but by whom they did not know.

Roderick Young, David Gliddon and J. H. Currie gave similar testimony as regards the Holmes-McLean election at Goderich.

Moose Westbrook of Brantford saw O'Gorman in the Liberal committee rooms at Brantford during the Heyd-Henry election. Mr. Johnston tried to shake his recollection of O'Gorman's, but Moose stuck to his story. He reiterated the evidence given at the Police Court implicating O'Meara as a personator at the same election.

John T. Wallis, police sergeant of Brantford, corroborated the evidence of the last witness, and identified O'Gorman as a visitor at election times.



Irish M. P. Robbed.

Cincinnati, Nov. 26.—John McKean, Monaghan County, Ireland, member of the British House of Commons, was shown a "river regulator," a device for "regulating currents" of the Ohio River, in the basement of the union depot here.

At the bottom of the stairs the "inventors" grabbed him by the collar, pushed him into a corner, robbed him of a thick wad of five-pound Bank of England notes and then locked him in.

Nobel Prize Winners.

Stockholm, Nov. 26.—The next Nobel prize for chemistry will be awarded to Sir William Crookes of London

Sir William Crookes was born in 1832. He discovered Thadium, an element, in 1861, and invented the radiometer in 1874. He was knighted in 1898, and has been closely identified with many of the most important advances in science.

Live Wire Killed Him.

Brockville, Nov. 26.—A young Austrian named Vosujak, in opposition to the protests of his fellows, touched a live wire which had fallen to the ground in a tearing wind at Hailerboro, and was instantly killed.

His curiosity was aroused at seeing the wire spitting fire. He was about 25 years of age, unmarried and had been in this country a short time.

Sailor's Tragic Delusion.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26:—Mike McMann, aged 25, a deckhand, on the freighter Cheming, jumped overboard Sunday night. McMann was laboring under the delusion that his companions on the boat intended killing him, and had been bound in his bunk, and he succeeded in freeing himself.

Looted Summer Lodge.

Brockville, Nov. 26.—Investigation shows that the summer lodge, an American island, opposite Brockville, has been plundered since the close of the season by river pirates and everything of value was taken. The loss is estimated at $1,000.

Cuba's Population.

Havana, Nov. 26.—An estimate by one of the most accomplished statisticians in the service of the Provincial Government places the population of Cuba at two millions, of which about 400,000 are foreigners not entitled to the franchise.

OIL FOR BRITISH NAVY.

First Admiralty Tank Ship Sails For Port Arthur.

London, Nov. 26.—The sailing of the Admiralty owned tank steamer Petroleum, for Port Arthur, Texas, marks a new departure in the British navy, as it is the first time that the Admiralty has tried the experiment of importing a cargo of oil in its own ships. It is anticipated that petroleum is only the forerunner of a small fleet of Admiralty owned tank ships, which will be continually employed in meeting the increasing requirements of the British navy for oil as a fuel.

Oil is ousting coal from the furnaces of the British mosquito fleet, and a plan to dot the coastline of the British Isles with oil depots, where torpedo boats may replenish their tanks, has been decided upon. A fleet of naval tank steamers which will bring the fuel direct from the oil shipping ports is considered to be the most cheap and most satisfactory method of keeping these depots supplied.

BAIL FOR STEVE ADAMS.

May Be Re-arrested For the Murder of Arthur Collins.

Rathdrum, Idaho, Nov. 26.—Stvee Adams, the jury in whose trial for the murder of Fred Taylor reported a disagreement, was yesterday admitted to bail.

Bail was fixed at $20,000. Attorney Barrow, for the defence, announced the bond would be provided within a few days. It is expected that as soon as Adams is released on this bond, he will be re-arrested on a warrant charging him with the murder of Arthur Collins, at Telluride, Colorado, in 1902.

Attorneys Darrow and Hawley leave at once for Boise to attend the Pettibone case.

Lash For Drunkards?

Toronto, Nov. 26.—The presentment of the grand jury in the Criminal Assizes which closed yesterday recommends an entirely separate institution or ward for young offenders confined in Toronto jail on the grounds that at present they are herded with hardened criminals, and thereby given an elementary course in vice.

The presentment goes on:

"We regret to notice the large number of cases of indecent assault which were brought before us and for this class of criminals we see less hope of reformation than for any other, and we recommend the lash and long terms of imprisonment as the only means of preventing a repetition of the offence and as a means of deterring others."

"We find that sentences of 30 or 60 days for drunkenness has no deterrent effect. We are of the opinion that corporal punishment for repeated offences of this kind would in most cases work a reformation, and of the remainder the greater part would seem fit subjects for medical treatment."

Believes Mrs. Bradley Crazy.

Washington, Nov. 26.—That Mrs. Annie M. Bradley was insane at the time she shot former Senator Arthur Brown of Utah, was the opinion of Dr. W. M. Barton of the medical department of Georgetown University, and a specialist in nervous diseases, expressed at the trial yesterday.

Dr. Barton's testimony followed the reading to him of a hypothetical question of 13,000 words, covering the history of Mrs. Bradley's relations with Senator Brown from the day she met him to the day of the tragedy.

Dr. Barton diagnosed Mrs. Bradley's ailment as being puerpural insanity. In explaining why he looked upon her as an abnormal woman, he said she was interested in things that do not usually attract women and instanced the fact that she was secretary of a political club as an evidence of her abnormality.

Explosion In Station.

St. Catharines, Nov. 26.—The baggage-room of the G. T. R. station was wrecked by an explosion which occurred about 4.30 yesterday morning.

The boiler used for heating the building blew up, the top tank or boiler used for holding the hot water striking the high ceiling and badly wrecking the roof.

Did Not Get Judgeship.

Regina, Sask., Nov. 26.—William Trant, the well-known Liberal magistrate and party worker, will take the field against J. G. Turriff, Government nominee for Assiniboia, at the next Dominion elections. He was promised a judgeship and passed over. The announcement of his candidature is made on Mr. Trant's own authority.

Conscription For U. S.?

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—The difficulty of securing recruits for the United States army; the prevalence of desertion; and an unwelcome suggestion that the dreaded European system of conscription, or compulsory military service, may become necessary, are the features of the annual report of Adjutant-General Ainsworth.

Charges of Forgery.

New York, Nov. 26.—James J. Graham, assistant cashier of the Interborough Bank on Wall street, was arrested yesterday and charged with the forgery of a check for $2,900. James W. Daly, paying teller of the bank, and Alfred Burrows, a depositor, were also arrested on a charge of complicity in the forgery.

Kaiser Attended Church.

London, Nov. 26.—Emperor William continues to improve in health and enjoys daily walks and drives about the neighborhood of Highcliffe.

The Emperor on Sunday attended the village church, joining heartily in the singing of the hymns.

Second Line of Steamers.

Paris, Nov. 26.—(C. A. P.)—A second direct line of steamers from France to Canada shortly will be inaugurated as a result of the commercial treaty.

This government has addressed a vigorous protest to the Grand Trunk Pacific, in regard to the delay of construction in the west.

FRENCH FOUGHT ARABS

Tribesmen Beaten Back With Loss of 1,200 Killed.

Swooped Down on French Camp—Charged on Infantry With Fanatical Bravery—Rout Completed by Shelling of Artillery—Returned to the Attack and Desperate Battle Ensued—French Lost Eight.

Lalla, Maghnia, Algeria, Nov. 26.—Ten thousand of the fiercest Benis Nessen tribesmen swooped down on the French camp on Sunday and were beaten off with a loss of 1,200 killed. The fighting continued on the part of the tribesmen apparently with total disregard for their lives.

At one time the French infantry were in danger of being surrounded, but they finally disengaged themselves from their perilous position by a most brilliant charge of the spahis. The rout of the Arabs was completed by vigorous shelling by the artillery. The French loss was eight killed.

The Arabs were not discouraged by this severe repulse but reformed their forces and in addition directed their efforts to rousing other tribes. The fighting was resumed yesterday and the booming of dannon could be heard throughout the afternoon. The results of the battle now on are unknown at present.

SMALLPOX AT GODERICH.

Schools Closed and Church Services Called Off.

Goderich, Nov. 26.—Smallpox is epidemic here and between 40 and 50 cases have been quarantined.

The schools have been closed and a general vaccination of citizens and children has been ordered.

The churches had no services on Sunday on account of the outbreak. Service was held in the Roman Catholic Church, but an announcement was made that no further services would be held until the spread of the disease had been checked.

Many cases in rural portions are reported.

Dr. Charles A. Hodgetts of the Provincial Health Department has arrived here and is doing all that can be done with the staff of local doctors. Most of the cases are being treated in private residences. The majority of them are very mild.

La Rose Shipped to Denver.

Cobalt, Nov. 26.—A local character, Lachlan Cameron, commonly called, "Lottie," was tried by Magistrate Brown yesterday on two charges, one of passing worthless checks and the other of vagrancy. The crown alleges that he was in the habit of getting men drunk who had money and then getting them to sign checks. The prisoner was acquitted on the first charge and the charge of vagrancy was withheld on the accused promising to leave the district. Cobalt could well dispense with several men, both young and old, who are living by their wits.

Last week's shipments amounted to over 528 tons. La Rose shipped all but 31 tons, sent by the Temiskaming mine to Perth Amboy. La Rose sent 500 tons to Denver.

Drug Clerk Acquitted.

Toronto, Nov. 26.—The Ontario Medical Council failed to convict Frank Richardson, a drug clerk, of a breach of the Medical Act in having prescribed for a customer. George Champion said he had gone to Richardson complaining of an abscess and he had been given a stock preparation. On the second visit he had said he was poulticing and Richardson told him to continue doing so. Champion had gone to the druggist for the same medicine that had been given a friend with the same complaint.

"The fact of his asking for the same kind of medicine the other man had makes it no breach of the act," said the magistrate.

New Tariff In Effect.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 26.—A telegram received yesterday by the freight department of the C. P. R. from the Railway Commission in Ottawa, announces that the new freight tariff, which take effect to-day, notwithstanding the fact that an order was formerly given postponing the date upon which the new schedule was to become operative.

Gen. Colville Killed.

London, Nov. 26.—Gen. Sir Henry Edward Colville came to his death Sunday as a result of an automobile collision with his old friend and battlefield comrade, Gen. Sir Henry Seymour Rawlinson.

Gen. Colville was born in 1852. He was one of the generals recalled from South Africa during the Boer war.

Death Before Dishonor.

New York, Nov. 26.—Louis Straus, senior member of the firm of Louis Straus & Co., importers, took his life Sunday night by swallowing poison in the presence of central office detectives who had come to his home to arrest him. The charge is said to have grown out of the disposition of $200,000 of the firm's money.

Buried Under Tons of Gravel.

Welland, Nov. 26.—Frank Cook, while loading gravel on the farm of A. Railton, Fonthill, met with a bad accident, whereby both legs were broken. A bank fifteen feet high caved in on top of Cook and his helper, John Poole. Poole managed to get free and was able to uncover Cook's head.

Prohibition For York State.

New York, Nov. 26.—Cheered by what they believe the beginning of the greatest temperance revival the country has ever seen, the prohibitionists of New York State are planning a crusade to move the state into the "dry" column.

Seventeen men busy at making road near Nice, France, yesterday, were buried in a mountain slide.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—(Special.)—The export live stock season will be brought to a close to-morrow with sailing of the SS. Montezuma for London with 854 cattle and 910 sheep. The exports for November were 11,668 cattle and 4224 sheep, making a total for the season of 1907 of 96,977 cattle, 11,585 sheep, as compared with 122,159 cattle and 10,791 sheep for 1906. At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 23 were 4508 cattle, 4471 sheep and lambs, 3206 hogs and 397 calves, while the offerings for local consumption this morning were 1600 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 1900 hogs and 300 calves. There were no new developments in the cattle situation, except that the feeling was somewhat better, owing to the fact that supplis were fully 400 head smaller than a week ago, and this, coupled with more seasonable weather, induced buyers to operate more freely, and an active trade was done, but there was no improvement in prices or in the quality of the stock, the bulk of it being rough. Choice cattle continue to be scarce, while good ones are none too plentiful, but the supply of lower grades was fully up to the average, and on the whole there was ample to fill all requirements. The demand was good from local and outside buyers, but there was no business done for export account, as the season for shipping from this port is practically over, there being only one more vessel to sail with live stock. Cables from Liverpool on Saturday reported the market firm, with prospects brighter. Choice beeves were quoted at 4¾c, while good stock sold at 4¼c to 4½c; fair, at 3½c to 4c; common, at 2½c to 3c, and inferior at 1½c to 2c per lb. The demand from packers for canners was good, and sales were made at 65c to 90c per cwt. Owing to the continued large supplies of sheep and lambs coming forward, an easy feeling prevails in the market, but there has been no further change in prices since this day week. The export demand for sheep is quieter, as the shipping season from this port is now practically over, and foreign advices show little improvement. Choice lots of sheep sold at 4c; good, at 3¼c to 3½c, and culls, at 3c per lb. The local demand for lambs continues good, and an active trade was done at 5¾c to 6c per lb. Receipts of calves are decreasing, but considering the period of the year they are still larger than in former years, for which the demand is good and sales of choice stock were made at $12 to $15; good, at $8 to $10; fair, at $5 to $7, and common at $3 to $4 each. A weak feeling has developed in the market for hogs since this day week, and prices have declined 25c to 37½c per cwt. This is due principally to the continued discouraging and weak advices coming from European sources, on Canadian bacon cables on Saturday from Liverpool, London and Bristol, noting a decline in prices of 2d to 4d per cwt., as compared with the previous one. Receipts of hogs to-day were 600 head larger than a week ago, but the bulk of the supply was contracted for in the west by some packers at higher prices than those ruling here. Sales of selected lots on spot were made at $6 to $6.12½ per cwt., weighed off cars.

A Story of Absorbing Interest

The Rogue's March

By E. W. HORNUNG, author of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," "Stingaree," etc.

"The flash young spark!" whispered the cad. "Just you frighten 'im, Sir Robert."

"Now, then, come along!" said the officer.

"Good God!" cried Tom.

"You'll get all the more for swearing. Now, out you come afore you're made."

"Not just yet," returned the culprit and handed the conductor one of two half crowns found that very moment in a scrap of crumpled paper. "I'm sorry I couldn't find it before. Kindly give me change."

He sprang clean on top of the police officer.

"Where to?" growled the cad as the constable stepped down.

Tom did not bear.

"Can't you answer? Where to?"

"Oh, as far as you go!"

Tom's eyes were on the crumpled scrap and filled to overflowing by half a dozen ill written words:

Wishin good luk, yours respeckfull,
J. BUTTERFIELD.

Clare would think him guilty. After what had passed between them she could not do otherwise. Then guilty let him be in every earthly eye, and the sooner it was all over the better for him and for her. He had no wish to live if the one sweet judge whose judgment he respected held him worthy of death. And she would—she could not help herself. Then what must she think of his love for her? And the thought of her thoughts was worse than that of shameful death before a howling mob.

Tom tore up Claire's letter that he had meant to treasure till his death, so that when he was taken no sinr should rest upon his beloved, and he distributed the minute fragments at long intervals that night before looking for a place to lay his head. In the end he hit upon an empty house overlooking the then green inclosure of Westbourne park. An unfastened window caught his eye. He waited till the road was clear and then entered like an expert, fastening the window behind him.

Here he destroyed and hid away his hat, a battered beaver bought in the days of poor Blaydes. In its stead he had obtained from a pawnshop and for 18 pence an old fashioned peak and tassel cap. But he had not dared to offer the watch in pledge, although he had entered that shop for the purpose.

It ticked so loud in the empty house that in the dead of night he leaped up in a frenzy and smashed in the works with his heel.

Before he could lie down again there came a deafening double knock at the street door.

CHAPTER VI.

TO run no risk of observation through the dirty, bare windows, as well as to secure equidistance from all possible points of approach or escape, the hunted youth had lain him down in the hall, with the bottom stair for his pillow. He was rewarded with the full shock of this ear splitting tattoo. Tom groped his way on tiptoe to the garden door and stealthily withdrew the bolts. The door was one-half colored glass, showing a pink moon in a purple sky and a neglected garden which by daylight would have been sky blue with a ruby margin, but now it merely gave another coat to night, and Tom was outside and halfway down the flight of stone steps before he saw that which made the iron balustrade grow colder in his hand. The chimney pot hat, white trousers and drawn staff of one of the new police awaited him at the bottom.

"Come along," said this officer. "It's no use turning back. Hear that!"

As he spoke the noise of breaking glass came through the open door, and Tom's mind was made up. Suddenly crouching, with knees and elbows at acute angles, he sprang clean on top of the police officer, who collapsed beneath him like a house of cards. The fall was bad enough for Tom. His nose was bleeding when he picked himself up, but the other lay motionless on his back, and Tom bent over him in horror. His eyes opened that instant, and he made a grab at Tom, who turned and darted down the garden just as there was a clatter of fresh feet upon the stone stairs behind.

The garden wall was mercifully low. Tom vaulted it and all but landed in a cucumber frame upon the other side. He found himself in a nursery garden, with avenues of crystal roofs shining to the moon in long low parallels. Down one such causeway sped Tom at top speed, getting into another by turning left and right at the first gap. Just then he heard a welcome crash at the cucumber frame fifty yards back. But now the frontage wall loomed ahead, cutting the stars at an uncomfortable height, and on dashing up to it Tom saw the mistake he had made by changing avenues. He had to turn back to the right to make the gate, and the officers, who had run straight ahead and thus gained a score of yards, were upon him in full cry.

The gate was a high wooden one, luckily without spikes. The runaway straddled the top just as the pursuers reached the bottom and left a shoe in their hands ere he threw himself down upon the other side and kicked its fellow to the winds.

Tom ran swiftly on and presently overhauled a cart lumbering westward along the middle of the road. He was passing it at a less suspicious pace when he made a discovery. The driver was bent double and fast asleep.

Tom dropped behind again and peeped in over the back. It was a hay cart, and the load had been left in town. All that remained was the tarpaulin lying in a crumpled heap. He looked back along the road, but saw nobody. Then he boarded the cart—silently enough in his ragged socks—and curled himself up beneath the tarpaulin.

Overnight he had avoided the tavern, but not the pastry cook's shop, so he had made his supper in the empty house and was still provisioned. Moreover, his pocket was still weighted by poor Blaydes' broken watch, nor could he make up his mind to pitch into the river his only asset, and one to which he was so justly entitled. He was clear of London now; the early sun gave him confidence and pluck. He would pawn the watch in one of these Thames valley towns and then get back to London and the docks by river and in new habiliments. It was Saturday morning; he would wait until that best of times, Saturday night, but first he must find a place to hide his head in during the day.

He found one in the boathouse of a small, new white brick villa, with a narrow garden leading down to the river's edge. The boathouse had an open window. Hardened by his extremity into incredible alacrity in such enterprises, Tom was through it in a twinkling and well pleased with his discovery. The boat was still hibernating keel upward on trestles. It would be a very strange thing if that day, of all others, were chosen for launching her for the summer. Determined, at any rate, to risk it, the runaway climbed into a little loft which might have been made for him and settled down for the day. He rolled himself up in several folds of strawberry netting and made another quaint pillow of the box of a mowing machine, whereon he slept soundly for several hours.

When Tom deemed it dark enough for a judicious exit the wet earth was as fragrant as a flower. He sniffed it joyously through the open window by which he had entered. The garden path was washed very yellow and bordered by twin canals. There was more light than he had thought when in the loft. Still, not a soul was in view, and it had been lighter yet when he arrived. It was necessary, however, to get out of the window legs first and backward, and when Tom had done so and turned around he beheld standing on the yellow path between the two canals and quizzically regarding him the quaintest and the tiniest old gentleman he had ever encountered.

He was certainly not more than five feet high, but he carried himself superbly and fixed the intruder with a steady, jocular, light blue eye which inspired respect before fear. He seemed, indeed, the essence of contemplative geniality, but it was his powdered hair, black knee breeches and white silk stockings that gave him the picture book appearance at which even Tom found time to marvel. But he marveled more when the old gentleman made him a courtly bow and said in high, chirping tones:

"I am delighted to see you, sir! I fear my bonthouse will have afforded you but indifferent shelter on so vile a day. Such as it has been, however, you are welcome to it indeed."

"Welcome!" exclaimed Tom.

"And why not?" chirruped the other. "Surely we who have must give to you who have not, be it roof or boot? I am sorry, however, to see you barefooted, for you will permit me to observe that such stockings as you have on are worse than none. If you will have the goodness to come with me you shall be shod afresh and join me in a glass of negus before you go."

"But, sir"—

"Tut! I know what you would say—you have trespassed already and have no wish to trespass further. Very well, sir; so be it. You shall have your way and pay the penalty. I condemn you to a glass of negus and a new pair of shoes."

And with the utmost bonhommie the tiny gentleman drove Tom before him to the house and through open French windows to a basement room where a lamp and fire were burning and a kettle singing on the hob.

"Hungry?" he chirped, giving Tom a playful push in the ribs.

"I had provisions in my pocket," stammered the youth, in deep embarrassment. "I shall do very well. Indeed, your kindness"—

"Tut, sir, tut! You will please me best by saying no more about that. You are hungry, and I shall order you something upstairs. But here's the sherry and there's the boiling water. You can brew your own negus while I am gone, and this is today's Advertiser. Make yourself at home, I beg!" And, with twinkling eyes and brisk gestures, the little old gentleman departed, of all Tom's good Samaritans assuredly the prince and king.

No sooner was he alone than Tom caught up the Advertiser and found half a column about the murder, and, yes, there was his name. The Adcocks had volunteered it, together with a full description, whose accuracy tempted Tom not to wait for his supper, but to rush through the open window and swim the river in his clothes. Yet there was more that must be read. The case against him was stronger than ever. The threatening letters had been found among the dead man's effects. The hackney coachman had told his story, and here it was. But one name was gratefully absent—that of Harding did not occur in the closely printed half column, which so strangely fascinated Tom that his quaint Samaritan was back before he had put the paper down.

"What! Feeding the mind before the body? Well, well, to be sure!"

"I hadn't seen today's paper," said Tom feebly.

"Aha! I know what you were reading too." The old gentleman chuckled as he poured sherry into two tumblers. "I know—I know!"

"What?" asked Tom hoarsely.

"My eyes are good. My eyes are excellent. You were reading the Hampstead murder." Tom held his breath.

"It's the Hampstead murderer!"

"I never read such things myself," pursued the other, "but I did when I was young. Oh, Lord, yes! Blood was my negus then."

And, with his childlike laugh, he handed Tom one steaming tumbler, mixed another for himself and insisted on clinking glasses before they drank. Tom spilt some of his portion upon the floor, but his kind host never noticed it. He was next invited to take a pinch from a silver mounted horn snuffbox. This he refused as politely as his state of mind would permit. He trembled to know whether the old gentleman had really eschewed all accounts of the murder. To make certain he hazarded a leading question.

"It seems to be a queer affair, sir. Do you think they'll ever catch him?"

"My good fellow, I haven't read the case."

Tom drew a deep breath and tossed off his negus at a gulp. At that moment there came a knock at the door and a small maid entered.

"Ready, Mary?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then come this way, my dear young gentleman," the old one said, with his most benevolent smile; "upstairs. Follow the maid. I will follow you."

Tom hesitated, but gave in without a word. He was, indeed, as hungry as he was grateful, and he followed the servant upstairs, with the jolly old fellow chatting pleasantly at his heels.

"The shoes you shall have immediately. What, would you shake my hand? Ah, my good fellow, I fear it's but meager entertainment that I can offer you. Well, well, if you insist! But that's the door. Pray walk in. He, he, he, he!"

And ere the chirruping laugh had ended Tom's flight was over and he was in the hands of two policemen, who had securely pinned him by either arm. Resistance was useless. But from the officers' faces a last hope flickered in his breast.

"What do you want me for?" he cried.

"What is the charge, sir?" asked one of the constables sotto voce of the master of the house.

"Can't you see?" piped that triumphant humorist. "It's the Hampstead murderer! I knew the fellow with half an eye."

CHAPTER VII.

THE morning after the discovery of the murder Nicholas Harding went to London. All day there came no word from the master of the house, nor did the coach return, but between 9 and 10 it did, and Mr. Harding was out and up the steps before it stopped.

In the hall he inquired for his daughter. She had gone upstairs. He rushed up instantly. Claire was waiting for him at her bedroom door. He thundered in and shut it behind him.

"They have got him!" cried Claire, with both hands to her heart.

"Got whom?" said her father sharply. "Got whom, eh?"

Her face fell beneath the angry glitter in his eyes.

"The man—they want—for this frightful business," said she lamely and sank down upon a chair.

"And pray who is he? You seem to know!"

No answer, save twitching fingers, rocked body, lowered lids.

"If you were to hear it was that young Erichsen would it surprise you very much? No; it would not!" It had only stilled her. "And now I intend to know why not. You have thrown sand enough in my eyes, but your manner this morning told me something, and I am determined to know all there is to know—before—I—leave—this—room."

And with no less emphatic deliberation the father strode to the door, locked it and pocketed the key, but was met on his return with such wild eyes and suppliant hands that even his harsh heart melted at the sight.

"Only tell me whether they have captured him," she said, "and I faithfully promise to tell you all."

"Well, then, they have not, but they precious soon will. Now keep your promise."

It was kept to the letter.

"Now you see," said he when Claire had finished, "what has come of your folly. You have entangled yourself with a young fellow whose fate, if he be caught, one would rather not contemplate. You may even be called as a witness against him, if last night's interview leaked out. And if you told a jury all you have told me, about the address and all that, I am afraid it would hang him if nothing else did."

"Hang Tom!"

"Well, Claire, it looks to me very like a hanging matter. It would need a very clever and probably a very costly defense to give him the ghost of a chance of having it brought in anything less."

"Then he must have it!" cried Claire. "Oh, he never could have done it—willfully! He must have the very best defense that can be got, but, oh, who will pay for it?"

"I am thinking of doing so myself," replied Mr. Harding quietly. "I don't say I will, but I may."

"You!"

And the girl was sobbing upon his breast, with her arms about his thick red neck, as they had not been for many a year now. He removed them, but almost gently, and told her not to jump at conclusions, as he had by no means made up his mind. Indeed, let them first catch their man. But as the lad's father had been his constituent as well as his enemy, on whom he had perhaps been a little hard, he thought that on the whole it might prove the right and proper thing to do. Claire was overwhelmed, not only with gratitude for a first gleam of comfort, but also with shame. All these years she had misjudged that magnanimous man, her own father, and what coals of fire was he heaping on her undutiful head! She cried herself to sleep with shame and hope, and that was when Tom Erichsen was flying south from Westbourne park, with the police in full cry at his heels.

* * * * * * *

Thomas Erichsen had been apprehended at Kew on the Saturday evening and lodged for that night in the local lockup. The bare fact was read by Mr. Harding in next day's Dispatch and by Claire in her father's face before she heard it from his lips at twenty minutes to 11 in the morning. On the Monday morning she gave him his breakfast early and alone, and he then assured her that he was going to see what could be done.

Mr. Harding did not consult his own lawyer, but he went on foot to the purlieus of the Old Bailey and there mounted to a noisome den, with his shoulders up and his hat well over his eyes. He departed as furtively some minutes later and was followed down the breakneck stairs by an unclean vulture of a man with snuffy beak and grimy talons, who skipped into a cabriolet and was driven at speed to the Marylebono office.

There was a dense crowd outside, but with the free use of his own elbows and Mr. Harding's money the Old Bailey lawyer fought and bought his way in. He was in time to witness the formal remand of Thomas Erichsen and, to draw his own conclusion from the bold fixed eyes and tremulously scornful lips behind the iron railing of the dock. That look was less for the magistrate than for the opera glasses of the noble lord whom the magistrate had allowed upon the bench. But the Old Bailey lawyer read it his own way. Here was a glaringly guilty man putting a face of brass upon a heart of putty, the very type with which he was best accustomed and most competent to deal. So the vulture took a pinch of snuff that resounded through the court and, on the prisoner's removal, squeezed out himself to make inquiries. It was as he expected. The prisoner would be conveyed immediately to the new prison at Clerkenwell. But the attorney managed to get away first through the swelling crowd now on tiptoe for the prison van, and in a neighboring tavern he had his heartiest meal that year, also with Mr. Harding's money.

Between 3 and 4 he presented himself, well primed, at Clerkenwell and sent in a greasy card to the prisoner.

"He is much obliged, but he doesn't want to see you," said the turnkey on his reappearance.

"Tell him I am commissioned by his friends to get up his defense. No expense to be spared. Tell him that."

A UNIQUE BLOUSE WAIST

A pretty separate waist is an absolute necessity to the modern woman, for social exactions carry many sartorial requirements with them. The waist illustrated, which is adapted for any dressy wear, is at once so novel and so picturesque that it cannot fail to appeal to the artistic sense of the tasteful dresser. It is made of dotted net over silk, chiffon being used for the pretty wrinkled sleeves, and the same material, tucked, for the shoulder pieces; which afford the extremely long shoulder that is so much admired. The waist is prettily slashed at the waist line, the slashed portions being extended in tab effect over the girdle. Altogether it is cut on unique lines, embodying the latest Parisian ideas with some Japanese effects; yet, while pretty and uncommon, it is not beyond the capabilities of the home dressmaker. It may be modeled in Louisine Silk, Crepe de Chine, Eolienne or any soft fabric, while net or all-over lace may be used for the sleeves. To make it in the medium size requires 4⅜ yards of material 22 inches wide 6036—5 sizes, 32 to 40 inches bust measure.

W. H. HILL, Esq.,
Manager Central Ontario Sun Life of Canada
Peterborough, Ontario.

DEAR SIR,—

Your favor of the 24th inst. received enclosing statement of profits allotted to my policy 7001, in the "Sun Life" for the past five years.

Above policy is for $1,000 on the whole life five year distribution plan on which I paid an annual premium of $28.35, or $141.75 for the five year period.

I find the CASH PROFITS amount to $53.85, or about 40 per cent. of the total premiums paid during the five years. This is certainly a splendid showing and speaks volumes for the earning powers of the Sun Life Company's investments.

Thanking you and wishing your company continued success,

Yours truly,

H. H. MARTER

Six Months in Central Prison

For Chas. Beavis on Charge of Vagrancy—Hotelkeeper Fined

Charles Beavis, who was let out of goal on Saturday and who promised to turn over a new leaf, sat in the prisoner's dock again this morning. His right eye was very black and swollen, and he was a sad sight to behold. He claims that some hotelkeeper struck him last night. He was charged with vagrancy, and pleaded guilty. "I have given you too many chances," said His Worship You are sentenced to six months in Central Prison.

FINED TWO DOLLARS

Mr. T. Cavanagh was fined two dollars this morning for striking Jos. Hayes on Saturday last, at the Cavanagh House. It appears that Hayes had been told repeatedly not to come near the hotel, and Saturday, defendant claimed he went there to see a man, and Mr. Cavanagh told him to get out, and Hayes refused. A fistic encounter followed, and Hayes got the worst of it and came to the police station with a complaint His worship fined Cavanagh, stating that he had no right to take the law into his own hands.

YOUNG BOY PLAYED TRUANT

Thos. Robertson was charged with not sending his son Earl to school. He pleaded not guilty, stating that every morning he was sent out to school and he always thought his son was there. Mr. Mowatt, school inspector, said that his attendance was very irregular. His Worship gave the lad some good advice and told him to go to school, or he would settle him.

WEDDING BELLS

McLEAN—HEFFERNAN

On Tuesday, November 6, a very pleasing event took place in St Paul's church, Norwood when Miss Margaret Heffernan of Asphodel and Mr. Terrance McLean of Campbellford were united in marriage by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, cousin of the bride, of Ennismore. After the ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Heffernan, where a table richly spread and profusely decorated, was relieved of its burden by a large number of guests, many of whom were not present at the ceremony in the church. The pastor, Rev. Father Conway, and Father Fitzpatrick, presided, and both clergymen made neat and appropriate speeches after dinner, failing not to sound the praises of both bride and groom.

Miss Clara McNicol of Campbellford in a neat brown costume, filled the duties of bridesmaid to the fullest extent, while Mr. J. Heffernan of Westwood, and cousin to the bride, gracefully looked after the groom.

The presents were numerous, useful and valuable. The gift of the groom to the bride was a gold watch and chain.

A very enjoyable evening was then spent by the juveniles who carried the amusing recreation some hours into the next day.

Pledge Day at Sunday School

About 40 Books Placed in Hands of Pupils

Sunday was pledge day in the Park street Baptist Sunday school. The ceremony of according these was performed by Miss Mann, Supt., and Rev. A. H. Brace and Deacon T. G. Gillespie. Between 30 and 40 books were placed in the hands of as many scholars which will retain cherished memories of the occasion.

A very pleasing feature of the afternoon was a bouquet of cut flowers, on a vote of the whole school sent to little Miss Libby, who has been sick for several months.

Fort William Y.M.C.A. Work Gets Set Back Owing to Fire

Building Which Was to Have Been Used Gutted by Flames—This is Association of Which Mr. G. H. Williamson is Secretary

A Fort William despatch says: Fire broke out at 11 o'clock this morning at the old Baptist church which was to have been opened this afternoon by the Y.M.C.A., of which Mr. Geo. H. Williamson, formerly of Peterborough, is secretary. Though the flames had obtained considerable headway before the brigade arrived, they managed to save the building, but the interior was almost totally destroyed. Fire started from the stovepipes in the rear of the building. Damage will amount to about $1000. This occurrence will delay the opening of the Y.M.C.A., which is especially disappointing as the organization has been sparing neither time nor money to get things going. Y.M.C.A. services were held in the Presbyterian church.

Queen's University Endowment Fund Has Reached $300,000

Rev. Robert Laird, M.A., B.D., who is the special representative of Queen's University, Kingston, in connection with the proposed half million dollar endowment scheme, was in the city to-day for a few hours on his way from Toronto to Kingston. Mr. Laird reports that about $300,000 has already been promised and as soon as the subscriptions and donations reach $400,000, the half million dollar endowment fund will be realized, as Mr. Andrew Carnegie has agreed to donate the remaining $100,000 required.

Queen's is making excellent progress and the attendance this year in the various faculties is larger than ever in its history. Mr. Laird has done splendid work in all parts of Canada on behalf of the endowment fund. Rev. J. J. Wright, of Peterborough, who is assisting in this work is at present laboring in and around Arnprior.

Failure of Crops Has Caused Great Faminine in Asia Minor

Special to J. R. Heintz & Co.

Constantinople, Nov. 26.—A famine threatens a great part of Asia Minor owing to the failure of the crops, and the greatest distress prevails. The Sultan has issued orders forbidding the export of barley, of which large amounts are shipped abroad. The Sultan has also exempted from duty all wheat imported until the end of January.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN CRAFT

The death occured yesterday in Rochester, N.Y., of a former Peterborough lady in the person of Mrs. John Craft, after a lengthy illness. The deceased moved to Rochester with her husband and family about three years ago. Her many friends in this city will learn with regret of her death.

The remains will arrive on the C. P. R. local tomorrow night, and the funeral will take place on Thursday at 2.30 o'clock, from the residence of the deceased brother, Mr. R. H. Hunter, 439 1-2 George street, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

FORMATION OF UNITED AGENCY CO.

Organization Meeting Held Last Night

The United Agency Company held an organization last night at the company's offices in the Bank of Commerce building. The constitution and by-laws were adopted, and the officers and directors elected. On account of a full report of the affairs of this company for publication not being prepared, much information of an important character has been withheld until tomorrow's issue of the Review.

There was an enthusiastic attendance of those interested, and the election of the officers and directors resulted as follows:

President—H. P. Lindsay.
Vice-president—J. O. Fife.
2nd Vice-president—P. A. Ewing.
Secretary-treasurer—W. F. Nelson.

The joint managers of the company Messrs. H. P. Lindsay and W. F. Nelson.

Investigating Local Power

Engineer From Hydro-Electric Commission in the City

Mr. H. G. Acres, one of the engineers of Hydro-Electric Commission, was in the city today securing further information regarding the power available in the vicinity of Peterborough. Mr. Acres is the second engineer from the Commission that has visited Peterborough, and it is expected that when a report is made it will be complete in every respect.

Mr. Acres arrived in the city yesterday, and was in consultation with the mayor and other civic officials this morning.

Thirty Dollars Taken From Man's Pocket in Crowd

Last Evening—Pickpockets Were Busy—Police Have Clue

In the surging, seething throngs that turned out to welcome David Hartley, last evening, there were some who were foolish enough to come out with large sums of money in their pockets, and today are mourning the loss of their little roll. Samuel Spears, of this city, was one of the unfortunates who was robbed, and complained to the police that his pockets had been entered to the extent of thirty dollars.

Last night afforded a splendid opportunity for the longfingered gents to get in a few hours' good work, and Spears was evidently one of their remunerative victims.

The police have suspicions as to who the guilty pickpocetks are, and no doubt arrests will soon be made.

CROP REPORTS FROM ALL OVER

Weather is Favorable and the Outlook Good

Liverpool, Nov. 26.—Broomhall's weekly foreign crop summary says:

United Kingdom and Italy.—Seeding is making good progress under good weather conditions.

Spain.—The outlook for seeding continues favorable.

Germany.—Various complaints are heard as a result of drought, vermin and cold weather, and supplies are only fair.

Austria and Hungary.—As a result of the recent rains the outlook is more favorable.

Roumania.—The weather is mild and rainy which is favorable for wheat; stocks at the ports and on barges are large, but in the interior stocks are practically exhausted.

Russia.—There is no change in the outlook. Ports continue to sell wheat to the interior.

Argentina.—Our agent reports that conditions in the north are less favorable as dry weather is wanted.

Australia.—Our agent at Sidney cables that a marked improvement has been noticed in the districts where wheat was planted late.

"You Can Have Every Man We Have Got"

T. C. Flanagan's Message to Local Harriers in Connection With Indoor Meet

Mr. E. M. Best, president of the Y. M.C.A. Harrier Club, has received the following encouraging letter from Mr. T. C. Flanagan, president of the Irish-Canadians athletic club, Toronto:—

"Your programme is just the real thing for a good night's sport. You can have every man we've got. It will only be a pleasure to the Irish-Canadians to do all in our power for the Y.M.C.A. of Peterborough. I have had a letter from Mr. Creed, champion jumper of Great Britain and now a member of the Irish-Canadians. He is on his way here and if he arrives in time we will send him to give you an exhibition of jumping."

Mr. Flanagan states that either Cooley or Sellen will represent the Irish in the three mile special race. Sellen holds the 5 mile Canadian amateur championship, the time being 26 mins. 25 secs.

In View of Big Guarantee Will Play the Interprovincial Champions

The Rugby team, with the exception of Hurtubise, will go to Montreal. The reason the club will send the team is on account of the size of the guarantee offered by Montreal—$500. The team will leave on Friday night, and is in good condtion for the contest. The players are naturally most anxious to run the risk of being professionalized by playing the inter-provincial champions, but what other course was open to them in view of the deficit? The citizens have given a magnificent team miserable support, and while this is a good athletic town in matters of producing athletes, the sportsmanship of Peterborough in recent events has proved more or less of a joke.

New Secretary Gave Address

Mr. Wright Tendered Reception at Murray St. Baptist Church

At the regular meeting of the Murray street Baptist church B.Y.P.U., held last evening, Mr. Walter Garoutt presided. Mr. Horace E. Wright, the new Y.M.C.A. Secretary, was present and gave an able address on "The Rewards of Fidelity." Miss Pilling sang a solo. Messrs. A. J. Raddon and James Ellis contributed a duet.

Afterwards a reception was tendered Mr. Wright, who was given a cordial welcome. Refreshments were served and a pleasant time spent.

XMAS CANTATA

In St. John's Sunday school on Sunday, the superintendent, Mr. A. E. Poe, announced that the Sunday school children would present an Xmas cantata, "The Story of a Star," at the end of December. The senior children are anxious to get to work and the proposal was well received.

CHORAL SERVICE

Sunday at St. John's the 7 p.m. evensong was sung chorally by a very large choir of over 40 voices. Simple chants for Psalms and Canticles were used, many of the congregation joining in the singing and heartily in the hymns. Mr. Norris, tenor, sang "Liddell's 'Abide With Me," exceedingly well during the offertory.

INITIALLED WRITING PAPER.

One of the most acceptable of gifts that you can send is a dainty box of note paper and envelopes with one or more initials printed in gold on the flap of the first sheet of paper or on the back of the envelopes. Good writing paper is always appreciated and you can make no mistake in including it in your list. Leave your order early at the REVIEW Office and you will be well satisfied. 3d

A meeting of the Girls' Guild of George street church will be held in the church parlors this evening at a quarter to eight. All young ladies of the church are invited, and each one is to bring her Xmas work, or come prepared to sew on some work that will be provided at the meeting. An interesting programme has been prepared, and it is expected that the meeting will be an enjoyable one.

CHORAL WORK

After the evening services Sunday night members of several city choirs united with St. John's choir, and a happy and profitable time was spent with the beautiful numbers of Stainer's choral work, "Daughter of Jairus." A full chorus rehearsal will be held in St. John's church on Tuesday next at 8 p.m., Mr. R. J. Devey, conducting, and all interested are requested to be present. The work will be given next month.

FOR PASSEPORTOUT WORK.

The fad for passeportout pictures is again growing a half-dzite fine pretty pictures and are always appreciated. One can always find room for a couple more on the walls and every one has their favorite subject, some like scenery, others historical subjects, many like kittens and one boy in the city has the walls of his bedroom fairly covered with pictures of dogs—small and large. When mounted on a suitable background and passepartouted they are very pretty and inexpensive to make up. The Review has a large stock of pictures in sepia and colors, mounting papers and passepartout to match. Call and see them at the REVIEW Office, Hunter street. 3d

Hear Mr. Norris sing that beautiful popular classic, "Love Me and the World is Mine," at the Crystal to-night at every performance.

TABLE APPOINTMENTS.

Patterns in China Follow General Style of Period Rooms.

Selecting the china and glass ware for the dining room is just as important as selecting the furniture. Dishes and crystal are chosen both for their decorative possibilities and their utility, and the clever housewife has an eye to the general effect of her dining room with a smart dinner in progress, where every piece of crystal and fancy chinaware plays its part. The color scheme of the room decorations is duplicated or harmonized with in the tableware, and even the patterns of china and crystal as well as the shapes follow the general style of the period room.

The most popular dining room at present may be said to be the colonial.

A NEW DESIGN IN WHITE AND GOLD CHINA.

There are such charming dinner and breakfast sets to be found now which are far from costly and yet reproduce very satisfactorily the style of tableware used a century or two ago that it is easier to arrange a true colonial room than any other. Of course the furniture for such a room should be mahogany of the simple design belonging to the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. If one does not own genuine colonial pieces of mahogany it is no trouble at all to find excellent reproductions. Porcelain dinner and breakfast sets, plain crystal and even the pressed pieces, if correct in style, will help to give a certain tone to a room and make the visitor feel at once that thought and taste have been expended on the appointments if the money outlay has been inversely small.

ETIQUETTE POINTS.

What to Do When You Receive a Wedding Invitation.

Wedding cards come thick and fast in the autumn, and etiquette governing their acknowledgment is so precise that there should be no excuse in making an error.

Invitations to a church service, unless the ceremony is to be a small one, require no answer when received, but under no circumstances, except that of mourning, should a call upon the parents be omitted within a fortnight after the wedding, supposing that the invitations were issued in their names. If for any reason others, such as guardians or relatives, send out the invitations, the visit should be made to them. The point is that whoever was so courteous as to send the invitation should receive the return politeness—a call. If a widower issues the wedding invitation a woman receiving one posts her card with that of her husband's as an acknowledgment to the sender.

Reception cards require no previous acknowledgment, but are treated like any other invitation. A visiting card is left by those who are present at such an affair, and those who are unable to go post cards to be received on the date of the function. Of course if one is bidden to the breakfast or the number of invitations to the house is small these are acknowledged as soon as received. In this case, however, such requests are usually written by the bride or her parents and are quite informal, so that the answer is a note written in the same style.

Whenever the engraved invitations bear the letters R. S. V. P. an answer must be made at once.

Made of Celery.

Celery croquettes are made of three-quarters cupful of chopped celery, one large potato, two tablespoonfuls of chopped pecans or English walnuts, one-half tablespoonful of butter, salt to taste. Pare the potato and boil it and the celery together until tender. Remove the potato and mash fine. It should make one cupful. Drain the celery thoroughly, then mix all the ingredients together and turn out to cool. Form into small croquettes, coat with egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat, smoking hot.

Creamed dried beef and celery—one-quarter pound dried beef, one cupful celery cut into half inch pieces, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of milk, one and one-half tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Scald the beef, if too salty, and drain well. Melt the butter, add the celery and beef and cook, stirring occasionally, until the celery is slightly browned. Add the flour, mix until smooth, pour in the milk, stir until boiling, add the pepper, also salt if needed, and serve hot, garnished with toast points.

A New Story.

What is said to be a new Thackeray story has recently come to light. Lowell gave a supper in honor of Thackeray, and when his host asked what he would drink the distinguished author replied, "I dare drink anything that may become a man," and suggested that a certain celebrated chateau claret was his favorite. "But," cried one of the company, "it will be a long time before that becomes a man." "On the contrary," Thackeray retorted as he drained a bumper of the beautiful wine, "it is fast being turned into a man now."

James Killen, of Niagara Falls, a gardener, was killed by a M.C.R. train on Saturday.

DEBATE WAS FEATURE OF THE MEETING

Interesting Programme at Meeting of Collegiate Philomathean Society

The second fortnightly meeting of the Philomathean Society of the Collegiate Institute was held in the Y.M.C.A. assembly hall yesterday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. There was a large attendance of the members and much interest was displayed. The president, Michael O'Brien, occupied the chair in his usual acceptable manner.

The principle feature of the programme was a debate: Resolved—"That mediæval times were more conducive to happiness than modern." The affirmative side of the question was upheld by Mr. Cyril Moore and Miss Maysie Armstrong and the negative by Mr. Donald Denham and Miss May Smith. The debaters showed a great improvement in their deliverance and brought out many forcible arguments during the discussion. The judges, Mr. Stanley Pringle, Miss Annie Edgar and Miss Florence Harley, gave their decision in favour of the negative, which was evidently the opinion of those present.

The other items on the programme were as follows:—

Minutes of last meeting.....Miss G. Crane
Piano Solo.....Miss Grace Todd
Reading.....Miss Phyllis Denne
Vocal Solo.....Miss Pearl Morgan
Recitation.....Miss Mabel Pringle
Flute Solo.....Mr. Charles Ackerman
Criticism.....Mr. R. H. R. Keener

At the conclusion of the programme Mr. Harold Brown gave notice that at the next meeting he would bring in a motion which would exclude all farmers from attending the meetings of the society. The motion will no doubt meet with strong opposition on the part of those interested, and there promises to be a warm discussion when the society next meets. The meeting then adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

Memorial Service Was Conducted

In Honor of Late J. A. McWilliams at Park St. Church

The Park Street Baptist church was crowded Sunday night to honor the memory of the late Bro. John A. McWilliams. The Royal Black Preceptory, of which he was a distinguished member, Orangemen, True Blues and 'Prentice Boys were all represented from the various Lodges. The District Chaplain, Rev. A. H. Brace, preached the sermon from Job 7: 1, "Is there not an appointed time for man upon the earth? are not his days also as the days of an hireling." After giving the deceased's standing in the Order and the circumstances of his death, his church relationship, etc., Mr. Brace said the text shews:

I. Man's Present Inheritance "The Earth."

II. Man's exit from the earth was under divine control.

III. His elect was uncertain as to time, but certain as to precedent and to fact.

IV. The good man's hope was Resurrection, Life. Whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold Him and not another.

The choir rendered suitable and impressive music and the entire service and large attendance constituted a warm tribute to the consistent life of an honorable citizen.

You have heard the Sailor Boys' plea, buy to-day for your dinner to-morrow "Sailor Boy" Canned Goods, Tomatoes Corn, Peas and Salmon. Your money does not buy better Goods. Do you get "Sailor Boy" or substitute?

STATISTICS OF CRIME.

Minister of Justice's Report on Canada's Penitentiaries.

The annual report of the Minister of Justice as to penitentiaries in Canada for the fiscal year of nine months, ending March last, just issued, shows the average daily population of the penitentiaries for 1906-07 was 1,433, an increase of 26 as compared with the preceding year. The figures for the last five years indicate that the gradual increase in the number of convicts corresponds with the increasing population of the country, and is not indicative of any noticeable advance in criminality. The number of criminals, the report notes, who accompany the rush of immigration, is evidently offset by the existing facilities for employment at a remunerative rate.

During the year 157 convicts were released on parole, 29 were pardoned and 12 died.

The report of Parole Officer Archibald states that the operations of the parole law continues to be satisfactory. The number of pardons granted during the past seven years is 260, as against 384 granted during the preceding six years.

As health resorts Canadian penitentiaries have an enviable record. The number of deaths occurring in prison during the past three years has been less than one per cent. per annum. Only one convict successfully escaped last year. The escape occurred a few days after the opening of the Alberta Penitentiary, and was due to the inexperience of the guards. The number of absolutely illiterate in the penitentiaries is equal to about 17 per cent., while not more than 10 per cent. have had the advantage of a good common school education. Fourteen per cent. of the convicts last year were total abstainers, 44 per cent. were temperate and 42 per cent. were intemperate. Lads under 20 years of age constitute eleven per cent. of the total, notwithstanding the unsuitability of penitentiaries for immature criminals.

"It is safe to say," says the report, "that not more than one in a thousand of this class is benefited by a penitentiary experience."

The percentage of Canadian-born convicts is 61, as compared with 70 in 1897. The percentage of convicts born in Great Britain and Ireland is less than in 1897, while the percentage of those born in the United States remains the same as it was ten years ago. In regard to religions, the number of convicts to each 10,000 of population was as follows: Church of England 4.7, Jewish 4.2, Roman Catholic 3, Baptist 2.2, Methodist 1.6, and Presbyterian 1.6.

WILLING MAIDENS.

Nearly a Hundred Ready to Wed Lonely Colonist.

Sometime ago a letter was published which Mr. Harry Newbury, a lonely settler in British Columbia, had written to the Guildford Board of Guardians, asking them to assist in providing him with a wife.

Mr. Newbury said he did not want an angel, but a nice, sensible girl, and nearly all the fair applicants for his hand and heart let it be understood in their letters that whatever else they might be, they were, at any rate, sensible. One of them said she felt ashamed of herself at writing, but she wanted a friend. A would-be bride said she was at college until a little while ago, and she warned the colonist that she was still as full of fun and mischief as any girl who had just left school.

Another girl who asked to be introduced to the young man said she was not at all a "bad sort, very nice and sensible, fair and dimpled." Another appraised her charms rather highly, stating that she was "graceful and ladylike, with a figure divine"; moreover, she had an immaculate olive complexion, aquiline nose, rosy red lips, and was level-headed. Once she had been disappointed in love, but, she significantly added, "her capacity still held good."

A girl who was good at making things homely wrote that she was sure she would make a good little wife for a working man. From Wales came a letter stating that the writer was holding a humble position, but she had a heart, and was willing to comply with all Mr. Newbury's wishes, and would send on a character if necessary.

A young woman who had the misfortune to lose her intended recently was now looking out for somebody else, and men of his kind were scarce where she was living. The father of a young woman, who would meet all requirements, said he would send her out if the young man would forward the passage money as a guarantee of good faith.

Simple Life in Holland.

A Canadian tourist, who has been making a prolonged stay in the Netherlands under circumstances which brought him into close contact with the peasantry, thinks that disciples of the "simple life" could get some valuable lessons in rural Holland.

"As far as possible," he says, "we avoided the big cities while in Holland, and lived out in the country in close touch with the people. We found them charming, kind, and unaffected. They didn't even know that they were interesting and picturesque. So far as we could discover, they have reduced life to the simplest possible basis. They are unharried by ambition, and are satisfied with the sound elements of a healthy life. They show in their daily business and pastimes how easily one could follow 'simple-life' ideas without being a crank."

Canadian Public Life.

The London Morning Post says that in contrast to the Mother Country, Australia, South Africa, and Canada have outgrown the period when unionism, coupled with the essential tariff question, forms the leading principle in party politics. It says that owing to the elimination of traditional issues the tone of Canadian public life seems to be declining, and that many would welcome the arrival of some fresh national controversy such as the problem of Asiatic immigration may possibly furnish.

There is hope in Ottawa that next summer will see a direct line of fruit steamers between this Mediterranean and Canada.

NEW RACE IN NORTHWEST.

Dr. Gordon Discovers Tribe Who Had Never Seen White Men.

George B. Gordon, curator of the University of Pennsylvania's archaeological department, who returned recently after a six months' expedition through the wildest regions of the far Northwest, announces the discovery of a new race living along the Koskokwim River, in Alaska.

Dr. Gordon brings back a strange tale of this new race, which had never before seen a white man, and which differs from all other tribes of Alaskan Indians.

Dr. Gordon heard rumors of the race in 1905, and after innumerable hardships he reached the territory in which these aborigines live in Adamic simplicity. They are called by the Eskimos "Kuskwagamutes," and show strong traces of Mongolian ancestry. Crime and vice are utterly unknown among them, and their religion is natural pantheism.

They know absolutely nothing of corruption and degeneracy with which the whites have infected the Athabascan Indians and Eskimos. Dr. Gordon lived for several months among them.

"Though they are dying out," Dr. Gordon said, "they are strong and clean physically and intelligent. They have retained the most ancient characteristics of dress and speech. In clothing, instead of wearing furs, they sew skins of birds into robes, using the breasts of loon and various species of ducks which abound in the river."

Of their clothing, utensils, arms, etc., Dr. Gordon gathered collections, and when they arrive he and other ethnologists will try to discover whether the tribe is of Asiatic origin or whether it migrated from Lower California.

This new tribe is the only one in Alaska which makes pottery, Dr. Gordon says. All the others are basket weavers. Dr. Gordon believes the race to be of ancient Asiatic origin, gradually driven by Athabascan Indians and Eskimos to its present quarters, which is a natural fortress. They represent, perhaps, the most ancient dwellers of Alaska, who made their way there from Asia.

They are monogamists, and no such thing as vice is known among them. They are permitted by their priests to have more than one wife, but never do so. They have no laws at all, but are governed by patriarchs. They are tall, and the women graceful and beautiful.

"There are only 400 of them left," said Dr. Gordon. "It is to be hoped for their sake that they die out before the white traders get to them. Then they can die as cleanly and happily as they live."

WHALES AS RAMS.

Two Resolute and Effective Attacks Upon Vessels.

While cruising in the South Seas the whaler Essex on Nov. 20, 1820, was furiously attacked by a cow sperm whale, supposed to have been the mother of a calf, which had just been harpooned. The whale had not been wounded herself and her attack was very determined. At her first rush she passed under the Essex and carried away a great length of her false keel; then coming to the surface a considerable distance away she appeared to take bearings and deliberately charged the vessel again, ramming her with such violence that she stove in the bows, while the ship rolled so heavily that the captain thought that she must be dismasted. The case is memorable because the crew had to abandon the vessel, and one boat was never heard of again.

A more singular instance of a whale attacking a vessel occurred in 1895; the singularity lies in the fact that in the case of the Handa Isle the attack was entirely unprovoked. This vessel, a brigantine of 260 tons, was on her way to Sydney with a cargo of timber. On Aug. 24, about noon, a couple of sperm whales rose very close to the vessel, and while the crew watched them "sporting" across her bows the pair suddenly slewed around and came straight for her. One thought better of it and dived below the Handa Isle, the other struck her fair and square on the beam, crushing in her timbers. Having rammed the ship in this resolute fashion, it sheered off terribly damaged about the head, and presently sank tail first.

Fortunately there were some packages of rawhides on board and the crew were able to keep the vessel afloat with the pumps until a rough and ready collision mat had been fashioned out of these and drawn over the leak.

How Towns Spring Up.

The town of Govan in Saskatchewan is just a year old and now it has a newspaper, The Prairie News. Easterners hear much about the way towns spring up out West like mushrooms, and the case of Govan is a typical example of this rapid growth. The editor of the newly-established paper there tells the story. On June 30, 1905, he landed from the east at Arlington Beach after a trip by rail, shank's pony, wagon and tugboat. On the present site of Govan there was visible but one house—a solitary hut on an apparently boundless sea of grass, which had been broken by the plow in one or two patches. In September from the window of a neat two-storey house, built in the meantime on the same quarter, he counted 51 buildings and as many blackened patches of breaking. At that time the location of the railway was mere conjecture. In the spring of 1906 the railway became a definite proposition to the settler, and the location of the town began to be discussed. Soon the location was announced and a man arrived with a load of lumber and started to build. A general store was opened, settlers moved in, and the town became a fact. Now The Prairie News is published in the booming centre of a prosperous farming community.

WAS SHE POISONED?

Thamesville, Ont.—The wife of a prominent citizen of Thamesville was the heroine of a mysterious case which has just been successfully solved. About a year ago, Mrs. J. W. Dulong began to suffer with headaches. There was no apparent cause for them. After trying the ordinary "headache remedies," and failing to get relief, Mrs. Dulong consulted several physicians, who pooh-hooed the idea of anything out of the ordinary and told her she "would be all right."

Vague hints became rumors. Was Mrs. Dulong being poisoned? Yes, she was—and strangest of all, by herself. Not intentionally—nor with drugs—but nevertheless, she was slowly poisoning herself. Headaches are always a sign of blood poisoning. Bowels, skin and kidneys should rid the system of tissue waste. If one of these organs are weak or not acting properly, this waste stays in the system—is absorbed by the blood—and irritates the nerves and makes the headaches.

"I have tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and found them splendid for headaches," writes Mrs. Dulong after her recovery. "I feel so much better since I commenced taking them. I think they are a splendid medicine and" (note this) "I am recommending them to my friends." Everybody, who takes Fruit-a-tives, is grateful for the cures they affect. It is wonderful how quickly "Fruit-a-tives" give relief in all cases stomach, liver, kidney and bowel trouble. If you suffer, get a box today; 50c, 6 boxes for $2.50. At your druggist or sent on receipt of price. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa Ont.

Blaze at Hamilton.

Hamilton, Nov. 23.—Fire that did damage to the extent of $15,000 or $20,000 broke out last evening at 6.50 in the Burrow, Stewart & Milne Stove Foundry. The fire started near the corner of John and Cannon streets, and spread both ways. On the west it was blocked by a fire wall, and by clever work Chief TenEyck and his brigade had it under control in half an hour after they were called. When they arrived the whole of the top end of the building was a mass of flames.

The trouble started on the second floor, and the flames shot up the elevator shaft to the third storey, burning about half-way up the block on the top storey. The flames spread eastward on the second storey. The alarm came in when about one-third of the firemen were off for supper, and Chief TenEyck says that the council must give him more men. He has been kicking for months for more help. It was the first time that the new fire engine was used, and it did good work.

Conductor Arrested.

Lindsay, Nov. 23.—George Thompson, conductor on the train on which the abductor of a little girl, Dorothy Marion, left here Thursday, came to town yesterday morning under arrest on the charge of obstructing an officer of the law in the performance of his duty. It seems that when officers came on board the train at Markham to make the arrest of the woman claiming to be the child's mother, he would not allow it, and again did the same at Agincourt, where the police had been telegraphed.

The child had been with the Marions now for about five years, and was adopted out of a home. The mother was a Catholic, and, it is said, has two brothers who are priests. The Marions have all the necessary papers of adoption, and therefore the mother has forfeited all her rights. Whether or not the abductor is the child's real mother cannot be learned definitely.

$100.00 IN COLD CASH In Rewards For Selling The "Review"

This Grand Competition began Tuesday evening, October 8th, and will close December 31st, (New Year's Eve.) Boys carrying routes, boys selling to customers, boys selling on the street, boys who have never sold papers, are all urged to get up and get. Parents can let the little fellows come to The Review Office after school, and they will be taken care of—not allowed to stay in a dingy cellar or out on the street in the cold. Papers will be ready sharp after 4 o'clock each day. Come On, Boys! Here's a Sure Thing!

Twenty-Six Prizes 26 Twenty-Six Prizes

To the twenty-six boys getting the largest number of New Customers for The Daily Review:

Budget of News From Ennismore

New Weigh Scale Installed—Residents Remove to the City

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday morning, Nov. 23, in St. Martin's church, Ennismore, when Miss Mary Young became the bride of Mr. Michael Dovey, of Lindsay. Rev Father Fitzpatrick officiated. The bride and groom came into the church during the playing of the wedding march by Miss Agnes Scollard. The bride was handsomely gowned in blue silk, with white silk yoke and all-over lace, and wore a picture hat to match. The bridesmaid was Miss L. A. Scollard, cousin of the bride, and wore blue lady's cloth trimmed with silk and hat of light blue chiffon and Valenciennes lace. The groom was supported by Mr. M. Farley, of Lindsay. The bride received many costly and beautiful presents, showing the high estimation in which she is held by her many friends in Ennismore. After the wedding ceremony the party sat down to a sumptuous feast at the home of Mr. Wm Young, brother of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Dovey will reside in Lindsay.

Mr. P. J. Scollard, our enterprising business man, has just completed erecting a large fourton weigh scales, not only for his own business, which is quite extensive, but for the general public as well. Mr. Thos. Irwin, of Peterborough, a gentleman of many years' experience at the business, did the work of installing, which is a credit to himself, both in easiness of workmanship and also in its accuracy in weighing. Naturally the people of Ennismore, and especially those to whom the scales will prove a benefit, are sounding the praises of P. J.

Mr. Robt. O'Donoghue and Mr. D. Kennedy have recently rented their farms and removed to the city with their families last week, where they will make their home. They will be much missed by their large circle of friends at home, who wish them every success in their new abode.

Excellent Work Done at School

Rev. A. D. Menzies Spoke in Interest of Point aux Trembles Institution

The Rev. A. D. Menzies addressed the congregation of St. Andrew's Sunday morning, in the interests of the Building Fund of the Point aux Trembles School, near Montreal. Mr. Menzies gave convincing proof of the excellent work being done in the Education of the French children, and quoted leading Quebec statesmen as speaking highly of the educational equipment of the Scottish people in its relation to their superiority as a people. It was the aim of Point aux Trembles to assist in the education of our fellow countrymen and to instruct all who so desired it, in the knowledge of the Word of God.

Mr. Menzies has already met with much encouragement and will doubtless find many warm friends in Peterborough who will most gladly respond

Death of Former Warden of County

Mr. Frank Elmhirst Expired Suddenly at Carberry, Man.

The funeral of the late Frank Elmhirst, who died suddenly at Carberry, Man., from an attack of heart failure, took place on Sunday afternoon at Carberry. Deceased was a native of Otonabee and is survived by a wife and large family and two brothers, Richard and John, both of Otonabee. He removed to the West about fifteen years ago, and a few months ago visited relatives and old friends in this vicinity. The late Mr. Elmhirst was a former Warden of Peterborough county and was for years reeve of Burleith, Chandos and Anstruther townships. He was highly respected and his death will be learned with extreme regret.

Thirty-five Car Loads of Freight

Carried in One Day Over the Lakefield Branch

(Special to the Review)

Lakefield, Nov. 25.—The G. T. R. branch between here and Peterborough is very busy at present. One day last week no less than 35 carloads of freight were taken from here. The cargoes were principally lumber and cement.

BIG SEASON'S CUT

The mills of the Cavandish Lumber Company are still in operation and will continue running until it freezes up. It is expected that the cut this year will reach 18,000,000 ft., the largest on record.

Fiend Fires Tenement; Awful Fire in New York

Work of Black Hand—Seven of Dead Are Children — Victims Huddled Together on Top Floor—Believed to Be Act of Revenge by Italians—Mother's Effort to Save Her Babe—Some Were Injured.

New York, Nov. 26.—Thirteen persons lost their lives and several others were injured early yesterday in a tenement house fire at 109th street and Second avenue. All the dead were Italians. Seven of the thirteen were children. The bodies were found huddled together in rooms on the top floor of the four-storey building where the terror-stricken people had been driven by the flames which rushed up from the lower floors. They had been caught and swept down to death before they succeeded in reaching windows which led to the fire escapes and safety. Some had been enveloped in the flames and burned alive. Others, overcome by smoke, were spared the agonies of death in the flames.

That the fatal fire was the work of incendiaries who sought revenge is the opinion of the police and firemen who made the first hasty examination. Three weeks ago, three Italians were caught in the act of attempting to rob a safe in the saloon of Guiseppe Cudano on the ground floor.

The safe contained over $3,000, which the saloonkeeper and friends had withdrawn from banks during the money panic. The would-be robbers were arrested and are now awaiting trial. The fire of yesterday started in Cudano's saloon, and the police believe that it may have been the work of friends of the prisoners who took this means of squaring the account with the saloonkeeper.

So quickly did the flames spread that almost before the firemen arrived the whole building was a furnace, and it was impossible for anyone to enter. Even the cries of the agonized women and children were drowned by the roar and crackle of the flames, the hissing engines and the frantic crowd which pressed as closely as possible to the fire lines. Not a single person was seen to appear at any of the windows of the blazing building with the exception of those on the second floor, from which several persons reached the fire escape and were rescued. The reason for this was explained when after the flames had been partially checked, firemen fought their way through the smoke to the upper floors.

There they came upon piles of dead where they had fallen victims to the rush of flames and smoke, even before they had a chance to attempt to save themselves. In one of the heaps the fireman found a woman who had made one last desperate effort to save the life of her baby, even when she knew that she herself was doomed to a horrible death. She had folded her arms tightly around the little one, and then huddled down close to the floor, her own body protecting that of her child. The mother's body was badly burned. That of the child bore scarcely a mark, but it was dead from suffocation. On every side of the mother and child lay the bodies of other victims.

Addresses on missionary work in China and on the Chinese language were given by Mrs. (Rev.) Lewis and Miss Edna Armstrong. On Monday next there will be an Epworth League and Sunday School convention in Lakefield. A number of young people from George Street church will attend in the evening.

PASSEPARTOUT PICTURES AND MOUNTING BOARD

The fad for passepartout pictures is again growing very general. Many who have used this means of decorating their rooms, find there is no other way of treating pictures, that is so economical and satisfactory. The Review has a new line of passepartout in all shades, mounting papers and pictures in the popular sepia tints. Call and see them and fix up a few pictures for your friends for Xmas. Nothing is more acceptable than a pretty picture.

ASTRONOMERS MEET TO-NIGHT

Operation of the Telescope Loaned the Society Will be Explained

The Peterborough Branch of the Royal Astronomical Society will meet to-night at the home of Mr. Collier, 555 Weller street. Rev. Dr. Marsh, the president, will continue his lecture on "Rudiments of Astronomy" or "Astronomy for Beginners." The address will be illustrated by the use of the planetarium and the telescope, which has been loaned the society by Mr. Stupart, director of the Meteorological Observatory, Toronto, will be on hand and if the night is clear observations can be made. If the weather is not favorable for observation, the operation of the instrument will be explained in order that the members may know how to use it.

All members of the society and others interested are cordially invited.

Men's Meeting Well Attended

Helpful Address Given by Messrs. Thornton and Harding

There was a good men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday afternoon at 4 p.m. The Evangelistic Band conducted the meeting. Mr. J. F. Thornton and Mr. (R. S. Harding both gave short, helpful addresses and then several others of the band and congregation spoke briefly. Miss Clara Belleghem sang very sweetly and with much expression "Will there be any stars in your crown," and the "Y" quartette rendered a selection with good effect.

The Sunday evening song service from 8.30 to 9.30 was inaugurated last evening with pronounced success. A number of men gathered at the appointed time and had a very pleasant hour of song. A person does not need to be a singer to come in. Any man who is fond of music is invited to join in and enjoy himself.

OBITUARY

MRS. WM. BEAUMONT.

There passed away in Toronto on Tuesday last, a lady who was highly respected, in the person of Mrs. Beaumont, wife of Mr. Wm. Beaumont. She had been ailing for some time, and leaves a husband, two daughters and a son, to mourn her loss. The deceased was a sister of Conductor Geo. Jobbitt, of this city, who, along with Mrs. Jobbitt, attended the funeral, which took place on Thursday last.

IRISH NATIONALISTS AGREE.

Warring Leaders Are Now For Union and Peace.

London, Nov. 26.—Nationalist unity appears to be on the eve of accomplishment. Communications have been passing between the leaders of the party, and William O'Brien, member of Parliament for Cork, speaking at Ballyeullan, Wexford, yesterday, expressed the belief that all Nationalist representatives soon would be brought under the same flag.

It is understood that the terms of the proposed agreement are that the chief work of the coming session of Parliament should be Chief Secretary Birrell's new university bill, that the agrarian agitation in Ireland should be to a great extent suspended, and the efforts of the party devoted to securing an amendment to the Land Acts through further conferences with the landlords, while preparations should be made to raise the home rule question on Gladstonian lines at the next general election.

DARING HOLD-UP.

Shots Were Exchanged and One Highwayman Wounded.

Buffalo, Nov. 26.—The Buffalo News last night published a despatch from Bridgeburg, Ont., which says:

"While James Roberts, who works on the farm of Arnold Zabbits, near this town, was driving home Sunday night from Stevensville, Ont., he was held up by three men, who ordered him to hold up his hands and deliver his money.

"Roberts fired at the men and wounded one of them. They thereupon fired at him and hit him in the arm. He whipped up his horses and escaped.

"Roberts had met the midnight express on the Michigan Central at Streetsville and had received a package containing a large sum of money. This package he had deposited in the Sterling Bank in the village for safekeeping."

NO REGARD FOR LIFE.

Coroner Lays Blame For Disaster at Fontanet Powder Mills.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 26.—Coroner L. H. Leavitt yesterday filed his verdict in the case of the Fontanet powder mill explosion, in which 27 lives were lost and more than 100 persons injured. In his findings the coroner says:

"This factory was operated with utter lack of regard for human life or injury to others. The magazine was located at such a short distance from all the units of the factory that it made each and every man employed at the mercy of any other employe, and where an act of ignorance or negligence of any could kill or injure all."

Found Captain's Cap.

St. Catharines, Nov. 26.—After having spent the entire day at the spot where the tug Escort went to the bottom of Lake Ontario, the tug Alert returned to Port Dalhousie harbor about 7 o'clock last night, bringing with it the cap worn by Captain Harry Dunlop at the time of the collision.

It is taken as evidence of the fact that he must have escaped from the pilot-house and was drowned outside the Escort. The work of searching for the bodies and endeavors to raise the sunken tug will begin in earnest by the Carters' wrecking outfit to-day.

The searchers report that a floating buoy was found in but 85 feet of water, some six miles from Port Dalhousie harbor, and a few miles from shore.

Young Man Died in Lumber Camp

Was Away Only two Months—Resided in Lakefield

The remains of a Lakefield young man passed through the city Monday from Cartier, Que., where the young fellow died. His name was Ralph Lawrence. He was a son of David Lawrence of the northern village. Particularly sad is his death, he having been ill only a short while. He left about two months ago for the lumber camps and a short time ago he was stricken with fever from which he never recovered.

Medicine Hat had a narrow escape from destruction by a prairie fire last week.

BEER* IS GOOD TO ENRICH THE BLOOD

PEOPLE who drink good beer with their meals can't be aenemic—thin-blooded.

Because beer, so drank, actually supplies the food elements that make the blood rich. Also beer assists the stomach in getting all the good possible out of all the food that enters it.

*BEER is a term which covers lager, ales, porter and stout and, in the province of Ontario brewers, implies beverages made under most hygienic conditions, from Ontario barley (the best in the world) malt, hops, and pure water. 108

Local Lady Won Limerick Prize

In the Mail and Empires Last Week Competition

Among the names or the winners of last week's Limerick competition of the Mail and Empire, appears that of Miss Caroline Peck, Mark Street, East City, but who is at present stopping in Toronto. Miss Peck came sixth and captured five dollars. The Limerick was:

There was a young fellow of Bright,
Said goodness but money is tight;
No dinner to-morrow
Unless I can borrow

The line which Miss Peck supplied to complete the Limerick was:

Which he did—from the bank—in the night.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box nearest to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the War number is given first, then a pause, and then thereremaining numbers of the Box.

Hartley Accorded Magnificent Reception on Return From His Famous Victory Over Reynolds

The Celebrated Pedestrian Met at Station by Civic Reception Committee and Thousands of Citizens== Mammoth Procession Up George Street Headed by 57th Regimental Band== Given Complimentary Dinner.

Peterborough Went Wild Over its Athletic Idol Last Night.

Happy Speeches at Central Park Applauded by Listeners.

"I never expected anything like it. I can't conceive of how they managed to have so magnificent a reception in such short notice. If I had been told before I came home that I would be given a welcome like this, I never would for a moment have paid the slightest attention to the information."

These were the words that the famous David Hartley, regarded as one of the most phenomenal walkers in America, uttered on the bandstand in Central Park in the midst of the mammoth civic and popular reception tendered him last night by the largest and most wildly enthusiastic gathering that ever turned out to give a reception to any individual in Peterborough, no matter in what sphere he had gained glory. The streets were literally packed with people, and for a long time before the 7.51 C.P.R. train from Toronto came in carrying on board the conquering hero, who had won such honor for himself and his home city, the station and vicinity was thronged with people, who were anxious to catch a glimpse of Hartley, and join in the general cheering for the man who more than made good. It was an eager expectant crowd that shoved, and pushed and craned their necks to try and see that magic headlight of the iron monster coming along the rails. And when it was seen a sudden buzz arose that at length swelled to a yell that fairly shook the station walls. Then the train drew in and the noise ceased almost to a hush, for everybody was busy gazing at the coach doors, waiting for the walking wonder to step out on the platform. At length the veteran accompanied by Charles Stevens, made his appearance and then the shouting did commence. Two of his admiring friends caught him up on their shoulders, and with the assistance of the police, managed to force their way through the crowd to the cab that was in waiting to convey the champion to Central Park, where it had been arranged to have congratulatory speeches made by Ald. Phalen, chairman of the civic reception committee, and His Worship Mayor McWilliams.

As he was carried through the swarm of eager humanity he was like a vortex of a whirlpool, everybody seeming to be drawn to him. The band played "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and there was a general confusion of noise and music.

THE PARADE.

The procession was of the most festive character, and many of the equippages were burdened with flags and gay decorations. The whole parade was like a gigantic moving picture with plenty of light and color effects. The abundant display of fireworks lent a brilliant illumination to the surroundings, and from the station to the park, and one viewing them from a distance might easily imagine a sham battle was being fought. The sky rockets were shooting and spluttering here and there all along the route, not only from the carriages, but from the sidewalks and places of business as well.

In the first carriage were David Hartley, the wizard walker, Ald. Phelan, chairman of the reception committee; His Worship Mayor McWilliams; Mr. George Stevens, Hartley's trainer and manager. In conveyances were members of the city council and admirers of Reynolds' vanquisher. The 57th Regimental band led the parade, and the Armstrong life and drum band supplied the melody at the rear of the procession. Both fire waggons were out and with their brilliant colors were a spectacular feature of the parade.

From the station to Central Park the enthusiasm was at its height, and spontaneous outbursts of cheering told of the city welcome to the man who so gallantly upheld its honor. When the park was at length reached all the carriages drove up to the band stand and, as Hartley stepped on the platform he was given a tremendous ovation by the thousands who were on hand to greet him. Mesrs. George and Charles Stevens also came on the band stand, as did Mrs. Steven and Mrs. Hartley. Hartley's wife greeted her spouse cordially, and when the latter kissed her it was another opportunity for the crowd to show its approval. Alderman Phalen was the first speaker, and Mayor McWilliams followed him. Hartley himself then gave a cleverly expressed address, telling of his appreciation of the honor done him, and Mr. Stevens told of the race in an interesting manner. The band played "Britannia Rules the Waves," and everybody was lost in the vociferously expressed praise of Hartley.

DINED AT ORIENTAL.

At the conclusion of the speech-making Messrs Hartley and George and Charlie Stevens, and Mesdames Hartley and Stevens, preceded by the band and followed by the cession of carriages and people, were driven to the Oriental, where they were the guests of Mr. G. N. Graham, the proprietor. The rotunda of the hotel was jammed with people, who went to be in the midst of the excitement, or to shake hands with the champion. The crowd stayed around the hotel for a long time, and the chief topic of conversation was, of course, Hartley. He was discussed about as thoroughly as it is possible for man to be discussed, and all that he had done, could do and would do was thoroughly dwelt upon. The ladies of the invited party were driven to their homes in East City first, and later in the evening the wizard pedestrian and his two most intimate supporters were conveyed to their well earned couches of repose.

SPEECHES AT THE PARK.

Arriving at Central Park the hero of the hour was carried to the grand stand, followed by Mayor McWilliams, Aldermen Phelan, McIntyre, Leary, Wilson, Duncan, Bradburn, Morgan, Elliott, Davey, Stevenson and Morrow, Mrs. Hartley, Mrs. Stevens and Mr. George Stevens and Charlie Stevens also had places on the platform.

Mr. Hartley was given an ovation as he came out before the people and time after time he doffed his cap in acknowledgement of the hearty reception. Cheer after cheer rent the air and the multitudes of people seemed to never tire of shouting and yelling in honor of "Our popular pedestrian."

Alderman Phelan, chairman of the reception committee opened the proceedings at the park with a few remarks voicing the sentiments of the throng in acclaiming Mr. Hartley the greatest walker in Canada today. "We are proud of him," said the speaker. "He has brought distinction to our city and his great victory will not soon be forgotten, but rather will live for many years years to come. We join to-night in honoring this man and nothing we can do can half show our appreciation of what he has done."

MAYOR McWILLIAMS.

"Three cheers for Hartley," said the Mayor, as he came forward and taking off his hat, he led the chorus of "Hip hip hurrah," that could be heard for blocks. "As representative of the people here to-night, began His Worship, I am sure they will bear me out, in extending to our guest to-night heartiest congratulations. He has won a great feat and we are justly proud of him. To walk nearly 80 miles continuously for twelve hours is a wonderful achievement and there are few men, who could accomplish the same. Mr. Hartley's feat comes within five per cent. of the world's record, a distinction he, and the city too, might well feel proud of. The Peterborough record smasher for long distance walking has not ended the career and next spring, remarked the Mayor, he will walk from Montreal to Toronto, and I venture to predict he will do it in remarkably quick time and eclipse all past showing. He was sure the citizens were all in sympathy with the City Council in the proposal to make the walking painter a grant, in recognition of his victory.

Many thought that Mr. Hartley would not finish in his Toronto-Port Hope-Peterborough walk, but he surprised them by clipping two hours' off the barber' record, and now he has again put the Port Hope man in the background. He is a "wonder" and we all esteem him highly, were the Mayor's concluding remarks.

MR. HARTLEY.

Upon the invincible pedestrian coming forward, the people seemed to go wild and cheer after cheer greeted the most popular man in the city last evening. He began by heartily thanking the Mayor, aldermen and citizens for the very fine reception tendered him. "Not for my own personal glory, but for the credit and honor of the city, I strove to win," said Mr. Hartley. In Toronto I was not given much encouragement. They said to me "Why Jimmy will walk your biff the floor in the first few laps," but that made me bolder and more determined, and I went in to win, said the pedestrian, amid much applause. He paid a high compliment to Mr. Stevens, who he said, helped him through when they hardly knew where the expenses were coming from. Mr. Hartley made an excellent speech and was given a most spontaneous reception.

MR. STEVENS.

Mr. George Stevens, Hartley's trainer, next added a few words. "I am proud of Davey," said Mr. Stevens. "but he is going to do a great feat next spring. He did splendidly at Toronto and walked clean away from Reynolds." Mr. Stevens briefly related the story of the contest and incidents in connection with it. He said the people should not be surprised if Hartley and Reynolds came together in a road race and stated that Reynolds said he was not satisfied with merely meeting Hartley on an indoors course. He further remarked that the Port Hope barber would be given an opportunity of showing his mettle Hartley next year would walk from Toronto to Montreal. He hoped sufficient money would be realized to buy Hartley a house and lot and explained that some booklets containing Hartley"s cut and the account of his celebrated Oshawa to Peterborough walk would be offered for sale at twenty-five cents each with a view for securing money for the man who so richly merited it. A large number of the booklets were sold last night and every citizen of Peterborough should buy one as a suitable souvenir of the record breaking attainment of one of the world's greatest walkers.

Fireworks and Gay Equippages and Cheering Throngs,

The Man of the Hour Was David Hartley the "Walking Wonder"

HERE AND THERE

Everybody but a booklet and help out Hartley. He's a credit to Peterborough and himself and deserves the most liberal support.

"My what a crowd. Wonder somebody wasn't killed." But that's what they always say.

In the height of the jubiliation some individual lustily blowing a tin horn had the audacity to follow the waggon in which were seated two local sporting editors.

Hartley was cool and collected all the time. He certainly has great control of himself.

The reception was a faultless one and was conducted without a hitch. Great praise is due Alderman Phalen for his generalship and judgment.

Further Comment on Recent Walk

The Toronto Star, speaking of the great pedestrian contest, says:

It was apparent from the first hour of the contest that Hartley would be the victor, unless he suffered a collapse. He had a much prettier and cleaner style than his opponent, and a spurt that was simply phenomenal. Whenever he felt like increasing his lead he broke loose and simply romped away from Jimmy. Only once did he fail to gain the coveted lap. That was between 9.30 and 10 o'clock. On that occasion Reynolds managed, by dint of hard, continuous sprinting and the spirited cheering of the crowd, with whom he was a prime favorite, in catching up to his rival after Hartley had pulled out a lead of nearly half a lap. At no time during the contest did Reynolds gain a lap on his opponent, while Hartley lapped Reynolds no less than fifteen times during the twelve hours' grind.

After it was all over, and Tom Eck, the most efficient master of ceremonies, announced the result, the walkers were carried to their dressing-rooms by enthusiastic supporters.

Said Hartley: "Reynolds surprised me. I thought I could beat him a great deal worse than I did. In fact, I did not expect him to finish, as those sprints were certainly tiring. He's certainly game, though."

Said Reynolds: "Hartley beat me fairly and squarely, but I feel I can beat him in a long walk, say 150 miles on the road. He can't sprint like that on the mud. However, think I did pretty well for a man 57 years of age."

HARTLEY'S SPRINT.

The Toronto News remarks:

To his sprinting abilities can Hartley credit his victory. Most of his gains were made while Reynolds was taking refreshments at different stages of the race. As Jimmy slackened up on these occasions Hartley sprinted and gained a big lead, which Reynolds was unable to overtake. Reynolds was unable to get away from the Peterborough man when the latter stopped for his nourishment, as Hartley, with a fast sprint, was always able to make up lost ground.

As the crowd increased in size in the evening, and encouragement came from all sides, the two freakoned up and livened the proceedings with several sprints, which were all to Hartley's credit.

As the evening wore on, and the result became an assured fact, the crowd threw all kinds of encouragement at Reynolds, in admiration of the old man's pluck, and as the clock struck 11 the spectators swarmed onto the floor, raising Reynolds shoulder high, and carrying him to the dressing-room.

Mr. Tom Eck, in the capacity of judge, handled the race in fine style, having but little trouble with the style used by the two walkers. The crowd was fairly large and very enthusiastic, with Reynolds a popular favorite. The old man took his defeat in a very sportsmanlike manner, which was shown by several small acts throughout the evening.

After the race Reynolds' manager challenged Hartley, on behalf of a Port Hope unknown, to a walk from Port Hope to Toronto and back, for $500 a side. This will likely be accepted by Hartley.

Voting on the question of the annexation of Notre Dame de Grace, is taking place in Westmount to-day.

The Champion Pedestrian Tells of the Big Race and Matters Incidental to it

The cheering and loud rejoicing incidental to Hartley's home-coming are over, but nevertheless, still the talk of the town and his great triumph over Reynolds is the chief topic of conversation, and will be for some time to come. He was seen this morning by the Review, and expressed himself as greatly delighted with the great welcome given him.

Referring to his race in Toronto, he said he was well treated by the Queen City people, and stated that any in the crowd who tried to discourage him were from Reynoldsville. He is loath to believe, however, that the jeering hoodlums along the rail at Mutual street rink, who resorted to such unsportsmanlike methods were representative of the respectable element of Port Hope.

He said that although he naturally felt a little tired on account of his strenuous struggle, he felt no ill effects of the walk. He was particularly fresh at the finish, considering the great physical strain under which he had been laboring, and the morning after the event was up between seven and eight o'clock.

CHALLENGES GALORE.

"Have you received many challenges?" he was asked.

"I am kept busy readingt hem," was his reply, and they come in from all directions. However, most of them are from pedestrians who have yet to establish a reputation, and I would have to have the energy of a steam locomotive if I were to meet half the men who want to arrange a match with me."

Among the good men who have challenged Hartley is Langford, the Oshawa walker. Another man by the name of Alberta desires to take him on in a "go-as-you please," contest. It is said that Alberta, whose age is said to be about the same as Peterborough's wonder, has completed with a great deal of distinction in many go-as-you-please events and in 1882 won a gold medal in Madison Square Gardens, New York. There are many other challengers of Hartley of greater of less importance.

WON'T RACE FOR GATE RECEIPTS

"I won't race again for gate receipts," said Hartley, "in any other match that I figure in there'll have to be a guarantee or a stake. I don't intend to take any more chances on making a small sum of money after weeks of careful preparation and a battle for the honors."

THE CONTEST WITH REYNOLDS.

Speaking of the big event that brought to him such abundant laurels, Hartley said he expected that Reynolds would have agreed to the walkers' share of the receipts being divided on at hirty and twenty per cent basis. However, the Port Hoper couldn't see it that way, and informed Mr Frank Elmore, sporting editor of the Mail and Empire, on the night prior to the race, that he had to get half, no matter who won. Of course, this didn't suit the local man any too well, but rather than spoil the contest he agreed to walk him on the conditions Reynolds suggested. As is generally known, the gate receipts were by no means stupendous, and Hartley is of the opinion that this may be attributed to the same mismanagement in the matter of the privileges given the ticket buyers. The prices of the tickets were pretty steep and no checks were given the spectators when they passed out. Hartley thinks that if checks good for re-admission had been given the ticket purchasers the gate would have been larger, for to use his own expression, "Nobody would want to stay in the rink for twelve hours."

The winner told of the contest in detail, and said he was not in danger at any stage. In the first ten minutes he had a lead of a lap and kept the lead till the finish. The judge, who has been a clever walker, paid a decided compliment to Hartley when he told him he walked a magnificent race, employing a legitimate heel and toe step all the way through.

For the most of the time he was in Toronto the "walking wonder" was a guest at the Woodbine Club house, and speaks in the highest terms of his treatment there. From Sunday afternoon until he departed for Peterborough, he stayed with his brother-in-law, Mr. Russell Cortes, No. 1, Harbord Avenue.

What the "World" Says of Hartley

The recent 12-hour walking match in the Mutual street rink between Hartley and Reynolds demonstrated two things, One, that Hartley is a finished walker, knowing all the fine points of the heel and toe game as he was able to put on a tremendous spurt with a perfectly fair walking trait. The other that Jimmy Reynolds, popular favorite that he is, cannot lay claim to knowing much about heel and toe walking. He is a fine old chap and the sympathy of nine out of every ten of the spectators was with him, but at the same time he is not in Hartley's class as a walker. In several of his attempts to keep up with Hartley's sprints this style of going was a long way from fair walking, and had the contest been more even Referee Tom Eck would certainly have made him "knuckle down tight."—Toronto World.

BASKETBALL

The basketball team of the Port Hope Y.M.C.A. will play the Arrow Basketball Club of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., in Peterborough, on the evening of Nov. 28th. The line-up for the local team is Rankin, centre; Thompson, Garnett, guards; Jewell, Davies, forwards; Record, spare.—Port Hope Guide.

A full turn out of the local first and second teams is called for tonight at 7 o'clock sharp. It is important that all players are on hand as the team to play Port Hope here on Thursday night next will be chosen after practice.

This will be the first game here this season and should draw a large crowd. There will be a preliminary game between the Tigers and the Harriers, also a gymnastic exhibition by Mr. Ed. Daly, an old Peterborough boy, who has gained a great reputation along this line in the West. There will be an admission fee of 25 cents.

Thirteen persons, seven of them children, perished in a fire in a New York tenement house early this morning. The fire is believed to be of incendiary origin.

FOUR DAY SALE Thursday to Monday

Ladies' Ready-to-Wears

No reason except a good one for this price lowering sale, and that is simply this; The Fall trade has, as usual, broken up lines in all classes of Women's Clothing, and at stock-taking time, which is drawing close, they will be cleared out a sacrifice, so we have decided not to take stock of any of the following lines at all, and give our patrons the chance of an early purchase at just as low prices as they could reasonably expect later in the season. Give them the goods when they need them most. The festive season is coming on, so why not indulge in a small outlay for a nice stylish Gown or Coat? A whole winter before you—better buy now than later on. All these Goods are strictly correct in style, but broken lines and special purchases. Early consideration will save you many a dollar. Remember THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY and MONDAY. First choice always the best. See the Examiner for further list of Specials.

Brotherhood of St. Andrew Held Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of St. Luke's church was held last night. The director, Mr. Arthur Kingdon, was in the chair. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt opened the meeting with devotional exercises. Mr. Kingdon gave his annual report, which showed many features of good work done during the year. After routine business the election of officers was proceeded with resulting as follows :—

Director.—Mr. Arthur Kingdon, re-elected.
Vice-Dir.—Mr. James Ball.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. H. Gerrish.

It was decided to hold the weekly meetings hereafter on Wednesday evenings after the week night service.

The A.Y.P.A. of St. Luke's church have postponed the reception to the congragation, which was to be held on Dec. 6, on account of the sickness of the president, Mr. H. C. M. Potter, who is seriously sick at Nicholls hospital. The postponement is made to have Mr. Potter present.

ST. ANDREW'S YOUNG MEN

Large Attendance, Regular Meeting Last Night

The Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's church had a most interesting and profitable time at their meeting last night. About thirty were in attendance and the programme consisted of short addresses by Mr. Jas. Bennett and Rev. Mr. Menzies, of the Point Aux Trembles school, and a vocal solo by Rev. J. G. Potter, Mr. Bennett and Mr. Menzies gave some good advice to young men and were listened to with much pleasure. The president of the Guild, Mr. Ernest Reid, occupied the chair.

The next meeting of the Guild will be held on Tuesday, December 17th.

Dream Reveals Crime and An Arrest Quickly Follows

Woman's Singular Vision Brings Terrible Murder to Light.

Oakland Engineer Arrested For Killing His Wife—Police Find Body Buried In Quicklime Beneath a Shed—Accused Man Tried to Poison the Dreamer—Told Many Different Stories.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 27.—The police of Oakland Monday unearthed a most diabolical crime and have taken into custody M. A. Wilkins, a stationery engineer, and will charge him with the murder of his wife, whose body was found buried in quicklime underneath a shed in the yard of the Wilkins' home in Elmhurst, a suburb of Oakland.

It was shown that Mrs. Wilkins had given birth to a child, and Wilkins stated that she had gone to the home of her parents in the east.

A friend of the dead woman, Mrs. J. M. Anderson of San Francisco, had been staying at the Wilkins' home during the past few days and now asserts that Wilkins had endeavored to induce her to leave her husband and go with him. Her suspicions became aroused and Monday night in a dream she saw the body of her former friend lying on the ground, with the arms crossed over the breast. She returned to San Francisco and informed her husband, and the two told the story to the Oakland police. The result was the finding of the body in a trench under an old carpet in the shed, lying as described by Mrs. Anderson.

Wilkins at first said his wife had committed suicide. Later he asserted she had died during childbirth and that he had buried the body to save expense.

Mrs. Anderson says that she was awakened from her singular dream by Wilkins, who was standing over her with a knife in his hand. When she asked what he meant, he replied that she had been talking wildly in her sleep. He put away the knife and asked her to take a drink of water. She sipped some of the water, but did not swallow it, suspecting that it had been poisoned. This proved to be the fact.

Says That Bribery is as Serious a Crime as Treason

Election Bribery, Crime Against People's Liberty Says Counsel.

Serious Offence and Must Be Stamped Out—Mr. Johnston Again Raises Question of Jurisdiction—Asks For Discharge of Defendants — Many Witnesses Yet to Be Called For the Defence.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—After lengthy arguments by the crown prosecutor and by E. F. B. Johnston for the defence, Judge Winchester yesterday decided that the trial of the London conspiracy case was still within his jurisdiction. The defence witnesses, including Alex. Smith of Ottawa, Tom Lewis of London, the four defendants and two-score deputies and other witnesses from London will therefore take the stand on Thursday, at 10.30, to deny the story of Pritchett, Collins and Sifton, and also that O'Gorman was the body and soul of the famous Liberal machine.

Before the court opened in the afternoon, Mr. Johnston said that he wished to refer to what appeared by way of public comment on the case. Certain evidence was given by McNabb in the witness-box, that he had heard George Taylor, M. P., had been spending money in Brockville. Mr. Johnston wanted to say that as far as the defence was concerned it was not the desire to implicate any gentleman or politician upon hearsay evidence. McNabb's evidence was the merest hearsay. As far as he knew, the defence was not concerned in any political aspect whatever, and he was quite sure that his honor could not be concerned in that way.

There was no reason to say that Mr. Taylor or any member of the Liberal party was guilty of bribery in the Brockville election. The statement was mere gossip of people who had not apparently anything better to do. The defence was big enough, he hoped, not to rely upon any method or manner of casting dirt at any political party.

The crown announced that the case was practically closed.

Mr. Johnston then moved for the discharge of the defendants on many grounds—grounds of clear law. He renewed his objections to the trial being held before his honor, and quoted many statutes to show that the jurisdiction really lay where the crime of conspiracy was committed. He argued that the alleged conspiracy between Pritchett and O'Gorman in Toronto did not include bribery, and to do things that were not done in London at all, seven or eight years afterwards. Nothing that was done in London had anything to do with a conspiracy in Toronto, and hence the counts are bad, especially against at least three of the defendants.

There is not a single instance against Mulloy, Wiley and Reid doing the work that Pritchett and O'Gorman commenced back in 1898, of snipping, switching and spoiling ballots. They are not connected in any way with this conspiracy.

As far as O'Gorman is concerned, Mr. Johnston thought that it was the part of the crown to call fifty men from each constituency to identify O'Gorman in these bye-elections. The only evidence against O'Gorman was Pritchett's story, and he was an accomplice. It was a rule of practice that judges and juries acted upon, that it would not be safe to convict on accomplice's evidence which had not been corroborated.

Mr. Sifton could not connect anyone with any conspiracy in Toronto. The most he says was that he received money from Reid, which was no conspiracy, but unadulterated bribery.

There was no evidence to show that Wiley knew about money being paid, nor that he had paid any.

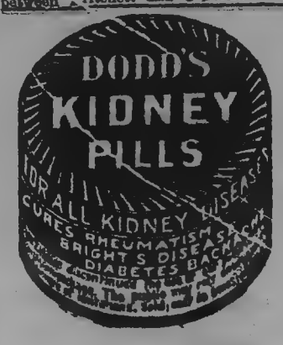
"In what way did Wiley or Mulloy conspire with O'Gorman in Toronto?" asked the lawyer. "They did nothing to corrupt the electorate by switching or spoiling ballots."

"I think it is monstrous," continued Mr. Johnston, "to believe the evidence of a self-confessed perjurer. His evidence should not be accepted in any court in this country."

After arguing that the court had perfect jurisdiction over the case, Mr. Staunton charged the four defendants with conspiracy by a general scheme to defeat the choice of the people of this country to name their representative to Parliament.

"I heartily agree with my learned friend that the crime with which these men were charged is one of the most serious," he said. "It is a crime against the liberty of the people of this country, in fact, ranks with high treason. It tends to make a Parliament of felons and not a Parliament of the people chosen in the legitimate way.

"My learned friend refers to Pritchett. What can we think of men who will induce their fellow-citizens to commit crimes so far reaching, not only to pervert an elector, but to make a man a political prostitute. This crime opens up a wide range and it is high time this sort of thing was stamped out."



Tick Kills Partridge.

Albany, Nov. 27.—Commissioner J. S. Whipple of the state forest, fish and game department, announced yesterday that an effort is to be made at the opening session of the Legislature to secure legislation to bring about a close season for partridge for at least two years.

The state has practically been depopulated of partidges as a result of an epidemic known as "tick," which has been prevalent in this state, New Jersey and Canada. At a meeting of the game protectors of the state and the New York State Fish and Game League, to be held in Syracuse, the proposition for a close season is to be presented for the endorsement of those organizations.

LURLINE WRECK ENQUIRY.

Captain Says He Thought Buoy Marked Channel Not Cribwork.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Wreck Commissioner Spain of the Dominion Department of Marine and Fisheries, assisted by Captains Wiggins of Sarnia, and Crangle of Toronto, as assessors, began an enquiry at the Parliament Buildings yesterday into the circumstances attending the wreck of the Ontario Government fishery cruiser Lurline, which ran on a submerged crib in Goderich harbor on Oct. 26, and sank.

The chief witness was Capt. J. B. Forest, who was in charge of the Lurline when the disaster occurred. He testified that 20 years had elapsed since he had previously entered Goderich harbor. He was given the command of the Lurline in October, and arrived off Goderich about 5.30 in the afternoon of the 26th. It was quite light but he ran on a submerged cribwork that had been constructed by the Dominion Government, and abandoned three years ago. He had noticed a red gas buoy and two stakes which he thought marked a dredged channel, and laid his course accordingly. The marks, however, were for the cribwork, and was a total wreck, causing loss of $10,000. He had not seen notice to mariners with reference to it issued by the Dominion Government, although he always asked for these notices at the custom house.

Mate William Gigley and Engineer James Macdonald gave similar testimony. While W. A. Redway, naval architect at Polsons, and W. J. Pulling of Sandwich, by whom the boat was surveyed, said the Lurline was in good condition.

HON. G. P. GRAHAM HONORED.

Senator Dan Derbyshire Was In a Happy Mood.

Brockville, Nov. 27—Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, was in the home of his friends and fellow-citizens last evening, on the occasion of a complimentary banquet tendered him in recognition of being called to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet. The affair came at an opportune time to kill two birds with the one stone, for Hon. Dan Derbyshire, another distinguished citizen of Brockville, appointed to the Senate a few days ago, was conspicuous in the gathering and shared with Mr. Graham in having congratulations showered upon him from all sides. The big ex-M. P. was in a particularly happy mood, showing that he was immensely pleased over his new sit, and made one of his characteristic addresses during the evening.

Mr. Graham dealt with the transportation question, showing the vast expenditure that had been made in this young country in the construction of railways and canals, and the development of our waterways. He said he was not prepared to make any announcement as to policy, but was endeavoring to fully inform himself along certain lines, and when once he was fully convinced of what ought to be done, if it were reasonable, he believed his colleagues would listen to his suggestions with a sympathetic ear.

Three Bank Men Arrested.

New York, Nov. 27.—John G. Jenkins, Jr., until recently president of the Jenkins Trust Co. of Brooklyn; Frank Jenkins, deposed head of the Williamsburg Trust Co., and Fred Jenkins, formerly a director of the latter institution, were jointly indicted yesterday for forgery in the third degree.

The indicted men are brothers, and the charges against them grew out of loans made the brokerage firm of F. & G. Jenkins, Jr., & Co., by the Jenkins Trust Co. The transactions were disclosed during the examination of the Trust Co.'s books, made by the State Banking Department, after the institution had suspended. These revelations, with others, brought about the receivership, and later were laid before the King's County grand jury, which has concerned itself with banking irregularities in Brooklyn.

This jury, after indicting former President Howard Maxwell, who yesterday killed himself; former Cashier Arthur Campbell and Director William Gow, all of the Borough Bank, Monday turned its attention to the affairs of the Jenkins Trust Co.

The men indicted were arraigned, and after entering pleas of not guilty were released, each under a bond of $10,000.

Jailed Banker Suicides.

New York, Nov. 27.—Howard Maxwell, deposed president of the Borough Bank of Brooklyn, who was under indictment for grand larceny and forgery, and was, Monday night, released from jail on $30,000 bail, has committed suicide. He cut his throat and left wrist with a razor and penknife in the bathroom at his home in Brooklyn, and died last night at the Long Island College Hospital.

Maxwell, who was locked up last Thursday, had felt his humiliation keenly, and during his incarceration had appeared hopelessly despondent. He had, however, given his family no intimation, so far as known, that he contemplated making away with himself. His wife was prostrated by the tragedy, and is now under the care of physicians.

Saw Train First Time.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 27.—When James Silverwright, aged 76, arrived in Ashcroft last week to board a train for the eastern route to his old home in Scotland, he saw for the first time in his life a railway train, and also had his initial experience of being provided with light by electricity. It was after a residence of nearly fifty years in the interior that Mr. Silverwright bade good-bye.

Senor Resting Nicely.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 27.—Senor Bombalier, the acting Chancellor of the Cuban Legation, who attempted suicide Monday night, was resting comfortably at the homeopathic hospital yesterday. It was stated that he probably would be able to be out in a week or two.

Magistrate Alexander Bartlett, of Windsor, aged 85, fell down stairs and was badly bruised.

JOIN IN MAD PROJECT

Four Canadians Take Part in Ill-Advised Expedition.

Embarked on Tugboat—Attempt to Capture Brazilian Town — Party Numbered Only Nine—Met With Resistance From Police—One Killed, One Captured — Others Fled After Cutting Telegraphs.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 27.—A Brazilian, Sebastine De Magali, who recently published in some American newspapers a proclamation inviting subscriptions to aid an expedition in overthrowing one of the states of Brazil, landed Sunday at Bahia and later embarked on a tugboat with four Canadians and four Englishmen for the town of Ilheos, a seaport about 125 miles distant from Bahia.

Arriving there, the little band, which was well armed, attacked the town, when a detachment of police and a number of inhabitants offered resistance.

One of the attacking party was killed and another made prisoner. The rest of the party fled after having cut the telegraph communications.

PRUSSIAN DIET OPENS.

German Budget Has Increased by Over $25,000,000.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—The Prussian Diet opened yesterday in the White Hall of the palace. Prince Von Buelow, the Imperial Chancellor, in the Emperor's absence, read the speech from the throne, during which he declared that the growth of permanent expenditures had increased the budget by over $25,000,000.

The Chancellor said that a deficit is expected in the current year owing to the increased expenses in the railroad administration and that the Government would have to resort to a loan for extending the railroad system, the building of new roads, double-tracking of old lines and for the buying of additional rolling stock.

The speech foreshadows a bill authorizing the Government to acquire Polish estates by condemnation proceedings under the law of eminent domain. This measure, which was actively discussed some months ago, is expected to re-open the agitation over the Polish question in an acute form. The Government's project has been criticised by even the leading Conservative organs.

The speech from the throne expresses the Government's conviction that both Houses of the Diet will give active co-operation in the settling of this "grave national question."

GEN. DEWET IN CABINET.

Minister of Agriculture For Orange River Colony.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 27.—The first Ministry of the Orange River Colony under the new constitution has been formed.

All the members are Boers except one. Gen. Dewet is Minister of Agriculture.

A constitution was granted to the Transvaal last year. On Dec. 17 last announcement was made in Parliament in London that a Legislature and a full responsible Government would be conceded to the Orange Free State, now known as the Orange River Colony in the course of 1907. The preliminary steps have been in progress for some time and the autonomy of the colony is now virtually realized.

Strikers Holding Out.

St. John, N. B., Nov. 27.—Notwithstanding the fact that the C. P. R. is bringing hundreds of men here to work on the winter port ships, the Longshoremen's Association late last night refused absolutely to accept the offered rate of 30 cents an hour and to go to work.

"We'll never give in," said one of their officials after the meeting, and word to that effect just now has been sent to the steamship companies. "We've been getting 40 cents all summer and won't do a tap of work this winter for less." So far there has been no sign of trouble at Sand Point, although 800 strikers are loafing around there. Just what will happen when the C. P. R. men arrive is difficult to say.

Famine In Turkey.

New York, Nov. 27.—Famine prevails in Turkey, according to a cable despatch received by The Christian Herald from Secretary Peet, representative in Turkey of the American board of foreign missions, and made public yesterday.

The despatch comes from Philippopolis and reads: "Harvest generally light here and in neighboring countries. Advices show grain for winter and seed already exhausted in many places. Many people will die unless relief comes soon. (Signed) Peet."

Japan Buys Canadian Steamers.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has sold the steamers Tartar and Athenian to a Japanese navigation company. In future they will be used on the route between Calcutta and Yokohama. The price paid was $275,000. The increased service between the two ports named is thought to be due to Japan's desire to encourage the immigration of Hindus.

Lost at Sea.

St. Pierre, Miq., Nov. 27.—Fears are entertained for the safety of the French fishing vessel Angler, which left St. Pierre two months ago for France. Aboard the vessel were 75 men, bound home, and since leaving port nothing had been heard of her.

An Aged Burglar.

St. Thomas, Nov. 27.—At Springfield, Arthur McCallum, aged 70, of Welland was sentenced to six months in jail. He was caught burglarizing a farm-house.

The body of an unknown woman was found at No. 122 James street, Winnipeg, last night.

A Story of Absorbing Interest

The Rogue's March

By E. W. HORNUNG, author of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," "Stingaree," etc.

The turnkey was gone longer, but came back shaking his head.

"He says it is impossible. He has no friends, and you mention no name."

"That is true, but my client's name is the one thing my client will not give."

This did it. The ambassador returned, beckoning, and conducted the visitor to a narrow, dark cell, at the end of which glowered the prisoner on his bed. Two more turnkeys joined them at the door.

"Do you want to be alone with him?" said they.

"It is absolutely necessary."

"Very well. We wait outside."

And the three officials withdrew across the corridor and chatted a little, but kept an eye on the open door.

The visitor was hurled through the open door.

They saw the lawyer seat himself upon the chair at a gesture from the prisoner, who restrained him with another as he edged it nearer and nearer the bed. They heard the lawyer's whisper, low and rapid, and saw his dirty, gesticulating fingers, but not his face, only that of the prisoner, calm and cold. Suddenly it flared up, and next instant the visitor was hurled through the open door, and Thomas Erichsen stood with the empty chair poised a moment before dashing it after him with a yell of rage.

Two of the turnkeys rushed in and secured this caged tiger, while the third knelt over the Old Bailey lawyer, who lay moaning outside.

"It'll be a strait waistcoat for you, my beauty, after this."

"You've half killed him."

"Half killed him!" roared Tom. "Only let in another of them to insult and threaten me, and I'll kill him quite and deserve all I get!"

And he tore away from them and flung himself, unstrung and sobbing, upon the bed.

CHAPTER VIII.

MR. HARDING drove home in a dull fury and was met by Claire upon the steps. Her heart sank at his face. He passed her without a word. She followed him into his library and there besought him to tell her what had happened now.

"Oh, nothing! I wash my hands of a young demon, that's all."

"Tom Erichsen?"

"Yes."

"You have changed your mind?"

"I have."

And he told her how the prisoner had treated the attorney he had sent him that very afternoon, committing a brutal and unprovoked assault upon the very man who was there to save his life, if that had been possible. It was not. The villain would hang, and rightly too. But there was gratitude! There was a young tiger in human shape!

Claire kept her head, and gradually Mr. Harding cooled down. Then she asked questions and discovered that it was not the family lawyer who had been so grossly handled, but one whose name was new to her.

"Hattersley never touches criminal work," said her father; "besides, I should have been ashamed to ask him. No; I went to the very man for the job, and this is all the thanks I get!"

"Did he know it was you?"

"No; I sent word I would give any money, but not my name."

"That message was delivered?"

"It was."

"Something more must have been said!"

"Hardly a word. My man was proceeding to business when this maniac sprang upon him and flung him out of the cell."

Claire shook her head.

"I cannot think that's all that passed," said she.

"It was, though; you ask the warders. There were three of them outside the open door, and they've put him in a straight waistcoat for it, at any rate! So you see how he has made use of the chance I gave him. Don't ask me to give him another, that's all."

"No, no," said Claire sadly; "it was only too noble of you to give him one at all, and I shall never, never, never forget all this—your forgiveness—everything! Papa, dear, you may not have me with you very long; how can one go on living after such a thing? I loved him, and I long to die. But until I do I promise one thing—I may deceive others, but never again will I deceive or disobey my own dear father!"

She spoke with the sad fortitude of sheer despair, and she left Nicholas Harding in an icy exhalation, with one tingling spot where she had stooped and kissed his face.

Claire had hardly reached her room when there was a knock at the door, and in came Hannah with a neat, sealed packet.

"Oh, please, miss, Mr. Daintree said I was to give you this."

"Mr. Daintree!"

She had seen him during the day; then what could he have to say to her which would not bear plain verbal utterance? Claire opened the packet when the maid was gone and found a smaller packet and a letter inside. The letter ran:

Dear Miss Harding—Think what you will of me for slandering the dead. I can bear it better than to see you mourning one who was never worthy to touch the hem of your garment. The inclosed will give you a true insight into the character of the late Captain Blaydes, but I make a separate packet of it so that you may destroy it unread if you prefer not to know and to think me the liar.

You may remember telling me that Captain Blaydes had the room that I have now when he was here and I was not. That was the week before last. The weather has been so warm the fire has not been alight since my return, and today quite by chance I discovered torn up in the grate the fragments which I have put together and now inclose. I will not tell you the word that caught my eye and irresistibly impelled me to put the letter together and read it through, nor will I seek to defend an action that will no doubt condemn me in your eyes forever. It was dishonorable. I admit it. But I am a believer in instinct. My instinct always told me that that man was a bad man, and my instinct told me then that I was within reach of proving its own unerring truth and the measure of a villain's villainy. I have done both, as you will soon see if you can nerve yourself to know the truth. If not, condemn me with a glance or with words as bitter as you please, and I leave this house tonight and forever. I shall never regret what I have done. You mourn a traitor, and I had rather forfeit your respect—nay, and my own honor to boot—than let one so divine waste another sigh on one so devilish!

But if you forgive me, oh, let me hear it from your own sweet lips, and I will move heaven and earth to atone for what present misery this may inflict! One day you will thank me. Meanwhile, if you do not spurn, command me, and your lightest word shall be my law. If only I could do something for you! My one remaining chance of happiness is in serving her I may not love. Humbly and sincerely always,

JAMES E. W. DAINTREE.

Claire arrived at the last paragraph with a mind made up. She perceived with amazement the writer's theory regarding the wretched Blaydes and herself. It had never struck her that her every agitation might be thus misconstrued, and her first impulse was to set Daintree right upon the point. She would then return the incriminating inclosure unopened. That would be a sufficient rebuke for an action, as it were, so honestly dishonorable. And at these decisions her nimble mind had arrived before she came to the last paragraph.

This she read over more than once with a puckered forehead and a changeful eye as eagerness, reluctance, hesitation and decision, shame and pride whipped across her face like shadows and sunbeams on a gusty day. And suddenly she tore open the inclosure and felt as mean as Daintree from that moment, though she barely glanced at what she found.

It was an obviously genuine letter, addressed to Blaydes by some poor woman, but that was all Claire allowed herself to discover. A feeling of incredible meanness made her hot all over, and she turned the letter upside down to examine the method of reconstruction. With abominable ingenuity Daintree had pasted the scraps upon a sheet. A few were missing. Many were black from the coals. Claire shuddered and glanced at her own fireplace. It was laid and all ready for lighting. A moment later it was lit, and the dead man's letter was blazing in its midst. Then Claire breathed again and took another look at Daintree's warning before burning it too.

"An interesting revelation of character," said she when this was done. "I shall never think the same of him again, or of myself either. But what does that matter since I can never think the same of Tom? Nothing matters except saving his life. And here is a man who says he'll do anything for me. Will he? We shall see."

She had a word with Daintree before dinner. "Forgive you? I thank you with all my heart," said she. And great was the change in her this evening. It was no time for gayety, but Claire was animated. Her eyes sparkled. She conversed freely on the topic of the hour, and when Mr. Harding was moved after all to give Daintree a judicious version of his attempt to provide fair play for a dastardly constituent, with the result, the girl took her father's breath away by looking hard at their guest and declaring that she would finance the defense herself if she had the money.

"What on earth did you mean by saying that?" asked Mr. Harding afterward. "Have you forgotten your word of honor that nobody should ever suspect what had existed between you and Erichsen?"

This was when the girl had said good night. Mr. Harding followed her upstairs. It was his first chance of speaking to her, for Claire and Daintree had been together in the garden all the evening.

"No, papa," she replied. "I have forgotten nothing that I said to you. Mr. Daintree, at any rate, suspects nothing at all."

"You said enough to make him."

"I don't think I did."

"Not when you said you'd pay for a defense if you had the money? Are you aware that he thinks you were in love with the murdered man?"

"He thinks I was, but that something has since caused a complete revulsion of feeling, as to which I may as well explain everything." And she told the incident of the letters without hiding a thing. "So he thinks it quite natural that I should fly to the other extreme and want no human creature to hang for one so base. You see," said Claire shrewdly, "he is a man of extremes himself."

"Then, instead of undeceiving him, you have literally fooled him to the top of his bent?"

Claire blushed hotly. "I cannot help that. I may make up for it some day. Any woman would do the same."

Mr. Harding was slow to understand.

"That he should never know what I know," said he, "is right enough. But why carry the thing so far? Why pretend this revulsion?"

Claire hung her head.

"Come, come!" he cried. "You promised to hide nothing more from me. You are hiding your chief motive. What is it?"

"I would rather not say."

And I insist on knowing."

"Very well, then. It is to give Tom Erichsen another chance."

Harding turned livid.

"That young"—

"Oh, don't be angry! You know you thought of it yourself. And I loved him. Could I leave a stone unturned?"

"But what can Daintree do?"

"What you thought of doing yourself."

"He has never consented?"

"Eagerly. He is going to have a solicitor at Marylebone tomorrow morning."

Mr. Harding glared at the girl, who flung back her ringlets and met his look unafraid and unabashed. Then she went to her room.

CHAPTER IX.

ABOUT a quarter to 11 next morning, before the adjourned examination had been many minutes in progress, a smart, slight gentleman was seen to shoulder his way into the well of the Marylebone police office and touch the prosecuting barrister on the arm. The capable face, now a trifle flushed, was well known in that court, and at sight of it the learned counsel shrugged his shoulders and sat down. Thereupon the interloper bowed briskly to his worship, who had already recognized him with a sigh.

"Well, Mr. Bassett?"

"I must apologize to your worship for being late; but, in point of fact, I have just this minute been instructed for the defense."

"Do I understand that you have not yet seen the prisoner with reference to the charge I am now hearing against him?"

"There has been no opportunity, your worship. Up to 10 o'clock this morning I had received no communication upon the matter."

"Dear me, dear me! Then I suppose you want to confer with him here in court?"

"With your worship's leave"—

The magistrate bowed.

"They've been telling you about yesterday," said Tom nervously, through the rails. "The fellow took it for granted I was guilty—among other things. Do you?"

The smart solicitor shook his head and said they had no time to waste. What he wished to hear was the prisoner's version of his last interview with Blaydes from its origin to its end, and the prisoner would please be brief and speak in a whisper.

Tom was brevity itself. Indeed, he had his story almost suspiciously pat, for he had already made up his mind as to the one fact which he intended to suppress. This was the source of his information as to Blaydes' latest whereabouts. He owned to no such information at all. The meeting was a chance meeting; that was to be his solitary lie.

He told it, and it passed unchallenged, but when he came to the transaction of the watch the solicitor's eyebrows shot to such an involuntary height that the glib flow froze that instant.

"Go on; go on."

"You don't believe a word I say."

"Nonsense, my good fellow. I believe every word. Come, come, they're getting impatient. You gave him a receipt and then?"

Tom finished with a leaden heart and tongue. To his surprise, however, Mr. Bassett was all smiles when he had done. Then he put a few questions, and the lamer the answer the sprightlier the solicitor's nod. The latter, in fact, foresaw a defense about as weak as one could be, but a case even more sensational than he had supposed. And sensation happened to be this brisk practitioner's professional loadstar.

Proceedings were resumed at two minutes past 11, when the witness Adcock, recalled, identified a pair of dilapidated shoes and the mutilated elements of a beaver as having belonged to the accused. Bassett had no idea what point the prosecution designed to make, but at once he gave a taste of his quality. He pressed the witness and shook her as to the hat, but to the shoes she stood firm; she had cleaned them often enough, so she ought to know. Then she cleaned the lodgers' boots herself? Well, not all. And an adroit question or two revealed the fact that Erichsen had been her pet and "one it was a pleasure to do for," against whom she had appeared with profound reluctance. Indeed, she left the box and rejoined the husband who had brought her there in tears. And so the defense made a first meretricious point.

Nor was it the last. Jonathan Butterfield, unlike his relatives, had not been called at the previous examination; but he was now, and his feelings were worked upon in the same deft fashion. As, however, there was no jury to be simultaneously touched, all this was wasted dexterity, but it looked neat in the newspapers and, what was better, but unintentional, imposed upon poor Tom and gave him momentary heart.

Meanwhile the shoes and hat had done real damage, and this evidence was the more deleterious from being new to all. Guilty flight and ultimate capture had been fully dealt with on the previous occasion, but the equally incriminating interim was only now filled in by the officers who had chased and lost a desperate housebreaker in the small hours of Saturday, but only afterward connected him with the Hampstead murderer. The connection was established by the beaver hidden, but discovered, in the empty house and by the shoes left on either side of the nursery garden gate. Only two officers appeared; the third was in hospital, and one of the two had a bandaged head.

The medical evidence had been taken on the Monday morning, so had that of the crafty householder of Kew, yet his powdered head was again in court, and his humorous, sly smile looked as benevolent as ever, only broader and more subtly droll. Tom heard this public benefactor taking snuff in every pause.

The other new witness was one Richard Vale, who brought a whiff of cognac into the crowded court. His words ran into one another, but his evidence was all too clear. Witness described himself as a very old friend of the deceased. He swore that deceased had frequently told him he went in fear of the prisoner, who had repeatedly threatened him by letter, and to whom, in fact, the deceased owed a sum of money. The letters were now put in. They all related to a worthless check for £35, the sum in question, and without a blush witness explained about the check. The check book was an old one of his own. He remembered the deceased telling him he had made use of it in the manner alleged in the letters, but he could not himself describe the incident, as, to the best of his belief, he was intoxicated on that occasion. And the witness stood down, having supplied the motive of revenge to a case strong enough, in all conscience, as it was.

"I suppose you lost that check," he whispered.

"No; I gave it him back with the receipt."

Bassett turned abruptly and stated that the prisoner reserved his defense. A minute later he stood formally committed for trial at the next sessions of the central criminal court.

"I'll see you down below," said Bassett, nodding airily to trembling Tom, but the latter pulled himself together on his blessed release from the public gaze, and the subsequent interview in the bowels of the police office was businesslike on both sides.

"When are the sessions?" asked Tom.

"Five days more. Well, it's better than waiting. So you won't give me my benefactor's name?"

"I am pledged not to reveal it to a soul."

Tom was carried in the prison van to Newgate and consigned to chapel yard.

To be continued.

FOR THE DRESSMAKER.

To Prevent the Circular Skirt From Sagging.

In making the popular circular skirt having seams both back and front it is desirable to stitch a narrow strip of the material in with the seams.

This will prevent the stretching and sagging which so often make these skirts unsightly.

It is also very important to get the bottom edge of the skirt absolutely even, a much more difficult task than with the gored or plaited skirts.

A good, serviceable school dress can be made from one of the new tweeds, which may be had in a variety of checks and stripes.

Make the skirt with five or seven gored model, with flat stitched seams, the gores flaring perceptibly from the knees down.

These skirts are designed to be worn with the inevitable shirt waist, either of flannel or light woolen material.

BEAUTY HINTS.

Vocal culture will develop the chest and round out the throat. Learn to breathe deeply, taking breathing exercises whenever possible.

For a flabby skin nothing is better than to use a little alum water occasionally. A teaspoonful to a basin of water is a good proportion and will not hurt a delicate skin.

Hot milk heated to as high a temperature as it can be drunk, taken slowly, is a most refreshing stimulant in cases of cold or overfatigue. Its action is very quick and grateful.

Sunlight and air are of the greatest benefit to the hair. It is a good plan to let the hair hang down the back whenever possible so that it may get a good airing and a good sunning.

Pallor is usually due to poor circulation or anaemic condition of the blood. Exercise and tonics combined with nourishing food will bring the roses to the cheeks unless there is some constitutional trouble; then you need the advice of a physician.

A UNIQUE BLOUSE WAIST

A pretty separate waist is an absolute necessity to the modern woman, for social exactions carry many sartorial requirements with them. The waist illustrated, which is adapted for any dressy wear, is at once so novel and so picturesque that it cannot fail to appeal to the artistic sense of the tasteful dresser. It is made of dotted net over silk, chiffon being used for the pretty wrinkled sleeves, and the same material, tucked, for the shoulder pieces, which afford the extremely long shoulder that is so much admired. The waist is prettily slashed at the waist line, the slashed portions being extended in tab effect over the girdle. Altogether it is cut on unique lines, embodying the latest Parisian ideas with some Japanese effects; yet, while pretty and uncommon, it is not beyond the capabilities of the home dressmaker. It may be modeled in Louisine Silk, Crepe de Chine, Eolienne or any soft fabric, while net or all-over lace may be used for the sleeves. To make it in the medium size requires 4⅞ yards of material 22 inches wide.

6036—5 sizes, 32 to 40 inches bust measure.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

Leave your order and 10c at THE REVIEW OFFICE and pattern will be sent you by mail.

Start Campaign of Retrenchment

Bell Telephone Co. is Not Undertaking Any New Work

The Bell Telephone Company have commenced a very strenuous campaign of retrenchment. Last week they gave notice to all employees engaged on construction work in Canada that their services would be no longer required, which will throw out of employment fully 500 men. They have also given their local managers notice that no new business is to be solicited and no more Bulke sets be put in until further orders, and that retrenchment is to be the motto in every department.

WEDDING BELLS

MONAHAN—CRONAN

At St. Paul's cathedral this morning Rev. Father MacColl united in marriage two well known young people. The bride was Miss Nora Cronan, daughter of Mr. John Cronan, the well known lockmaster, who resides at 260 Concession street, and the groom was Mr. Wm. Monahan, of the Maple Leaf hotel staff. Miss Katie Cronan, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, while Mr. Gustave Smith supported the groom. A large number of friends witnessed the ceremony. After the nuptials the bridal party drove to the home of the bride, where a choice wedding breakfast was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Monahan left at noon to-day on a wedding trip to Brockville, where they will be the guests of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Monahan, for some time.

BOYLE—SHANAHAN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, when Miss Mary Shanahan, daughter of Mr. John Shanahan, 319 McDonnel street, was united in marriage to Mr. Richard Boyle, of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McColl in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives. The bride was attired in a suit of navy blue with hat to match, while the bridesmaid, Miss Lillian Primeau, was gowned in a green suit with hat to match.

The groom was ably supported by Mr. Jas. Judd of this city. After a sumptuous wedding breakfast at the bride's residence the happy young couple drove to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Thos. Cavanagh, in Ennismore.

They will reside on McDonnel-st.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE WEDDED

At 7 o'clock last night at the George Street Methodist parsonage, the marriage took place of Mr. Herbert E. Long, of Auburn, to Miss Gladys Louise McGimsie, daughter of Mrs. Louise McGimsie, Water street. Rev. E. A. Pearson, pastor of the George Street Methodist church, officiated. The wedding was a very quiet one, and both parties were unattended.

The bride received many handsome presents, showing the high regard cherished toward her by her numerous friends.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Long are well known and popular. They will take up their residence in Auburn.

Lilacs Blooming in November

That the present weather has been exceptionally mild is shown by the fact that at the residence of Mr. John Carnegie, in Smith township, there are several lilac bushes in bloom. This is the second time that they have blossomed this year.

Power Offer Made to Lake Front Towns is Not a Bona-Fide One

Mr. Culverwell Says the Proposition of Opposition Company is Far From Genuine and Made Simply With View to Injure the Northumberland-Durham Power Co.

The following statement is handed to the Review for publication by Managing Director J. A. Culverwell, of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., Ltd., lessees and owners of parts of Healey Rapids:—

The Northumberland Paper and Electric Company, of Campbellford, has made an offer to the Hydro-Electric Commission (as published in the Toronto newspapers) to supply Belleville, Deseronto and Kingston with power, the prices, not including local wiring or local distribution charges. Mr. Culverwell states that the bona-fides of the offer are not substantial and cannot be made so, as that company only owns about a quarter of Ranney Rapids at Campbellford, the upper similar portion of the rapids and lands, which control the development of the whole, being owned by, himself and associates.

It is an absolute fact that only some one thousand horse power is available for transmission by the said company, which is controlled by Cecil B. Smith, engineer, of Toronto, and of recent Winnipeg Council celebrity, and retired member of Hydro-Electric Commission; J. G. Kerry, who is a Dominion Government Commissioner of Quebec Bridge disaster, and A. A. Mulholland, recently defeated Liberal candidate of East Northumberland. Associated with them in their canal survey and water power manipulations are a Lakefield cement contractor, and also a retired canal engineer.

Mr. Culverwell states that this so-called "power offer" is evidently made for the purpose of further malicious damage to organization of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., Ltd., a company endorsed officially by eighteen municipal councils, the directors being composed of the leading manufacturers and business men of the south Midland district.

Recently the Smith-Kerry Company endeavored, with the help of an assistant canal engineer at Campbellford, to induce the ratepayers there to pass into their control the "Middle Falls" power (controlled and now being developed by the municipality for specific use there), but Mr. Culverwell exposed the deal and the ratepayers endorsed his efforts.

These same people have been blockading the Northumberland-Durham Power Company's efforts for two years to secure a lease from the Dominion Government for their intervening portion of Healey Rapids, the lower, large portion of which is held by lease from the Ontario Government by the company, which also owns portions of the upper rapids and patent for the lands required for development works, the power rates being regulated by the Ontario Government.

Mr. A. A. Mulholland blamed Hon. George Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, for his recent defeat (because of his statesmanlike utterance at Campbellford before the election, that the canal would be completed whether Mr. Mulholland was elected or not), but the general feeling is that Mr. Mulholland's connection with the Smith-Kerry Company's canal water power manipulations caused his heavy defeat at Campbellford and Seymour township polls.

Mr. Culverwell states that he is sorry to find it essential to make these statements, but in view of the fact that his company (which is now developing Healey Rapids), has been municipally advised to stop work until they find out whether they can secure the Dominion Government intervening portions; and the canal surveys having delayed his company for over two years, he thinks that the company's enemies are endeavoring to bring it to ruin by delay. In fact one opponent has been heard to say that they will attempt to starve out the company by obstruction.

However, notwithstanding the character of this opposition and the general financial stringency, Mr. Culverwell states that the company has secured 25 new local stockholders, and besides, New York capitalists have visited Healey Falls recently, and are satisfied with the proposition. They will return to Healey Falls next week.

Alymer St. Residence Entered In Broad Daylight Yesterday

Stange Character Carried off a Coat Containing Valuable Correspondence of Mr. R. J. Todd

There are evidently suspicious characters working in the city. Yesterday two Aylmer street residences were visited by a man who, although he was dressed very well, acted rather strangely. Having called at one house and procured a good meal he visited the one next door (which happened to be that of Mr. R. J. Todd, at 456 Aylmer street. The stranger was bolder there and opening the kitchen door, walked in carrying off a coat of Mr. Todd's, containing some valuable correspondence. It was shortly after eleven o'clock and Mr. Todd was engaged in some work upstairs. Mrs. Todd was carrying out her household duties when she noticed a man going around the house. She told her husband, who paid no attention to him thinking it was the baker or the milkman. When Mrs. Todd entered the kitchen a few minutes later, there was snow on the floor. It was quite avident someone had been in the house. Mr. Todd's coat, which had been hanging in the room was at once missed. The burglar's footsteps were traced around the house, but by this time he had made good his escape. A description has been furnished the police and they are on the culprits tracks.

Weston Finished His Long Walk at 12.25 O'clock To-day

Beats the Record Made in 1867 by Over 24 Hours

Accompanied Through Streets by Cheering Throngs

Special to J. R. Heintz & Co.

CHICAGO, 12.25 p.m.—WESTON JUST FINISHED HIS LONG JOURNEY AMID GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

A despatch received earlier in the day says:—

Chicago, Nov. 27.—Edward Payson Weston completed this morning the last lap of his cross country tramp from Portland, Maine. At five o'clock this morning he reached the Chicago Beach Hotel, six miles from the down town district, and, after a few hours' sleep, resumed his journey.

An escort of autos, mounted police and an immense crowd of pedestrians followed him into the city.

WESTON'S RECORD.

Weston left the post office, at Portland, Maine, Oct. 29th, last, bearing a letter to be delivered at the post office in Chicago to the postmaster or his representative. Weston's schedule called for his arrival there by Nov. 27, but he has consistently kept ahead of it. If he reaches the city this afternoon he will beat the record of 1867 by nearly 24 hours. Weston has met with a good deal of difficulty on the present trip because of muddy roads, he has steadily maintained his advantage over the demands of his schedule. The only advantage the pedestrian has in his present attempt in comparison with the walk when he was a young man, is that the roads on the average are much better now than they were then over the route traversed.

Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., left today for Ottawa, where he will attend the opening of Parliament tomorrow. He will on Friday move the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Dr. Goldsmith, sr., of Belleville, a former resident of Peterborough, has sold his residence and will remove from Belleville to Stirling.

Basketball Games To-night And Tomorrow Night at Y.M.C.A.

Two Matches This Evening in Senior Y.M.C.A. League —Por Hope and Peterboro' Meet Tomorrow Night

There will be a basketball festival in Peterborough tonight, and tomorrow night. The first games in the senior Y.M.C.A. Basketball League will be played tonight, when the Arrows and the Harriers, and Alerts and Tigers come together.

The first mentioned match will be played at 8 o'clock, followed at 9 by the second game. There will be no admission charges, and both matches should be fast and exciting.

The following are the lineups for the teams to play tonight.—

Arrows—Darling and Dobson, backs; Gillespie, centre; G. Miller and F. Cressman, forwards. Harriers—Richardson and R. Best, backs; McRae, centre; Campbell and E. Best, forwards.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S GAME.

To-morrow night Peterborough seniors and the senior basketball five from Port Hope play an exhibition game. The men from the Lake Ontario burg are said to play first-class ball and the locals are prepared for a hard contest. Mr. Ed. Daly will give a gymnastic specialty.

OBITUARY

THOMAS TAYLOR.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's hospital last night of Thos. Taylor, after an illness of some weeks, from tetanus. The deceased was 35 years of age, and was born in England. He had only been in this country a short while, and had been engaged as a farm hand near Millbrook.

The remains were sent to Belleville on the 2 o'clock train, where interment will take place.

MRS. PATRICK McAVELIA.

The death occurred at her late residence, 334 Dublin-st., last evening of Mrs. Patrick McAvelia, after a lengthy illness. The deceased was 75 years of age and was born in Ireland and came to this country when quite young. She had resided in this city for many years.

Her husband and one son, Thomas, of Stratford, are left to mourn her loss.

The funeral takes place to-morrow morning to St. Peter's church, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

MADE THREATS TO TAKE LIFE OF A WOMAN

Florence Reed Bound Over to Keep the Peace

For making threats to take the life of Mrs. Jas. Vickery who resides on Mark street, East City, a young lady by the name of Florence Reed, who also resides in rooms adjoining those of Mrs. Viskery, at 322 Mark street, was bound over to keep the peace at the police court this morning, on her own surety. It appears Mr. Vickery who is employed in the lumber camps asked Miss Reed to stop with his wife while he was away. She had rooms rented in the house but he offered to her, her board free of charge. The defendant who possesses more than ordinary share of temper, made violent threats to Mrs. Vickery and kept the house in a state of terror all the time. Mrs. Vickery ordered her to leave the place, but she replied that she would put her out first. Mr. Vickery was sent for and came home yesterday, and this morning Miss Reed was arrested. She appeared before His Worship and pleaded guilty. She promised to behave herself in the future.

Bible Society

The public meeting in the interest of the Bible Society, will be held in St. John's School House, tonight at 8 o'clock.

The Annual Meeting has done more than anything else to show the true Spirit of Christian Unity.

The societies platform is one upon which all christians can meet in one great cause.

The Rev. W. H. A. French, M.A. will be the speaker at the night meeting—He is impressive and fluent and well worth hearing.

Now Occupying the New Shelter

The Children's Aid Society are now occupying their new quarters on the Hilliard farm in the north end of the city. There is only one child in the shelter at the present time, but from present indications there will be several more within a few weeks. Great credit is due Mr. E. L. Goodwill, secretary, and the other officers of the society for the splendid arrangements they have made.

Otonabee Lodge Making Preparations—Grand Master Invited

Otonabee Lodge No. 13, I.O.O.F, will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its resuscitation early in December, the date not yet being definitely fixed. It is proposed to have all the charter members who are living in or near Peterborough present. They will be asked to put on the work of the first degree, and several of the past noble grands of the lodge will occupy the chairs. It is proposed to invite Grand Master R. H. Brett, of Essex, to the city, and also Mr. N. W. Boyle, M.P.P. of Cunnington, past grand master, as well as Mr. Daniel Derbyshire, grand warden. An efficient committee has all the arrangements in hand.

"Rainbow" Still Making Her Trips

The steamer Rainbow came up to this city last night from Rice Lake, with a scow load of over 200 hogs for the Geo. Matthews Co. They landed at the street railway wharf, and the swine were drove up the remainder of the way. The Rainbow has several more trips to make yet before the lake and river freezes up.

FULL DRESS SHOES

The social season is now upon us. man or woman who "goes out," will want Dress Shoes, and will want just the correct sort. They are here in great variety of handsome styles. Such choice Leathers as Patent Kid and Colt, Vici Kid, and Gun Metal, in laced or button styles are the favorites.

Messrs. Stanley Henderson and M. E. Knox returned last Friday from their annual hunting trip to North Hastings. Owing to the bad weather in the first part of the season they were not so successful as in past years in securing their supply of venison.

SCOTCH CONCERT.

One of the most interesting concerts of the season, and one that will especially appeal to the many Scotch folk in the city, is the one to be held at the Conservatory of Music Hall on Friday evening, celebrating the day of the patron saint of Scotland. The artists are Miss Mamie Strachan, soprano, Gavin Spence, tenor, and Miss Enid Newcomb, 'cellist. The concert is under the auspices of the Sons of Scotland. Admission 25 and 50 cents, and the plan of this hall is now open at the Conservatory of Music. Seats may be reserved by telephone.

The Detroit Free Press and the Morning News are raising their price from one to two cents, due to the increased cost of white paper.

AMUSEMENTS

"MRS. TEMPLE'S TELEGRAM."

"Mrs. Temple's Telegram," a dramatized laugh in three acts, which made such a decided hit during its long runs at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, Power's Theatre, Chicago, and at the Waldorf Theatre, London, England, will be presented here on Saturday night only, Nov. 30th. This noted comedy is the only survival of the 'Charley's Aunt,' "Jane," and "The Private Secretary" variety. It is as rollicking as a Hoyt farce, and is filled with clean, wholesome fun, generously supplied with a cause for hearty laughter, and yet not wanting that cleverness which appeals to the intelligence and taste of the audience. The story of "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," is that of a married man, who, having been caught high in the air in a Ferris wheel, the machinery of which has broken, is kept there all night. Returning home in the morning, he endeavors to tell his wife the truth about the matter, but she does not believe him, so he resorts to a lie instead. It is the apparently innocent subterfuge that involves husband, wife and friends in all sorts of complications, which keeps the audience in one continual roar of laughter, from the time the curtain rises to the final scene. The New York production will positively be presented here. Plan opens tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

THE BURGOMASTER.

W. P. Cullen has made a big revival of Pixley and Luder's famous musical comedy success, "The Burgomaster," and will present it at the Grand Monday, Dec. 2nd, with a large cast, headed by Gus Weinburg and Ruth White. These two sterling players are the originals in the roles of the genial old Peter Stuyvesant, burgomaster of New Amsterdam, and Willie, the gay youth who ends the governor around New York when he is re-incarnated. The company will number 60 people. The production is an especially handsome one. The costumes have been revised and are all new. Special attention has been paid by Mr. Cullen to the voices of the chorus, as well as to the beauty of the feminine portion. "The Burgomaster" was the first of the Pixley and Luder pieces to gain popularity, others being "The Prince of Pilsen," "King Dodo" and "The Grand Mogul." The music is of the singing and whistling variety, and it is said that more copies of "The Tale of the Kangaroo" and "I Love You" have been sold than of any other songs brought out in musical comedies. Miss White has written a new song, words and music, which she will introduce in the first act.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The A.Y.P.A. of St. John's church will hold a reception to the members of the Y.M.C.A. and their friends on next Monday evening, from 8 to 10 p.m. An entertainment and refreshments will be provided. It is expected there will be a large attendance as it will be one of the best social functions of the year.

It is expected other young people's societies will also hold receptions during the coming winter, to keep their work in touch with the work of the association.

The Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. meet Thursday night to discuss some very important questions.

REYNOLDS IS A GAME LOSER

Says Hartley is Good Walker and Deserved His Victory

The Port Hope Guide says—Mr. James Reynolds returned home from Toronto last evening, and is feeling first class after his long twelve-hour tramp against Hartley at the Mutual street rink. Jimmy says the undertaking was a threesome one, and he prefers a straight away walk on the road. His leg, which he bruised badly in his Port Hope-Toronto walk, bothered him all the time, and at 5 o'clock Saturday evening it was swoll en and very sore. It kept him back considerably, but he does not wish to offer any excuses. Hartley, he says, is a clever, game walker, a first class opponent, and deserved the victory.

Rugby Team Practiced at Y.M. C.A. Last Night

Will be in Fine Shape for Battle With Montreal on Saturday

About ten members of the Rugby team turned out for practice at the Y.M.C.A. last night. The workout lasted half an hour, and was a fast and beneficial one. The signals were rehearsed and a good snappy running and passing practice was held. The team is in first-class condition for the game with Montreal, and is prepared to give a strenuous reception to the inter-provincial champions. The proposition the locals are undertaking in tackling the Montreal team is a big one, and they fully realize the importance of the match and the great significance of a victory. In an uphill season Peterborough has overcome all obstacles, and if they succeed in trimming the vanquishers of the Hamilton Tigers their conquest will be a most notable one. It is when financial support is poor that a sporting organization has an opportunity to prove its calibre, and in view of this the local Rugby team has certainly achieved great distinction this season.

Har.ley and Jim Reynolds May Meet Here

Arrangements Under Way for Walking Match at Brock St. Rink on Friday Night

Arrangements are under way for a two hour walking match at the Brock street rink on Friday evening between David Hartley and Jimmy Reynolds. It is understood that the barber is willing to come here to meet his recent victor, and will endeavor to make a better showing than at Toronto. The match will be from eight to ten o'clock, and should prove a great attraction. It is also probable that there will be a one hour match between seven and eight o'clock as a curtain raiser to the big event, the contestants to be a Toronto and Peterborough man. A tug-of-war between the local barbers and painters may also be on the programme, and if it is put on should prove very interesting.

And What do You Think of That?

Crystal Staff Followed Hartley While the Big Audience Waited

Manager Edwards at the Crystal, had troubles of his own Monday night. The theatorium was crowded to the doors and people were even perched like swallows on the street railway wires, awaiting their turn at admittance. The three young ladies of the staff were so enamored of David Hartley that they followed him to Central Park while the electrician found more magnetism in the celebrated walker than in the electrical apparatus controlling the moving picture mechanism. And when the crowd was thickest Mr. Edwards was the only one on hand. As he refused to sell and take tickets, play the piano, sing the illustrated songs, act as operator and officiate as usher and manager all at the same time, the performances were delayed until the indifferent quartette strolled back leisurely after an absence of three-quarters of an hour.

WHY WAS HE IGNORED?

President of Y.M.C.A. Harriers Not In the Hartley Processies.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I was an interested spectator of the procession the other evening in honor of David Hartley, Peterborough's famous long distance walker. It was a fitting tribute to a man who has has worthily brought distinction to this city. I was pleased to see representatives of the various athletic organizations occupying prominent seats in the gaily decorated vehicles.

Now, sir, I would like to know why Mr. E. M. East, the worthy president of the Y.M.C.A. Harriers, was ignored. The Harriers are one of our liveliest and most progressive athletic bodies, and I am certain the popular president must feel keenly this slight, either intentionally or unintentional that has been handed out to him by the civic committee or those having the arrangement in hand, and I desire to enter my vigorous protest.

Yours, etc.,

"SKIDOO" NIGHT AT ROLLER RINK

Last Evening — Large Crowd Present — Will Close Saturday

A large crowd was in attendance at the roller rink last evening. It was 'skidoo' night and two special events were given, for which handsome prizes were awarded. In the lady's skating contest, Miss Irene Craig carried off the honors, and for gentlemen's contest, Mr. Walter Bellegham was the successful competitor. They were presented with gold watch fobs, amid much applause. The Judges were Messrs. M Lowry, W. Hagerman and Howard Robinson. The rink will close for the season on Saturday night. The band will be in attendance each evening and on Saturday afternoon. Next Wednesday a roller hockey team from this city will go to Lindsay to play a game there.

FOR SNAP SHOTS

Why not put all those snap shots you took this summer into a little book and use it as a Christmas gift for those of your friends who will be interested. We have a fine stock of mounting papers in brown, grey and white, that are the proper ones to use. The cover can be made of leather to match, or of a pretty embossed card. Call at the Review office and see the shades of paper used.

Profitable Meeting Held Last Evening

Astronomical Club Gathered at Residence of Mr. Collier

The meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, at the home of Mr. Herbert Collier, Weller street, last evening, proved to be one of the most enjoyable in the history of the society. Though the weather was quite inclement, a large and very enthusiastic number of the amateur astronomers assembled in the parlors.

Through the very skilful leadership of the president, many lively discussions took place, and dozens of questions covering a wide range of astronomy were answered in simple and lucid terms. The freedom of speech was remarkable, and led to the discovery and correction of a number of formerly wrong impressions of simple matters. This form of class study proved extremely beneficial to every person whether a new student or one more advanced in the study.

The night being cloudy, it was found impossible to use the new telescope of the society, and this pleasure awaits the next meeting.

The demonstration of how the earth and moon and other nearby planets revolve about the sun proved most attractive. By means of the planetarium, Dr. Marsh was able to show clearly, and all were able to see at a glance just how these heavenly orbs move. This unique mechanism seems more marvelous the better one understands how varied the motions of the planets are, and how accurately these are shown. To be told that the earth travels round the sun at the rate of 18 miles per second, with never a bump or a jar, and that the moon is so timed as to accompany it in all this long journey, does not seem comprehensible until actually seen in the Planetarium.

The line of procedure lately in the society has been to encourage personal study at home, and general discussion in the meetings, thus developing class work. This is being proven more interesting and much more beneficial. It is understood the society will soon enter upon the practical work of "star-gazing," as the layman expresses it.

An invitation was extended to the society last evening to meet on Friday, Dec. 13th, in the green drawing room of the Y.W.C.A.

Young Folks

THE RIVAL ARMIES.

An Amusing Slate and Pencil Game For Little Folks.

This game is great for the little folks. Take a slate—two of you youngsters—and divide it into six parts, just like those you see in the picture.

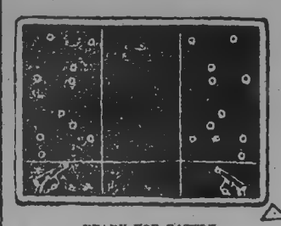
Draw a lot of O's in the two large end divisions to represent soldiers, and in each of the smaller end divisions draw a cannon.

Now we are going to have a lively battle!

Each of you take a sharply pointed pencil and take turns firing your guns!

The way to fire is this:

Placing your pencil on the spot where the mouth of your cannon is,



READY FOR BATTLE.

make a swift stroke with it across the slate straight into your enemy's army.

The line you make must be either straight or curved, but must not have angles in it.

All of the enemy's O's that the line passes through are killed. Dead soldiers!

Keep on taking turns until one or the other of you has killed every one of your enemy's soldiers.

Count the number of shots it took to win the battle.

Then clear the slate and have another battle, with the same number of soldiers.

You can fight as many battles as you please. When you are ready to quit for the day, then compare the sum total of shots fired by the victors, and the final victory will belong to the one who shot the fewest shots in all.

THE STICKING BUR.

An Interesting Example of Nature's Methods of Propagating Plants.

Burs are considered a great nuisance by people that walk through fields in autumn and come home with their clothing full of the sticking things, says the Chicago News.

But the plants they grow on find them of great service, for they are, after all, merely fruits covered with spines or prickles, which is an effectual means of distributing seeds. The man that has a hunting dog and keeps him in the yard knows all about it, for in the spring fine crops of Spanish needles and clot burs come up like magic where none was before. They grow from the burs that the dog brings home, sticking to his hair, from the hunting expeditions of the autumn.

Plants from the west spring up in a mysterious way around the woolen mills of New England, and nearly always these plants have bur fruits. They grow from burs taken from the fleece of sheep in cleaning and thrown out as waste. Some troublesome weeds have been introduced in this way.

Some burs, like Spanish needles, have only three or four slender spines, or awns, as they are called, at the top of the fruit. If we look at them through a magnifying glass we find them bearing sharp, downward pointing barbs, like those of a fishhook.

The spines are often hooked instead of being barbed. The clot bur, or cocklebur, is an example of this. Burdock has such hooked prickles on its fruits, and they stick so fast together that children make little baskets of them, handles and all.

Yes, and they are all a nuisance to men and animals, but the plants find them just the thing to distribute their seeds and thus propagate their kind. Nature never produces anything without furnishing it with a means of protection.

Odd Floral Stamps.

Japan and Newfoundland are the only countries that have put flowers upon their postage stamps. The Japanese use the chrysanthemum in the center of all their stamps, and from 1857 to 1866 on all Newfoundland stamps was a bouquet of thistle blossoms. The "thistle issue," as it was known, is very popular with collectors.

Japan is the only country that ever issued a wedding postage stamp, and that was on the marriage of the heir apparent, seven years ago. Belgium has a "Sunday" stamp, issued for those who are opposed to having mail delivered on Sunday and indicating to the carriers that such mail is to be held until Monday.

The Rocking Chair.

When I do not wish to stay
At home I go away,
And my trusty rocking chair
Knows the road to everywhere.
Up and down the parlor floor,
Traveling twenty times or more,
Always playing that I roam
A thousand miles away from home.
In my chair I travel far,
Playing 'tis a railway car.
When I'm very near the south
Then I whistle with my mouth,
And the brakeman at the door
Loudly calls out, "Baltimore!"
When our business there is done
Off we go to Washington.
Then I make believe that we
Are two thousand miles at sea
And pretend there is no school
All the way to Liverpool.
But when dreadful breezes blow
And on deck I cannot go
And I find the ocean rough,
Then I've traveled far enough.

Assurances That Japan Is Planning Limitation of Emigration.

Tokio, Nov. 27.—Rodolphe Lemieux, Canadian Postmaster-General and Minister of Labor, yesterday had a conference lasting three hours with Minister of Foreign Affairs Hayashi, at which the emigration problem was discussed.

It is understood that he received assurances that the Japanese Government is now engaged in planning the limitation of emigration to Canada.

The opinion is entertained here that after the return of Kieki Yiro Ishii, chief of the Bureau of Commerce of the Foreign Office, the Government will announce its decision to limit the emigration of all classes of Japanese to America, pending the adjustment of the existing differences.

A meeting of the various emigration companies, at which the situation will be discussed, has been called to convene at the Chamber of Commece on Tuesday, Dec. 3.

England Without a Cardinal.

Rome, Nov. 27.—The selection of new cardinals again has caused dissatisfaction among the English-speaking Catholics who are not represented in the new list. Especially is this the case with those of England who have been without a cardinal since the death of Cardinal Vaughan.

According to the statements made at the Vatican it was found impossible to give another cardinal to America, as all the Latin-American countries would also claim their right to one, already considering themselves badly treated because a cardinal had been granted to Brazil alone.

The French cardinals were named, the Pope wishing to reward the loyalty of the French clergy in the conflict between the French Government and the Vatican. Mons. Cabrieres, Bishop of Montpellier, who was preferred by the Pope, was not appointed, however, the Pope fearing that this might be considered a manifestation against French institutions.

Mayor of Galt Injured.

Galt, Nov. 27.—There has been one fatal case of diphtheria in the western part of the town. The Board of Health has taken measures to suppress the outbreak.

Mayor Thomson narrowly escaped being killed yesterday by a runaway horse, which collided with his buggy, smashing both vehicles and throwing him out violently.

Shot Noted Bandit.

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 24, via Willemstad, Curacoa, Nov. 27.—Gen. Rafael Mantilla, known in this country for several years past as a persistent insurgent and bandit, was ambushed and killed last Friday at Barquisimeto. Mantilla had fought against the Castro Government since it came into power.

Czar No Longer Autocrat.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 27.—The Douma last night decreed that the title of autocrat, which has been borne by the Emperors of Russia for centuries, is no longer tenable within the Russian state and is incompatible with the regime inaugurated by the manifesto issued by Emperor Nicholas on Oct. 30, 1905. At the close of a constitutional debate, the Russian Parliament by a vote of 112 to 248 rejected the word "autocrat" and then adopted a reply to the address from the throne unanimously amid scenes of intense excitement, prolonged cheering and the singing of the national anthem.

AN INDEPENDENT BAND

To the Editor of the Review

Dear Sir,—Seeing that there has been several attempts to organize a public band, and which I unfortunately know to have been failures, I would like to invite all those who are interested in band music to attend a meeting for the purpose of furthering a scheme by which a good brass and reed band could be formed and known as the 'Peterborough Permanent Orchestra.' The object of the above proposed band is to study and practice music, so as to be able to play a good programme, by which we could entertain the people, also to take private engagements. Will all interested come along to 496 Bolivar street, this evening at 8.15?

A SCAVENGING SYSTEM

A city may have beautiful streets, attractive buildings, fine shaded avenues, and picturesque parks, and yet lack many things.

Of primal importance is the matter of health and good sanitary conditions cannot be enjoyed without pure drinking water, a proper sewerage system and an efficient method and arrangement for collecting garbage. Peterborough's drinking water appears to be fair, the sewerage system is being rapidly extended in all parts of the city, but nothing has ever been done in carrying out an organized, systematic, scavenging or garbage collection. A good scavenging system is equally as essential and important as drainage or sewerage. The City Council will, at its next meeting discuss the scheme as considered some months ago, and carefully outlined at the time, of having a tri-weekly collection for fruit stores, groceries, manufacturies, and others, a semi-weekly visit to certain other places, and a weekly call to all houses. The said system to include the removal of ashes, rubbish, refuse garbage, etc.—in fact, everything except night soil. It was proposed to make the levy for the average house for a weekly visit fifteen cents a month. For stores or factories where there was to be a semi-weekly or tri-weekly call, the fee would be a few cents more. It was deemed advisable to have this fee collected by the Sanitary Inspector, but who was to pay for the service, the tenant or the landlord? This caused much opposition, while those in the outlying districts protested that they had no use for the system, being able to get rid of their own ashes or garbage for much less than fifteen cents a month. Others contended that the levy should be made general and placed on the tax bill, being collected the same as water rates, local improvement rates, etc. Thus a diversity of opinion arose, a contra petition was got up against the proposed bylaw, and it was not given its third reading, the city fathers deciding to shelve it for the time being and allow the ratepayers to vote on the matter at the next municipal election. If a plebiscite is taken in January—as it should be—and the result is favorable, the council of next year will be able to take the matter up early and arrange for the prompt inauguration of a garbage system. That such a thing is urgently required is self-evident—especially in the central portion of the city. If you do not think so take a walk through back yards, allwyways, on George, Water, Brock, Simcoe, Charlotte, Aylmer or Hunter street, and your olfactory organs will soon be convinced of the correctness of this contention. Visual and nasal evidence of the need is everywhere prevalent. The council should, therefore, get busy, and in the interest of health and cleanliness, see that a plebiscite is taken on the question. If a system of covering the entire city is carried out, the cost, if borne by general taxation, will on the present assessment not be more than 6-10 of a mill. This would mean that a house assessed at $500 would pay 30 cents a year for the service; one valued at $1,000—60 cents; $1,500—90 cents; $2,000—$1.20, etc. This estimate would cover every detail—waggons, drivers, etc., in connection with a complete regular and thorough service. The following questions should, therefore, be submitted to the people in January; Are you in favor of an efficient garbage system? If so, how do you favor the bearing of the cost of it, by general rate on the assessed value of each residence, store or factory, or by a special rate for same and monthly collections?

RE-DISTRIBUTION

At this forthcoming session of the Ontario Legislature, it is understood, that a redistribution bill will be introduced by Mr. Whitney, giving additional members to certain constituencies, where the population has greatly increased, so as to afford more equal and adequate representation.

It is stated that the City of Toronto will have its representation augmented from four to eight members, while, of the other hand, one or two small rural constituencies may be wiped out, or rather merged with larger ones. Some time ago, in a letter published in the Review, Mr. R. C. Strickland, of Lakefield, called attention to an important matter, and one which should certainly receive serious consideration when the redistribution measure is brought down. Lakefield now, occupies a rather anomalous position for electoral purposes, and the residents there scarcely know "where they are at," so to speak, when polling day comes. For federal purposes this village is in East Peterborough, and for local or provincial purposes it is in the West riding. Mr. Strickland pointed out and adduced many urgent reasons why the municipality should be taken from the West and placed in the East. The village would then be in that constituency for local and Dominion purposes as well. This is a reasonable proposition, and this matter should be taken up at Toronto and pressed to a conclusion—not for party advantage but as a question of fairness, right and justice, and, in order to preserve the electoral equilibrium of the ridings of East and West Peterborough. Previous to the time that the village of Ashburnham was annexed to the corporation and became part of Peterborough city, Ashburnham was in the East riding for the Dominion and Provincial elections. Immediately on being merged with the city it was transferred, of course, to the constituency of West Peterborough. Now the loss in the East riding should be made up by placing Lakefield village—already part of East Peterborough in a Federal campaign—in that constituency for Provincial requirements. Thus would the loss of Ashburnham be made up by the addition of Lakefield, both villages being about of equal population and containing, approximately speaking, the same number of voters. The equilibrium heretofore prevailing would be preserved, and the confusion resultant from having Lakefield in the West division for one election and in the East for another would be removed. It would greatly simplify conditions all around, and, as a matter of justice and equity, this procedure of transferring the northern village—to East Peterborough for local election arrangements—the same as it is in the Federal arena, should be carried out. This is in no sense a party move. There is no "hive" of followers—either Conservative or Liberal—to change the political complexion of either constituency. On this ground of convenience, absence of confusion, and to make up for the loss of Ashburnham in the East, the transfer should, by all means, and in all fairness, be effected as speedily as possible.

DESTINY OF JAPANESE WAS SUBJECT

Large Number Heard Interesting Address Given by Rev. Dr. Talling

The lecture on the "Destiny of Japan," by Rev. Dr. Talling, at St. Paul's church last evening, proved to be very interesting and was attended by a large number of people. It was given under the auspices of the Fraser Mission Band, who feel deeply grateful to Dr. Talling for his kindness in giving such an excellent address. Mr. G. M. Roger occupied the chair in his usually happy manner, and the affair was opened with a vocal solo by Miss Helen Davies, which was well received. The speaker of the evening was then introduced.

The lecturer, in beginning, undertook to establish three propositions, which in the course of his lecture he proved. The first one was that the Japanese in several respects are a peculiar people—a singular phenomenon among the nations. They are, said the speaker, an unmixed nation. They have an unbroken history, going back to the pre-historic ages. Japan has never been conquered. Her sudden awakening is unparalelled in history, and she is bound to rank among the first and best in a few years.

The dazzling splendor of her achievements in the arts of peace, no less than in war, has, said the reverend doctor, exceeded all that any other race ever accomplished. For the welfare of the state Japan laid aside the feudal system, thus representing the only country that ever did so. Here people were voluntarily given constitutional government. The Japanese are unique in that they deliberately forsake prejudices and traditions, adopting a scientific attitude to all truth.

The second proposition the lecturer referred to was that this fair country has a destiny of capital significance to all Oriental peoples. Rev. Dr. Talling traced the history of Japan and showed that they were the liberators, the reformers and the educators of the East. From this the speaker argued that Japan may possibly become the missionary of the East.

The third feature of the address was that the Western world will share in Japan's contribution to universal civilization. The lecturer believed that Japan would keenly compete in industry, commerce and arts. "If the Japs preserve a scientific attitude towards spiritual truth as she has done in other fields, then she will be the first to attempt the application of scientific methods in the sphere of religion," were the concluding remarks of an instructive discourse.

The pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Opening Meeting Was Successful

A Large Attendance at Young Ladies' Guild of George Street Church.

The recently organized Young Ladies' Guild of George street church held its first regular meeting last night, when a large attendance and an interesting and enjoyable programme made the evening one of much pleasure. The president, Mrs. James Kendry, was in the chair, and solos were given in splendid voice by Miss Reesor and Miss Irene Gray. A feature of the evening was the study of three well known hymns:—"Art Thou Weary?" "All Hail the Power" and "Nearer my God to Thee." These were sung by all present and essays on them were read by Miss Lillian Morrow, Miss May Elliott and Miss Fraser, respectively. The papers showed careful thought and preparation and were greatly appreciated.

The next meeting of the Guild will be held on December 10th.

RECIPE FOR CATARRH

Easily Eradicated By Using Simple Home-Made Mixture.

Here is a simple prescription which drives from the blood and system every vestige of catarrhal poison with remarkable promptness. To prepare the mixture; get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon and three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This is a harmless mixture, which has a peculiar action upon the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, assisting them to filter and strain from the blood and system the catarrhal poisons, which, if not eradicated, are absorbed by the mucous membrane, and an open sore or catarrh is the result.

This remarkably simple recipe has been the means of relieving thousands of men and women of foul and dangerous disease, and every sufferer here should give it a test, as it is not expensive nor unpleasant to the taste.

Prepare some and try it, anyway, as it is certain to do much good, if only to purify and sweeten the blood; though it may prove just what your system requires to overcome the catarrhal condition.

Drinking in Secret is Now in Vogue—Other News Notes

Lakefield, Nov. 26.—Mr. Geo. Douglas, son of Dr. Douglas, one of the old time residents of Young's Point, was in the village for two or three days last week on his way from England to Arizona. Mr. Douglas lately purchased the Douglas homestead from its present occupant, Mr. Hilton Jones, who intends returning to England in the spring.

The address given by Miss Strickland, Village missionary at Tara Taran in the Punjab, and Miss Jones, recording secretary of the Women's Auxiliary of the Toronto Diocese, proved a great treat to the large audience assembled to hear them in St. John's church on Friday last. The addresses were replete with interests and will no doubt serve to hearten the local workers in their missionary cause.

A very inspiriting feature of the gathering was the presence of large numbers of ladies belonging to the other denominations in the village, who showed by their presence their genuine sympathy with the toilers in far off fields of missionary endeavor.

The application of the local option act to Lakefield, whilst it does not seem to have hindered trade in any essential degree in the village, certainly seems to have caused a drought somewhere hereabouts. We have on very good authority, that no less than ninty-two kegs of lager beer were brought in from Peterborough last week. On the same authority we learn that in the license days forty-two kegs was the highest consignment ever landed here. A certain allowance for the increase must be made made on account of the growth of the village and a certain amount also on account of the love that our local Italians have for this beverage. Possibly when the mills shut down for the winter there will be less demand for the brewery waggon. All the same one of the contentions of the anti-optionists seems certainly to be borne out by the facts we have noted, viz. that although the bar-treating system has been put a stop to, secret drinking in immeasured quantities has taken its place.

Mr. Robert Cotton, a former resident of this village and now resident at Niagara Falls, was in the village on Saturday last visiting friends, friends.

Miss Strickland and Miss Jones left on Monday morning last for Peterborough to deliver addresses in aid of the missionary cause. Whilst here they were the guests of Miss Traill and Mrs. William Graham respectively.

Miss McDonald, of Winnipeg, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald, left on Monday morning for a visit to relatives in Toronto.

Rev. W. J. Creighton administered Holy Communion at Young's Point on Sunday last.

Mr. J. A. Armour, of Hastings, Ont., is spending a few days in the village visiting his brother, Mr. G.E. Armour.

Mr. W. H. Casement spent the day in Peterborough on Monday last with his friend, Mr. Robt. Cotton.

The deceased, who was only about 18 years old, had been working in a lumber camp at Cartier, near Sudbury. He is understood to have died from spinal meningitis. The funeral took place on Tuesday last, the remains being interred in the Lakefield cemetery.

We understand that Mr. Condin of Douro, intends shortly to take up his residence in Lakefield in the house lately purchased from Mr. Sidney Hunter.

Old residents of the village will regret to learn of the death at Niagara Falls on Saturday last of Mr. Wm. Eastland, brother of Mr. Thos. Eastland of Apsley.

Mr. E. R. Tate left on Tuesday morning for a trip to Lillicrap and Tate's lumber camp in Anstruther township.

Mr. Daubus and family, who have rented Mr. J. P. Strickland's place for the winter, enter into residence sometime this week.

Mr. Donald McLean of Belleville, was in the village on business on Tuesday last.

Mr. Stone, one of the oldest pioneers of Lakefield, who in his young days cleared most of the land on which the village now stands, is here visiting his grand-daughter, Mrs. John Sanderson. Mr. Stone, who for many years has lived near Burleigh, bears his weight of 87 years well.

The concert held on Monday evening last under the auspices of Beresford L.O.L., 122, was a pronounced success in every way. Mr. Eddie Piggott was the star attraction. All the items on the programme were exceptionally well rendered, however, and brought forth Lakefield talent in its best light.

ARRESTED FOR BIGAMY.

Other Serious Charges May Be Preferred Against Fashionable Man.

Sault Ste. Marie, Nov. 27.—Police Captain Henry Coulter arrested J. F. Laverne, or Lange, at the Fountain House, Michigan Soo, Monday night. He was turned over to Chief of Police Downey of the Canadian Soo, and will be sent to Ottawa to answer a charge of bigamy. Local officers were notified of the case by Chief of Police S. E. de la Rond, Ottawa, and the man was identified from a picture. It is also believed by the police that he was connected with a diamond robbery in New York City recently.

It is said Lange claimed he intended to purchase the Grand View Hotel, in the Canadian Soo, and also that he won the heart of a young lady of Algoma town and intended to marry her.

When taken to police headquarters he was attired in ultra-fashionable wearing apparel and appeared to be a man of prosperity. He promptly asserted his innocence and demanded a lawyer. The police ransacked his pockets and brought to light 45 cents, which, so far as they were able to learn, was all the money he had. Chief Swart told him he intended to notify the police of New York of his arrest and he then consented to go to the Canadian Soo.

A search of Lange's pockets revealed a large number of letters, addressed to him by women, most of them being marked Duluth, Calgary and Hancock.

Chief Swart received a telegram from the chief of police at Ottawa concerning the prisoner. The message said his name is Laverne. He requested that the prisoner be asked whether he would come to Canada without legal proceedings being instituted, or prefer to go to Ogdensburg, N. Y., or New York City. From this it is believed the charges in New York State, alleged to have been made against the man, are of a serious nature.

LIVES WERE FAILURES.

Pathetic Struggles of Husband and Wife End In Suicide.

New York, Nov. 27.—A special cable from London to The Times says:

Another story reflecting the bitter struggle for existence of a section of the literary and artistic world here came to light with the discovery in the Thames of the bodies of Alexander Good and his wife. Both were authors, and Mrs. Good was also a painter of rare talent.

The couple tied themselves together and jumped into the river, after losing hope in a battle against big odds.

Carefully encased in waterproof paper, in the garments of both were found letters addressed to the coroner. The couple disappeared from the cheap lodgings to which they had been reduced, on Nov. 2, leaving their last pennies for their landlady, and a letter to a friend, saying in part: "If you think of us in the future, do not do so badly. Remember that we shall be asleep together, and what is better than sleep, after the long day's work."

Mr. Good was the author of several books which were meritorious, but not popular.

His wife wrote under the name of Furse Walsh.

FOUGHT LIKE TIGERS.

Wife Tries In Vain to Save Her Husband From Suicide.

New York, Nov. 27.—Louis McElroy, an electrical engineer shot and instantly killed himself yesterday on the roof of his home in upper Eighth avenue after a desperate struggle with his wife, in which she attempted to prevent him taking his life. McElroy picked up a pistol and started from his flat to the roof with the avowed intention of killing himself. Mrs. McElroy caught him as he reached the roof and for several minutes the couple struggled about the roof in sight of passengers on passing elevated trains.

Finally McElroy broke away and fired two bullets into his head. He was despondent over being out of work.

Storm Swept Pacific Coast.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 27.—The big rainstorm which descended on Vancouver late Monday afternoon did not play any favorites along the Pacific coast. Practically every mile of coast from Alaska to California was swept by the storm, which in some localities carried with it rain, and in others snow.

Telegraph and telephone wires all over British Columbia, Washington and Oregon went down before the gale.

There is no communication between Vancouver and outside points save by telephone, and Seattle is also shut out from the east and south. The C.P.R. telegraph lines were carried down in the vicinity of North Bend, where seven inches of snow fell in a few hours.

Killed Shooting Cats.

Springfield, Nov. 27.—The many friends of Mrs. George Beatty of Red Deer, formerly Miss Bannerman of this place, were shocked to learn of the tragic death of her husband, who lost his life by the accidental discharge of a gun, with which he was shooting cats in his cellar. Mr. Beatty was well known to several of our villagers, all of whom speak in the highest terms of his genuine good nature and boundless hospitality.

Foot of Snow.

Jamestown, Ky., Nov. 27.—A heavy snowstorm prevailed here all day and last night the snow is from 10 to 12 inches deep. Railroad traffic and trolley lines are behind time and telegraph and telephone service is badly crippled.

Mica Factories Close Down.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—Owing to the scarcity of money the mica factories in the country around here have closed down entirely. In the city the mica factories have reduced their staffs, one of them having let out 50 girls.

An explosion in the Pere Marquette Railway pumphouse scalded C. Waddell and R. Sails.

Malt Beverages Have Real Food Value

Though mistaken zeal sometimes classes beer* with the intoxicants, common sense and medical knowledge will teach you its real worth as an item of daily diet.

For beer is four times as rich in food elements as potatoes, nearly as rich as fresh wheat bread, and its proteids (body-builders) reach the stomach in the form easiest digested.

The very small proportion of alcohol in Ontario beers helps the other food to digest quickly and easily.

Quit thinking of beer as an intoxicant—learn how valuable it is for people with weak stomachs or slack digestions.

*BEER is a term which covers lager, ales, porter, and stout; and, in the practice of Ontario brewers, implies beverages made under most hygienic conditions from Ontario barley (the best in the world) malt, hops, and pure water. 201

MORTGAGE HAS BEEN BURNED

New Presbyterian Church at Millbrook is Now Free From Debt

Millbrook Presbyterians gathered Monday night and burned the mortgage on their new church which is now entirely free from debt. It was a happy event and a large number were in attendance. The handsome new brick edifice has been paid for in a remarkably short time and hearty congratulations were tendered Rev. Mr. Johnston for his faithful work and splendid success. Mr. Johnson has been the Presbyterian minister at Millbrook for the past thirty years and has done much in promoting the Master's work. Among the clergymen present at Monday night's gathering were Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Hastings, clerk of the Presbytery of Peterborough, Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville, and Rev. Mr. Hooper of Port Perry. Short addresses were given by the above gentlemen and there was an enjoyable musical programme.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box sent to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the Box number is given first, then a pause, and then the corresponding numbers of the Box.

New Ottawa Train Was Badly Damaged

Engine and Tourist Car Were Wrecked at Smith's Falls

Smith's Falls, Nov. 26.—The new train between Toronto and Ottawa, which passes through Peterborough, met with an accident in the yards here early this morning, while being taken around a "Y" by a shunting engine. Two cars of a freight train with which it collided were wrecked, and the baggage and tourist cars of the express were damaged. Wm. Tyson, of Toronto, had a rib broken; three other trainment escaped injury.

RECEPTION TO JIMMY REYNOLDS

Barbers Preparing to Honor Him—Painters Expect to do Likewise for Hartley

The barbers of Peterborough are making arrangements to welcome Jimmy Reynolds when he comes here on Friday night, and if the present plans are executed, a couple of representatives from each barber shop will meet the Port Hope walker when he arrives on the G.T.R. and escort him to the Oriental. After he has dined there the knights of the razor will be a guard of honor for their athletic brother to the rink, and will occupy prominent places there. The local painters are also expected to do Hartley honors, and it is probable that a tug of war will be held between the barbers and painters, and this event should certainly prove a novel one. Of course, if race between Hartley and Reynolds doesn't materialize, the present intentions of the barbers and painters will not be carried out.

Masquerade Social Held Last Evening

By Girls' Guild of St. John's Church—A Pleasant Time Spent

A very unique and pleasant masquerade social was held last evening by the Girls' Guild of St. John's church, and passed off very successfully. A large number were present, all attired in some fancy or comic costume. Some were very pretty, and showed plenty of preparation. The evening was quite informal, and was spent with music and and in a social manner. Mr. Arthur Wilson gave a vocal solo, which was much enjoyed, and Miss Jessie Spence delighted those present with a dance. Fruit was partaken of, and the young people then dispersed, with the singing of the National Anthem.

REAL BRITISH CRUSOES

COMMUNITY OF ISLANDERS ON TRISTAN DA CUNHA.

Live Simple Life Entirely Isolated From the Rest of the World—Depend For News on Passing Ships—No Mail Service — Place Swarms With Rats—No Doctors, But Few Deaths.

A community which exactly fits Herbert Spencer's definition of a simple society—"forming a single working whole unsubjected to any other, and of which the parts co-operate with or without a regulating centre"—such is Tristan da Cunha, Britain's little island possession situated 1,500 miles southwest of the Cape of Good Hope. Even the official bluebook presupposes a lack of knowledge on the part of its readers as to the whereabouts and conditions of life on the island, and for once in a way that solemn publications allows itself to relax into humor.

Tristan da Cunha (it says) is generally supposed to be inhabited by a dusky British race, who live on fish, the spoils of the wrecks which strew its ironbound coasts, and the publications of the Religious Tract Society.

Up to a year or two back it has always been the custom for a man of war to visit the island once annually with mails and supplies, but this has now been discontinued, though it is only fair to state that the Government offered to give the inhabitants a free grant of land if they chose to leave their isolated island home. The people, however, of this right little, tight little island, who, by the way, eschew tobacco and "intoxicating liquors" in any shape or form, preferred to stay, and they now have to depend for news of the outside world on the chance of passing ships. One of the latest visits to the island was made by Mr. Casper Keytel at the instance of the Colonial Office, as it was feared that the inhabitants might be short of food, and I cannot do better than give some impressions of his visit to this most interesting spot, says a writer in The Bystander.

Their Working Motto.

"On the morning of Feb. 7, 1907, the Greyhound was towed out of Table Bay, and, after an uneventful voyage of exactly three weeks' duration, dropped sail a few miles off the lonely British possession in the South Atlantic. Our approach had been observed, and soon two boats from the island were alongside. The excitement of the occupants was most marked, and their wild delight on hearing that we carried mail from the Cape cannot adequately be described. The food supplies were most acceptable, but the letters from their kith and kin across the sea were the greatest gifts of the day.

"There are at the present time seventeen men, twenty-six women and thirty-eight children on the island, making a total of eighty-one souls, and they are a very happy community. The motto of each is, 'Consider my neighbor and my neighbor will consider me,' and the practical way in which they act up to it enables them to live together in peace and concord.

"Immediately behind the landing rises a cliff to the height of about twenty-five feet, leading to a plateau measuring six miles by a quarter of a mile, on which the settlement stands. There are fifteen houses, built of stone and thatched with tussock grass, on the site, of which three are not quite completed for habitation. Although primitive in design, they are not unpleasing to the eye, and are certainly comfortable.

Settlers Are Healthy.

"Every householder has an acre of land under cultivation about three miles from the settlement proper, on which potatoes only are grown, and each patch is walled in with stones. The planting is done in September and October, and the harvest gathered in February and March. On the island there are about 800 sheep, eighty tame and forty wild cattle, twenty pigs, about fifty geese and over one hundred fowls. Fish in abundance is obtainable, so the possibility of the little community being starved out, as the British Government apparently fears, is somewhat remote. Rats are to be found everywhere, and with their extermination, which, by reason of the nature of the land, is an almost impossible task, the growing of wheat would be possible, thereby adding to the material comforts of the settlers.

"The settlers are a very healthy lot and intermarriage has not yet resulted in physical deterioration. They have few ailments to contend with, and for these their simple home remedies suffice. The last death occurred in 1904, the cause being consumption.

Men Fearless Sailors.

"The mode of living is simplicity itself. The natives rise at six in the morning and retire to rest about eight in the evening. One day is just like another, yet each finds enough to do, and time does not hang heavily. The women folk attend to the household duties and assist in hauling in the boats, and the men occupy themselves looking over the cattle and sheep, working on the potato patches, collecting firewood and fishing. They put off to passing ships and exchange sheep, poultry, eggs, fish and milk for such articles as tea, coffee, sugar and articles of clothing. Each household contributes something to barter with, and each receives a share of the goods obtained. The men are fearless sailors, and put out to sea in almost any weather, provided a heavy swell is not running in to the landing cove. Seventeen vessels were personally communicated with during 1906, comprising one yacht, nine barks, three steamers two ships and two whalers, and in addition seventeen barks, one steamer and twenty ships were sighted.

Fond of Dancing.

"When the islanders give themselves over to amusement dancing is the chief attraction. The Tristan band is made up of one violin and two accordians, and, although their repertoire consists of selections of mature age, they are not to be despised on that account, and the musicians keep perfect time. I attended a few 'hops,' and was struck with the uniformly good dancing.

"Early in 1906 Rev. Mr. Barrow became a resident of the island. He is a Church of England clergyman of independent means, and the spirit of self-denial which prompted him to leave the old country to minister to the spiritual needs of the inhabitants of the Lonely Rock cannot be too highly praised. A fairly commodious building has been constructed as a church, and the services, held twice weekly, are bright and very well attended. Mr. Barrow's connection with the island has a trace of romance attaching to it. His mother when a girl was wrecked off Inaccessible Island, near by, and as a thank offering for the saving from the sea of the good woman who brought him into the world he dedicated a portion of his life to the service of the islanders and their descendants who effected the rescue."

A BEAUTY'S ROMANCE.

Sequel to Secret Marriage—Aristocrat's Wife Dying in Poverty.

A strange story of the romance of a beautiful woman's life and the sad plight she has fallen upon in her declining days—a story affecting a well-known and highly placed Notts county family—was brought to light at a recent meeting of the Newark Board of Guardians through an application for out-door relief for a woman who has been in the workhouse and infirmary at Newark, and whose relatives had fetched her out. They now applied for out-relief rather than that she should go into the "House." It appears that the woman, who is 46 years of age, is suffering from cancer. Some 25 years ago she was known for her beauty and attractive figure. She was at that time a barmaid. A young officer, son of one of the best known county families in Notts, fell in love with her and married her at a London Registry office. When the news leaked out there was a violent opposition on the part of his aristocratic relatives. They never acknowledged their new relation, and six months after marriage a divorce and $10,000 was obtained by the wife. With this money she took a fashionable hotel in the south of England, and there lost $7,500. Afterwards, according to her story, she traveled abroad with a gentleman for five years. Then she became addicted to drink, lost her physical attractions and sank. For some years she has been buffeted from pillar to post until she reached the haven of the Newark Infirmary. A pitiful appeal was made by her sister to the Guardians to permit her to spend the remainder of her life in her cottage home near Newark. The Guardians granted half a dollar per week out-relief. It was suggested that an appeal should made to the family whose name she bears, but this was not persevered with, although the chairman thought they would prefer to keep her off the rates rather than drag an honored name into the publicity of a Board room.

"A tenderfoot once visited Tin Can," said a westerner, "and watched with interest the poker play. From saloon to saloon he passed. Everything was wide open and very gay and lively.

"But as he looked on at a poker game that had no limit the tenderfoot suddenly frowned. He had seen the dealer slip himself four aces from the bottom of the pack.

"Gracious powers," whispered the tenderfoot, excitedly clutching the sleeve of the man next him, "did you notice that?"

"Notice what?" said the other.

"Why, that scoundrel in the red shirt just dealt himself four aces."

"The other looked at the tenderfoot calmly.

"'Well, wasn't it his deal?' he said."

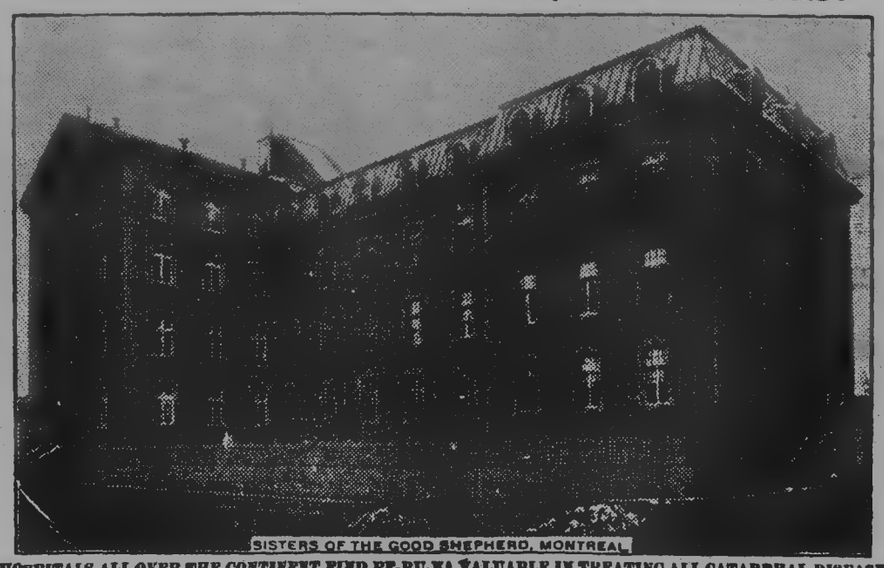
Hospital is Opened at Parry Sound

Rev. Mother Superior, Mother Clotilde, accompanied by five sisters of the order of St. Joseph, left to-day for Parry Sound where a new hospital is being opened to-day. The new institution is a handsome and commodious structure and will be conducted by the sisters of St. Joseph. Mother Benedict, who was one of the party from Peterborough, will be in charge of the hospital and the other four who accompanied her will be assistants. A trained nurse will be engaged and given direct supervision. Rev. Mother Superior Clotilde will return to Peterborough when the opening ceremony is over and everything well started.

The hospital has been built at the solicitation of the doctors of Parry Sound and will fill a long felt want in that town.

When washing greasy dishes a pinch of Sunlight Soap (or Lever's Dry Soap Powder) will remove the grease with the greatest ease.

PROMINENT HOSPITALS SAY
PE-RU-NA IS EFFICIENT
IN RELIEVING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES.



SISTERS OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD, MONTREAL

HOSPITALS ALL OVER THE CONTINENT FIND PE-RU-NA VALUABLE IN TREATING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES

CATARRH of the respiratory organs is a common ailment in Canada for at least two-thirds of the year.

This condition is no doubt caused by the long, severe winters experienced in this part of the continent.

Therefore, when Peruna was discovered by Canadian people to be a reliable remedy for these catarrhal diseases, it at once became a popular medicine, not only among individuals and in families, but in the great hospitals, where it was used as a preventative and relief in hundreds of cases.

These institutions do not hesitate to give their endorsement of the remedy which has been so helpful in the treatment of their poor and sick.

Among these institutions is that of the Sisters of Good Shepherd, who gave the following endorsement:

The Peruna Company,
Columbus, Ohio,

Having used Peruna for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd,
August 20, 1903.
Montreal.

After a continued use of the remedy, this institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:

Montreal, Nov. 7, 1903.

We found Peruna a relief in several cases.

We can say it is a good tonic and we are very thankful.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

When catarrh once fastens itself upon the system it becomes an obstinate disease to eradicate.

A systemic remedy—one that reaches every internal organ of the body—is an absolute necessity.

Peruna is just such a remedy. It searches out the cause of the disease, healing and strengthening the mucous membranes, and thus giving Nature an opportunity to perform her part of the restorative process.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peruna of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital St. John, who write, as follows:

"We are happy to tell you that your Peruna has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 68 years old, Renoui Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.

"A young girl, 15 years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peruna caused to disappear.

"As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peruna is magnificent as a tonic.

"Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.

"Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy."

Hospital St. John, of St. Johns, Province of Quebec.

A later letter received from the same institution reads as follows:

"Three weeks ago I wrote to tell you how satisfactory we found Peruna. We recommend it highly for colds, coughs, catarrh and neuralgia.

"I have used it myself as a tonic with the best results, taken as directed, half a teaspoonful every half hour."

Mrs. Etta Booker, Dundurn, Sask., N. W. T., Canada, writes:

"I suffered with pelvic catarrh until I wrote to Dr. Hartman, and after taking treatment as he advised, I can say I am now cured of this most trying affliction, for which I am truly thankful. I think Peruna the best medicine for catarrh. I never felt better in my life than I do at present."

Peruna not only promptly relieves coughs and colds in their first stages, but is equally prompt and efficient for catarrhal diseases in the chronic stage.

Of course, it is only reasonable to suppose that a great deal less medicine will be necessary to cure a slight attack of catarrh than would be required to relieve the ailment after it had been allowed to become chronic.

Meeting of the R.T.O.T. Last Night

Big Mass Meeting Will be Held in the Near Future

A regular meeting of the Dan Spence Council, R.T. of T., was held in the society hall, George street, last evening, Mr. J. L. Richmond, Select Councillor, presiding. The assessments were taken and insurance monies paid. The coming mass meeting was discussed and full particulars concerning it will be published in a later issue of this paper.

Collecting Money for Church Union

Two Slick Strangers Who Should be Given a Wide Berth

It is reported that two young men have been going around the city collecting money for the church union movement. They called on several residents of Cedar street and left cards to be filled in, in which the question was printed, "Are you in favor of church union?" They said that they would call next day for the cards. On coming around next day they are said to have collected several small sums on behalf of the church union movement.

These young men are not authorized to collect any money and should be given a wide berth; neither are they authorized to take a plebiscite of the people on the question.

PASSEPARTOUT PICTURES AND MOUNTING BOARD

The fad for passepartout pictures is again growing very general. Many who have used this means of decorating their rooms, find there is no other way of treating pictures, that is so economical and satisfactory. The Review has a new line of passepartout in all shades, mounting papers and pictures in the popular sepia tints. Call and see them and fix up a few pictures for your friends for Xmas. Nothing is more acceptable than a pretty picture.

WELL KNOWN CITIZEN DIED LAST EVENING

Mr. Jas. Dolan Passed Away at St. Joseph's Hospital—Funeral on Saturday

The news of the death of one of the best known residents of Peterborough in the person of Mr. James Dolan was heard throughout the city last night with the profoundest regret. He passed away at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's Hospital attended in his last hours by his three nieces and nephew. While his demise was not unexpected, his friends were hoping against the worst that he might rally out of his serious illness and recover.

He was widely known and was a man of sterling qualities. He was a friend to all and assisted in all charities. He was highly esteemed and his friendly and pleasant manner will be greatly missed.

The late Mr. Dolan was 65 years of age and was born in County Roscommon, Province of Connaught, Ireland. He came to this country forty years ago and resided in Montreal two years previous to coming to this city. On coming here he was employed in Doran & Gibbon's dry goods store. He afterwards bought out the dry goods store of the late Jas. Hatty, which he conducted for some years, later taking over the proprietorship of the City hotel, which he held for about four years. He kept a tobacco store until two years ago when he retired from active business life. He was a valued member of the C.M.B.A. and the Knights of Columbus. He was married about ten years ago to his late wife, who predeceased him last March. One brother, John, of Chicago, Ill., and four nephews and three neices are left to mourn his loss. The nephews are Robt. E. of New York city, Ed. K., of Chicago, Jas. and Hermon, of Columbus, Ohio. The nieces are Sister St. Ambrose of Milan, and Misses Sadie and Marguerite, at present in the city.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from the City hotel to St. Peter's cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

MEETING OF DIRECTORS OF THE BREWERY

Port Hope B. and M. Co. is Having a Big Output

A meeting of the Port Hope Brewing and Malting Company was held in the offices of the company, Port Hope yesterday. Messrs. J. M. Brooks and Alex. Elliott were the local directors in attendance. Owing to the great demand for the Port Hope brand in beer, it was decided to buy two carloads of bottles to meet the demand. The output from the brewery has been particularly large lately and the office staff and employees have been very busy looking after the fulfillment of the orders.

WHY YOU CAN'T SLEEP.

It's just like this. Somewhere in the brain cells or blood vessels that supply the brain with blood, there is SOMETHING WRONG. That wrong must be righted or you'll go to smash.

Your physically exhausted body needs building up, needs more nutritious blood, needs tone and vigor. Your only hope is FERROZONE, which completely overcomes sleeplessness.

FERROZONE

IS GOOD FOR THE SLEEPLESS.

Every FERROZONE Tablet contains more concentrated goodness than you'll get in quarts of liquid medicine. It benefits instantly.

FERROZONE fairly fills the blood with nourishment. Feeds it with iron and oxygen, invigorates as nothing else can.

The refreshing sleep of a little babe, the restfulness and comfort of childhood's days will come every night of your life by using FERROZONE. Avoid substitutes!

Ferrozone is sold by all dealers in 50c boxes or six for $2.50. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

No Proof of Insanity and It Looks Bad for Prisoner

Mrs. Bradley Seemed Rational After Shooting Brown.

Evidence Damaging to Prisoner Given by State Witnesses at Washington — Dramatic Scene in Idaho Hotel—Judge Rebukes Spectators For Bringing Little Girl to Hear the Trial.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Throughout yesterday the testimony offered in the trial of Mrs. Annie Bradley, charged with having shot and killed former Senator Brown of Utah, in this city last December, was most damaging to the defendant. There were many witnesses who had seen her shortly after the shooting and others who had attended her while she was in jail here, but none of them had at any time doubted her sanity. These witnesses had been called by the Government in rebuttal. They included practically every one who had come in contact with Mrs. Bradley after the shooting of Senator Brown.

A dramatic feature of the day was the description by Soren S. Christensen of Salt Lake of an encounter between Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. Brown at an hotel in Pocatello, Idaho, in the summer of 1906. On that occasion Mrs. Brown discovered Mrs. Bradley in the hotel with Senator Brown, and attacking her, attempted to choke her and asked to be allowed to kill her. Cries of Mrs. Bradley brought the Senator to her rescue, and then the entire party, including the witness, had an all-night discussion of the difficulty, during which Brown, turning fiercely upon his wife, denied that he was the father of her son, Max Brown, and at the same time admitted that he was the father of two of Mrs. Bradley's children.

An outburst of denunciation by Mrs. Brown of her husband and Mrs. Bradley followed, after which the Senator and the defendant went to another hotel, where they called for drinks.

Justice Stafford rebuked a couple of spectators, a man and a woman, who brought with them a girl about 11 years of age. When the justice saw the child he stopped the proceedings and ordered an attendant to escort the couple and child from the court room. The testimony yesterday, as on every day since the trial began, included many allusions unfit for the ear of a child.

Tribes Raid Villages and Violent Deeds Committed

Lawless Activity of Kurds Causes Concern at the Porte.

General Massacre is Feared—Foreign Powers Are Urging Prompt Measures—Famine Likely In Asia Minor —Movement In Favor of Autonomy Gains Ground—But Many Moslems Are Loyal.

Constantinople, Nov. 28.—The lawless activity of the Kurdish tribes in the Arkeno-Kurdish districts of Erzerum, Bitles, Van, Kharput and Diarbekir is causing lively concern at the Porte, particularly as the foreign embassies are urging that prompt measures be taken by the Government to prevent a possible massacre.

Under the protection of the notorious Ibrahim Pasha, who is known as the "Despot of Kurdistan," Kurdish horsemen are making raids without discrimination. Turkish villages suffering equally with Armenian homesteads on the plains around Diarbekir and Jezireh-Ibn-Omar. Sixteen villages have been pillaged and burned within the past month in these districts and eight villages in the Sert district have met with the same fate. Several of these villages were composed entirely of Moslems, and in most cases the lives of the inhabitants were spared, though they were deprived of all their possessions.

There is a scarcity of food and fodder everywhere. The missionaries are doing their best to mitigate the misery, but outside help is urgently needed if the danger of a severe famine is to be averted.

The movement in favor of autonomy is gaining ground in Asia Minor, as the popular disaffection against the Government is very strong. But at the same time there is a great degree of loyalty among the Moslems, and this constitutes a powerful support to the present regime. Mass meetings are being held at which the removal of Ibrahim Pasha is being demanded. At a meeting held at Van a denunciation of the "venal and corrupt government at Constantinople" and the suggestion that Asia Minor should declare its independence there has aroused great enthusiasm, and 25,000 Moslems and Christians in the audience are reported to have pledged their lives to the movement in favor of autonomy.

The Porte has ordered troops from Kharput and Aleppo against the refractory Kurds, and it will endeavor to induce Ibrahim Pasha, by friendly persuasion, to come into Aleppo. Some of Ibrahim's villages were shelled recently by Turkish troops and 60 Kurds were killed.

Alleged Sheep Thief Suicides.

Guysboro, N. S., Nov. 28.—Bernard Clinton, remanded to jail for trial on a charge of sheep stealing, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. Clinton could not obtain bail. He was a married man with a large family.

Discharged a Constable.

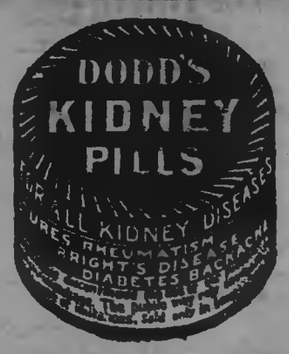
Berlin, Ont., Nov. 28.—Police Constable Winterhalt, 20 years on the force, has been discharged by the police commission for releasing William Castorf, charged with attempted housebreaking.

Smuggled Emigrants.

Liverpool, Nov. 28.—(C. A. P.)—Albert Korff and Samuel Davies, C.P.R. stewards, pleaded guilty to conniving in smuggling diseased emigrants into Canada. They were remanded for a week.

Prison Competition.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—The bakers are inveighing against Warden Platt of the penitentiary for selling bread to the guards at 2 cents per pound.



BLOW WAS TERRIFIC.

W. H. Miller Instantly Killed at Portage La Prairie.

Portage La Prairie, Man., Nov. 28.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday at the Assiniboine River, when W. H. Miller, a resident of the city, was killed. The victim of the accident was at work on the capstan being used to raise one of the scows out of the river and was engaged in winding the rope around the centre of the capstan. His team had just got nicely started and the full weight of the scow was on the cable, when the clevies on the doubletrees broke, and the long arm of the capstan, being suddenly released, swung back with terrible force, striking Miller across the right temple and crushing his skull.

Medical Reciprocity.

London, Nov. 28.—(C. A. P.)—In opening the 66th session of the General Medical Council, Dr. McAlister, president, said he expected before the executive committee met in February a further step would be taken in the direction of reciprocal recognition of medical qualifications granted in Britain and Canada.

He added that the recognition of colonial diplomas by Britain had the gratifying effect of improving conditions in medical education outside of the United Kingdom.

Got Drunk; Back to Prison.

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 28.—The police Tuesday night arrested a man known as Jack Daly for being drunk and disorderly and found that he is out of Central Prison on parole. Daly was convicted in Windsor of theft and sent to the Central Prison for two years, but was recently paroled. His spree will cost him his liberty for he will be sent back to complete his term.

MAY WIPE OUT TROOPS

Five More Tribes Join Moorish Insurgents.

Situation In Algeria Is Very Critical —French Force In Danger of Annihilation — Reconnoitering Party Attacked by Twenty Thousand Tribesmen and Forced to Retreat —Villages Bombarded.

Paris, Nov. 28.—A despatch to The Matin from Nemours, Algeria, says that five more tribes have joined the Benis Nassen tribesmen and that the situation is becoming critical. It says also that if reinforcements are not sent immediately the French force now there will be in danger of annihilation.

Lalla, Maghnia, Nov. 28.—The French column which was engaged in a serious fight with the tribesmen Monday returned on Tuesday, after bombarding several villages. A French reconnoitering party was attacked by twenty thousand tribesmen and forced to retreat, having eight men wounded. The hostilities are the result of resentment of the tribesmen against French occupation of Oudja.

LAST ACT GAPON DRAMA.

Murdered Priest's Money Is Handed Over to His Son.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 28.—The last act in the "Gapon drama" was played in this city yesterday. Father Gapon was the priest who led the Russian people to the Winter Palace on "Red Sunday," Jan. 22, 1905. He subsequently deserted the workmen he had led to become a spy for the Government, and later he was murdered for his treachery. The court ordered that the property of the murdered priest be turned over to his son Alexis. This property includes the balance of the fund paid Gapon by the Government for his pacificatory propaganda among the workmen returning to Russia.

After the manifesto of Oct. 30, 1905, Father Gapon changed sides and endeavored to free the workmen from the influence of revolutionary agitators and induced them to abandon political strikes. For this he was condemned and executed by the Revolutionists. After his death the police obtained possession of his money, which he had put away in a safety deposit vault.

Russian Combines Lobbying.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 28.—There has developed here a powerful lobby against the petition of the managers of the Russian volunteer fleet for special railroad tariffs to Libau in order to facilitate direct trade to New York. The opposition is led by the local oil combine. The principal articles it is desired to export are leather and raw materials, and it was proposed to import lubricating oils and typewriting machines.

Governor-General Dead.

Odessa, Nov. 28.—Gen. Novitsky, who last summer assumed the office of Governor-General and Prefect of Odessa, died suddenly in this city yesterday of paralysis of the heart.

His Views on Canada.

London, Nov. 28.—(C. A. P.)—John Lea, chairman of the Liverpool distress committee, in the course of a lengthy report on a recent visit to Canada, says in Quebec and Montreal there are no great openings for surplus labor from this country. In Toronto, with a more genial climate, there probably may be openings for the skilled European artisan. Mr. Lea advises emigrants to go west. Canada has no place for "kid glove" persons. The cost of food in Canada is much the same as "at home." The same may be said regarding clothing.

Debauching Western Indians.

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—The Department of Indian Affairs has instituted wholesale prosecutions in connection with the debauchery of Indians on the reservations at Kamsack, Keyes and Pelly, by unscrupulous whites, half-breeds and Indians. Occupants of a girls' dormitory in an Indian school were intoxicated and assaulted by a band of roughs and gambling and vice have been rampant. So far as learned there have been 23 convictions. One man was sentenced to jail for nine months and fined $900.

Ships For Spain.

Glasgow, Nov. 28.—It is probable that the first shipment of the new Spanish navy will be built on the Clyde, and it is persistently asserted here that contracts for two battleships, three cruisers and some smaller craft at a total cost of between $35,000,000 and $40,000,000 already have been signed with William Beardmore & Co., Limited.

No Supper, Murders Wife.

Jersey City, Nov. 28.—Matthew Olwell, a stevedore, 37 years of age, entered a saloon Tuesday night and announced to friends that he had killed his wife. He had returned home to find no supper awaiting him. Olwell has been known as a sober industrious fellow. There are four children.

New Liskeard Church Burned.

New Liskeard, Nov. 28.—On Sunday evening the Methodist Church on Elm avenue was entirely destroyed by fire. The contents of the building were gotten out. The fire apparently originated in the upper part of the building through the overheating of a stove pipe.

Divorced In North Dakota.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—In the Divorce Court at Langdon, North Dakota, an absolute divorce was recently granted, dissolving the marriage between Albert Prinyer and Eva Prinyer, formerly of Bath, Ont.

For Mayor of Kingston.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—Dr. Arthur B. Bess has consented to enter the mayoralty contest. Another candidate is Ald. R. T. Toye.

The body of an unknown woman was found at No. 122 James street, Winnipeg, last night.

ALL SICK WOMEN

SHOULD READ MISS SCHWALM'S LETTER

In All Parts of Canada Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Effected Similar Cures.

Many wonderful cures of female ills are continually coming to light which have been brought about by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and through the advice of Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., which is given to sick women absolutely free of charge.

The present Mrs. Pinkham has for twenty-five years made a study of the ills of her sex; she has consulted with and advised thousands of suffering women, who to-day owe not only their health but even life to her helpful advice.

Miss Annie E. Schwalm, of 326 Spadina Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a specific for female weakness with which I have been troubled for years. I also had irregular and painful periods which affected my general health until last spring. I was only a wreck of my former self. In my affliction I was advised to use your Compound, and am so glad that I did so. I found that in a few short months there was no trace of female weakness, my strength gradually returned, and in a very short time I considered myself a perfectly well woman. I appreciate my good health, and beg to assure you that I am most grateful to you for discovering such a wonderful remedy for suffering woman."

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women establish beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She asks nothing in return for her advice. It is absolutely free, and to thousands of women has proved to be more precious than gold.

HALIFAX ELECTION CASES.

Will Proceed to Trial, But Not Till After Session.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—In the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon the two appeals in the Halifax election case, Roche v. Hetherington, and Carney v. Hetherington, were called. The appeal was from an order made by the election judges, fixing the date for trial pursuant to a former judgment of the Supreme Court, directing that the trial should proceed, the judges having held that they were without jurisdiction.

The appellants, who were respondents in the election petitions, objected to the order, claiming that the petition had lapsed by non-prosecution immediately after the judgment of the Supreme Court given. Motion was made to quash the appeals on the ground that they were taken neither from the decision on the preliminary objections nor from the judgment or decision of the trial judges, who tried the petition. After hearing counsel, the court gave judgment quashing the appeal with costs.

This means that the election trials will be proceeded with on their merits at Halifax, but, as these cannot take place while the House is sitting, Messrs. Carney and Roche retain their seats during the present session.

When the cases were called the presiding judge, Justice Girouard, said: "I observe that these appeals have been placed at the foot of the Maritime Province list, and I understand from the registrar that was done by the consent of counsel. I desire to point out that in election cases, in which the whole public is interested, the convenience of counsel should not be considered and, speaking for the court and with the consent of the chief justice, I wish it to be understood that in future no election appeal will be placed anywhere except at the top of the whole list, unless otherwise specially ordered by the court or judge."

THREE PERISH IN FIRE.

Children Are Victims—Father Is Insane Over the Tragedy.

Winnipeg, Nov. 28.—There were three little victims of a fire about midnight, when the residence of William Danburg was burned.

The house was occupied by nine people, Mr. and Mrs. Danburg, Lena Danburg, aged 16; William, aged 13; Dodie, aged 11; Joseph, aged 9; Minnie, aged 7; Rachel, aged 3, and a hired man, Samuel Maetz.

When the fire first started the older people made a rush to get out to safety. Mrs. Danburg ran into the street, terror-stricken, and she was quickly followed by her eldest daughter, Lena, who seized the youngest child, Rachel, in her arms and carried her to safety.

Samuel Maetz endeavored to save the boy William and the girl Minnie, but on the way downstairs he was forced back into the flames.

The father was rendered insane by the tragedy.

Anti-German Feeling In Australia.

London, Nov. 28.—Sydney commercial community learns with astonishment that Germany saddles the agreement to arbitrate the outstanding claim relating to the Marshall Islands, with conditions respecting undefined German claims against Britain. This further delay is reviving the former anti-German feeling, and is likely considerably to harm German trade.

The Legislature at Melbourne is sitting 72 hours a week to complete the tariff before Christmas. A struggle is proceeding regarding the duties on machinery. Considerable reductions appear certain.

A Cage For Gold.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 28.—Since the big gold robberies on steamers plying on the Yukon River between Dawson and Fairbanks, many devices have been planned to safeguard the gold while it is being transported. The latest is a cage four feet long and the same in width and eight feet high, placed in the centre of the main passenger deck. It is believed that by placing the gold in plain view of all the passengers, no one will be bold enough to try to steal.

Fight on Mauretania.

New York, Nov. 28.—One hundred Italian coal shovelers who were engaged in loading the new Cunard liner Mauretania at her dock on the Hudson River yesterday, became involved in a riot in which a number of pistol shots were fired, and several of the rioters jumped into the river to escape the bullets. The quarrel is believed to have been between factions.

Tragedy Follows Failure.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 28.—Geo. C. Lyon of this city, president of the Caswell-Massey Co., druggists of New York City, which went into the hands of a receiver this month, died at his home here Tuesday night, from heart trouble following an attack of nervous prostration.

Weston Completes Great Walk.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Edward Payson Weston completed his 1,234-mile walk from Portland, Maine, at 12.15 yesterday. Weston broke by 1 day, 3 hours and 25 minutes a record made by him 40 years ago on a trip to this city over practically the same route.

Carried Over the Falls.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Cornelia B. Loveridge, 302 Hudson street, Buffalo, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by jumping into the river from Green Island.

She left a letter which is to be opened by the coroner.

Netted Sixteen Thousand.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—The recent society bazaar in aid of the tuberculosis hospital, held at the Drill Hall, under the title of the Streets of Paris, will realize $16,500.

Accept Wage Reduction.

Rossland, B. C., Nov. 28.—Rossland Miners' Union by referendum vote yesterday consented to reduce the wage scale to that which was in effect prior to July 1.

A Story of Absorbing Interest

The Rogue's March

By E. W. HORNUNG, author of "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," "Stingaree," etc.

CHAPTER X.

CLAIRE HARDING had now adventured upon a narrow ledge On the one hand she was bound to show a proper appreciation of Daintree's exertions, which she herself had inspired; on the other, to feign a purely impersonal or benevolent interest in the unhappy youth on whose behalf those exertions were being made. So all day long she must be ready with a smile as false as any other mummer's, even though she spent the night in prayer for Tom and for her own forgiveness. Yet praying did not bring her peace of mind. She could not convince herself that she was in the right; that even her great end justified means of downright hypocrisy and deceit. There were two ways of looking at her conduct and Claire with a breadth of view which was her bane, saw it both ways from the beginning. She was acting a lie to save a life. That was one side of the matter. She was screening the guilty at the expense of the innocent. That was the other side. And if Claire was in any respect singular among women it was in this inherent and not invariably convenient faculty of seeing the other side whether she would or no.

All her love could not blind her to the terrible strength of the case against Tom, and all her prayers could not unsay what Tom had said to her about the murdered man on the very night of the murder. "I'd hang for the hound and think the satisfaction cheap at the price!" Those had been his actual words. They were forever tolling, tolling in her ears, and, strong though the case was, would they not have strengthened it still more? And, good reason as all the world had to think him guilty, had not she, God help her, better reason than any living man or woman? But, oh, she could not and she never would believe it of him—not murder! And even with that cry in her heart she did believe it, but fought to deceive herself a little longer. Her first theory, however, that of self defense, was virtually shattered by his reported wholesale denials. Then what more was to be said for the desperate hero of a guilty flight, taken at last with the dead man's possessions upon his person?

Claire could not imagine, but a clever barrister might—nay, would—and she set her teeth and vowed that Tom should have the finest brain at the bar to defend him, guilty or not guilty, and though she perjured her soul for the price. But this was not necessary. It was only necessary to act the lie, and Claire scorned herself for the slight comfort that mean distinction gave her against her will. The honest lie was unnecessary because she was dealing with a man of extremes, who neglected many things, but did nothing by halves, and whom every passing breath left cold or burning. A breath from Claire could have but one effect, and Daintree was already white hot for the defense. He had caught fire at a word and from that moment made it the business of his life to rescue that of an obscure homicide. He could talk of nothing else. His passionate zeal chilled Claire with the thought of what it might turn to should he learn the truth.

Within twenty-four hours of the committal he came in brimful of news and self importance. Claire was discovered in the garden and informed who had been retained for the defense in a meaning voice which conveyed no special meaning to her. The name was a big one, but the girl was not a great reader of the newspaper, and she had never heard it before. She looked grateful, therefore, but not grateful enough for Daintree, whose greed for her admiration was such that in the next breath he must needs tell her with what figure the big man's brief had been marked. And then he beamed, for the girl stood thunderstruck at his words.

"Five hundred guineas!" she repeated slowly. "You are never going to find five—hundred—guineas!"

"And why not?" said he, with ready pique. "Do you think that that colossal sum is beyond my means?"

"For a man of whom you know nothing—who has no claim upon you? Yes, I do!"

"Pardon me!" replied Daintree in his most elaborate manner. "I know at least as much of the young man as does Miss Harding. His case has already excited her sympathy. He has therefore the very strongest claim upon mine."

"Oh, but you must not do it!" cried Claire impulsively. "It is too much for you to dream of doing. I am sorry I ever said a word about it. You are too noble, too generous, too good!"

He hung his head a moment and then exclaimed, with the extraordinary passion of the man, that there was nothing he would not do to win such words from her lips; that she had repaid him already a hundredfold.

"And, remember, it is all for you," he added suddenly, as though he had caught her candor. "Let there be no mistake about that between you and me. Whatever I may do is not done for yonder prisoner, but for you, and you alone."

"For me!" whispered Claire. And she could say no more, thinking her voice had already betrayed her.

"Yes; every bit for you."

"But how can that be? He is nothing to us either. We did not know the family. You heard of the quarrel? And the young man was very seldom there, never once in our house." So she still swerved instinctively at the lie direct and despised herself more than if she had told a dozen. The situation was intolerable to her. She was on the brink of a rash confession and such an appeal to Daintree's magnanimity as should move a stone, when he took the last word and left her time to think.

"Miss Harding," said he earnestly, "I care not a jot what you may think of this case on mature consideration. I know how it appealed to you the other night, before your great heart pulled you two ways, as it is doing now. But that's not the point. No; the point is that you asked something of me, and I mean you to know that what you ask of me that you shall receive if it is in the power of mortal man to give. If I do not rescue this young fellow from the rope, then it is not in the power of mortal man to do so. But I shall, never fear, and then you will perhaps see that your lightest whim is more to me than the commands of God or man. And that's all the reward I ask."

She knew his flowery speeches and what to allow for his habitual rhetoric. On this occasion, however, he rang only too true. Yet as she looked at him pensively his eyes fell, as they had sometimes fallen before. It was as though, with all his passion for her, there was a something sinister and dishonest underneath, and he felt it when he looked long enough in her eyes. Claire did not connect honesty with herself at present, nor did she view the question at all from this point, but she found herself speculating upon the origin of the quarrel between Daintree and his people, and she thought of the flowers that had come back to him from his mother's grave.

Later in the evening she worked out her own position, shuddered at the passing impulse to confess, which had long since passed, put Tom's life before her self respect and determined to act better from that hour. So the play went on before an audience of one who had been taken behind the scenes, but who now looked on with eyes that saw not, so absorbing were his own affairs. In very truth, however, there was an audience of two, and but little was lost upon the unseen onlooker.

Daintree meanwhile spent hours every day with Mr. Bassett, the solicitor, or in waiting for him at his office. In the evening he would return to Avenue Lodge with the latest news of the prisoner Erichsen.

One day he had been removed to the prison infirmary. Not that there was much the matter with him, but the surgeon was credited with a desire to reward Erichsen's humanity toward a fellow prisoner, who was said to have died in his arms.

But another fellow prisoner he had fought tooth and nail the night before, and Mr. Bassett had a shrewd suspicion that the real object of the removal was to isolate a desperate man.

However that might be, he was doing pretty well in the infirmary, was said to be depressed, but not unable to eat or sleep. Daintree reminded Claire that the prisoner was having all his meals sent in from a neighboring chop house and who it was that had ordered them. It was himself.

Erichsen was inundated with letters. Most were from religious strangers, who took his guilt for granted and indicated several only ways to that mercy in another world which was neither to be expected nor desired in this. But the one that had given him the greatest annoyance was thought to have come from a near relative, for it was very long, and he had torn it in many pieces and then retorted in three lines and given it to the surgeon to post.

Claire knew who the relative was. She had gone the length of calling at Avenue Lodge on her flight through town to the continent, and her chief lament was not that murder had been committed, presumably by Tom, but that her name had been disgraced, her trust abused, her money spent in riot and her life rendered unendurable in her native land. The lady was Tom's stepmother.

There was another letter which he seemed to expect every day and yet not to expect, and it never came, but they thought he must be in love. Claire considered it unlikely. How could a lover have done such a thing? And had he ever written to any girl? Daintree said he would inquire.

No friends had been to see him, "no relations; but a noble lord, the same who had incumbered the bench at the Marylebone office, brought a party of friends and received payment in kind for his insolent questions. The prisoner was reported to have asked him if there were no hospitals where his lordship could see the legs and arms cut off and listen to the screams; to have recommended bodily tortures as likely to provide better sport than a poor dull devil like himself, and suggested the nearest slaughter house if all else failed. His lordship had raised his cane and been cuttingly invited to lay it on, as he might not have such a chance every day; whereupon the party retreated, highly amused, all but their leader, who was said to have marched straight across the street to book a window for the execution.

When Claire heard this story, she showed her feelings in a rather perilous manner. "Well done!" she cried, and clapped her hands. "So they have not taken all the spirit out of him yet! Let us be thankful, Mr. Daintree," she added in an instant, "that it is at least a man of spirit whose cause you have espoused. Next to an innocent man, a spirited man has the best claim on one's sympathy. It would be dreadful if he were neither the one nor the other!"

"But you know that I believe him to be both."

"I have heard you say so. Yet you never go near him yourself."

Daintree admitted his repugnance to personal contact with the prisoner. "I certainly prefer to draw the line at that," said he, "especially as it could do no good. No, it was bad enough seeing him at Marylebone. I would give something to forget his face."

"And why?" cried Claire. "Because in your heart, like all the rest of the world, you know him to be guilty! You may be sensitive, but you wouldn't be as sensitive as all that if you honestly believed in his innocence. You do not. Yet you go on spending your money, throwing it away to gratify a passing impulse of mine! It's madness, Mr. Daintree. It is indeed."

The tears stood in her eyes as she spoke, but he had turned away as if unable to deny his latent unbelief, otherwise her face might have betrayed her even then. She felt that it must do so in the end. It was but another question of time. Such interviews left her spirit prostrate, her heart worn out with beating, and yet she sought them herself. The craving for news of Tom only deepened with the sense of his guilt. When Daintree was absent, the girl counted the hours till his return. When he returned, if she was not there to meet him it was in order that he might think her less eager to hear than he to tell. And once when he not only thought so, but told her what he thought in his touchiest manner, it was a great moment for the actress, who was ceasing to feel ashamed of her part, what with custom and the dire necessity of it.

For now more than ever did Claire trust to the genius of the great magician retained for the defense. That vague power was the one hope left for her to cling to, and cling she did with all the might of aching heart and tortured mind. Claire's notions of a trial were exceedingly simple, although her father had stood his within the year. On the other hand, her belief in the efficacy of counsel was unbounded, because Mr. Harding had been defended by a former officer of the crown, and the charge had fallen to the ground, and everybody vowed it was the fine defense, combined with innocence—at least everybody whose opinion Claire was in the way of hearing. Mr. Sergeant Culliford had not been solicitor general, but Claire was told that in a criminal case his rival did not exist. One night she heard that Culliford had accepted the brief, the next that he had probably earned his fee already, though Bassett would admit nothing of the kind, but complained instead of his own treatment at the barrister's hands.

The fact was that Tom ought to have made a statement before the magistrate. Then the defense would have had something to work upon at the trial. As it was they had nothing until the learned sergeant devised a means of obtaining a statement at the eleventh hour. He went to Newgate, made Tom give him his version of the interview with Blaydes and of his subsequent proceedings; disbelieved every word, but kept nodding so encouragingly with his ugly, inscrutable, attentive face that Tom received the very opposite impression and told his tale with some spirit and a gleam of hope. The great man heard him out, then glared at Bassett (who had given him a certain look) and addressed the prisoner in a kindly undertone.

"That's all very well," said he. "The only pity is that we didn't have it at Marylebone, for, you see, your tongue will be tied at the Old Bailey. No, no; you couldn't know. You may thank your solicitor. It was his duty to advise"—

"Excuse me, sir," interrupted that gentleman, "but I really must protest. I never supposed we should be unable to call a single witness for the defense, and I did not think the story"—

"Think!" snapped Culliford. "Who wants you to think? There's a class of men, sir, that is most dangerous when it thinks. You appear to belong to it. Be good enough not to interrupt me again. We must have that statement by hook or crook to work upon, and there is only one way now of getting it as evidence. Tell a turnkey or a wardsman what you have told me, Erichsen, and the other side are pretty safe to put him in the box. Then I shall cross examine him and have something to talk to the jury about. Do I think we have a leg to stand upon? Two, sir, two, and better ones than they suppose, only tell the turnkeys exactly what you have told me, and good day to you. Come, Mr. Bassett. I've something more to say to you."

And so Tom had his eyes opened to the little ways of great lawyers, but his impression of his champion was by no means an unfavorable one, for the glib, spruce Bassett he disliked, but this rough tongue and rugged face filled him with confidence and so redoubled his gratitude toward his unknown ally, who heard that he had spoken of him with tears in his eyes and who did not fail to let Claire hear it too.

Upon her meanwhile the strain was beginning to tell. More than once she was within an ace of breaking down at a telltale moment. And just when her nerves were at their highest pitch and the situation hardly to be borne there came the new development which well nigh turned her brain.

It began with a comparatively small matter, the unprovoked insolence of Claire's maid; but this was the growth of days, not a sudden thing, though it was only when her jangled nerves could endure it no longer that Claire whipped out her purse, put a month's wages on the dressing table and bade the woman begone.

Hannah, the maid, put her thin, strong arms akimbo and burst out laughing in her mistress' face.

"This instant, eh? And you think you'll get rid of me for two-pound-five? That you won't then, nor yet for 20 guineas. So now you know."

"We shall see," said Claire, moving over to the bell.

"I wouldn't ring, miss, if I were you."

"Then will you go? You have been insolent beyond words; force me to do it, and I shall send for a policeman to turn you out."

"I wouldn't do that, miss, either, or I may tell the policeman something you won't like."

"What do you mean?"

"What I say, but I don't mind saying it plainer to oblige. I shall tell him who you were with on the night of a certain murder and what he said to you and what you could tell against him in the witness box if they like to put you there! That's all, Miss Harding. You look faint. I wouldn't ring just yet if I were you. Here's a glass of water in the meanwhile."

Claire had indeed turned white as paper. Instinctively she took the glass, but it slipped through her fingers and fell into the fender with a crash. The room seemed full of pale faces, low brows and venomous black eyes set close together, all spinning round in nauseous whirligig like demons dancing. She sank into a chair and hid her face, but started and recoiled from the touch of cool fingers, wet with rosewater, upon her temples.

"Keep away from me!" she cried faintly. "Do not dare to touch me again. So it was you at the gate that night? I remember now!"

"It was me, miss."

"You shut it?"

"I did."

"And, pray, how do you know who he was?" and her voice was stronger. "You never were at Winwood in your life."

"Perhaps not, but I can put two and two together as well as most. Besides, I'm not that hard of hearing. Come, let's be plain. You've confessed to the master, miss, and you've confessed to me."

There was a pause for proper comprehension; then said the young lady, with ineffable scorn, "And to how many more—through your lips?"

"Never a soul! That was too good a one not to keep. No, I just seen him first and then set to work to find out who he was. But I never said I seen him to a soul."

"And why not to me until today?"

"Why, because I wanted to know your game. And it wasn't that easy to find out. You see, miss, you're a pretty deep one yourself."

Claire sat still in her chair. She was now perfectly calm and even experiencing an odd sense of relief in facing an overt crisis after so many secret tremors and hidden shocks. "And what is your object, Hannah?" said she at last. "Suppose they put me in the witness box, what would you gain by it? You probably think I would do anything to avoid the exposure. On the contrary, I would tell everything to the whole world if I thought it could do any good. But the case is so black already that, on the other hand, it could do very little harm. Your threat is less terrible than you imagine."

KING EDWARD'S DANGER.

His Horoscope Indicates Predominance of Mars.

One of the chief features of the October number of the Monthly Messenger, published by "Old Moore," a well-known English weather prophet, is a horoscope of the principal rulers.

This month the stars that sway King Edward come under survey.

According to "Old Moore," the planet Mars is predominant in the King's horoscope. The seer adds that it is very important in this respect, "that the total eclipse of the sun of January 3 next falls on the place of Mars at the King's birth; and there certainly appears indications of grave international troubles, warlike tendencies, as well as personal dangers and ill-health."

The Midshipman.

Writing in Harper's Magazine, Capt. A. T. Mahan says: By luck, I, for the first time in my life, have found a plausible derivation for midshipman. It would appear that in the days immediately after the flood the vessels were very high at the ends, between which there was a deep "waist," giving no ready means of passing from one to the other. To meet this difficulty there were employed a class of men, usually young and alert, who, from their station were called midshipmen, to carry messages which were not subject for the trumpet shout. If this explanation holds water it, like fore-castle, and after-guard, and knight-heads gives another instance of survival of nomenclature from conditions, which have long ceased. Whatever the origin of his title, it well expressed the anomalous and undefined position of the midshipman. He belonged, so to say, to both ends of the ship, as well as to the middle, and his duties and privileges alike fell within the broad saying, already quoted, that what was nobody's business was a midshipman's. When appointed as such, in later days, he came in "with the hayseed in his hair," and went out fit for a lieutenant's charge; but from first to last, whatever his personal progress, he continued, as a midshipman, a handy-billy.

Cinder Path is Being Put Down at Rink

And Everything is Being Put in Shape for the Big Athletic Meet—Two More Toronto Entries

Two more entries from Toronto have been received for the Y.M.C.A. indoor meet at the Brock street rink on Tuesday night. Greenwood, of the Central Y.M.C.A., has entered in the 50 and 220 yard dashes and Galbraith, also of the Central, will run in the three mile handicap. Greenwood is picked upon by the Toronto men who are in the know, to win the sprints, while Galbraith is reputed to be a good one for five miles and under.

Jack Thirnbeck is at work at the rink to-day putting down a cinder track and getting the rink into shape generally for the big event. The track will be in excellent condition for Tuesday night and fast time should be made.

Orders for seats are coming in from Lindsay, Havelock, Norwood and other towns in the district and the rink will be packed. A large number are also coming from the Indian reserves at Hiawatha and Chemong as the Indians are anxious to see the great Tommy Longboat and also to see Fred Simpson and Ben Howard making the rounds.

The Franco-Canadian treaty will be discussed in Parliament on Thursday.

Mrs. Temple's Telegram is Splendid Farce

Attraction at Grand Opera House on Saturday Nov. 30 Highly Meritorious Production

The theatre-goers of Peterborough are to be congratulated on having the opportunity of seeing such an excellent list of plays as will be seen at the Grand opera house in the near future.

A rich dramatic and musical festival is in store for the local play-going public commencing with that captivating farce on Saturday, November 30th, "Mrs. Temple's Telegram." This mirth-provoking production of clean and clever comedy is appropriately termed "the laughing success of two continents," as everyone who has read the flattering press notices from the English and American metropolitan centres well know. In every city in Canada in which it has appeared the dramatic critics have referred to it in an enthusiastic way. When it appeared at the Russell, Ottawa, lately, the production was honored by the distinguished patronage of Earl and COuntess Grey, who thoroughly enjoyed the performance. The Ottawa Journal, Free Press and Citizen all referred to the piece in glowing terms. In the matter of staging and interpretation it is easily in a class with the "Lion and the Mouse," and as a farcical production is in a class all by itself. "Mrs. Temple's Telegram" can be unhesitatingly and conscientiously recommended as a first class and highly amusing play in every respect.

Other sterling attractions which will come to the Grand early next month are "The Burgomaster," "The Man on the Box," "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," and others.

In Saturday's issue of the Review a full list of all attractions booked up to the present time for the month of December will be published.

There will be no matinee of "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," as the company insist on a dollar a seat for admission to the best seats and the local management are of the opinion that the public would not be willing to respond to the demand.

GREAT RISE IN THE STAR'S CIRCULATION

(From the Montreal Star.)

We are enabled to announce one of the greatest increases in the circulation of the Montreal Star that has ever occurred since it was founded thirty-eight years ago.

In sixty-five days, to date, seven hundred and twenty newsdealers have increased their sales, bringing the circulation up to 64,321. This increase in circulation has all the appearance of permanency, for we are flooded with letters in support of the Star's position and attitude on public affairs.

If the eight columns on each page of Saturday's Montreal Star were placed end to end they would cover a space of 3,539 miles, or from Montreal to Vancouver, and 635 miles out into the ocean.

Movement to Secure Union Of All Protestant Bodies

Rev. W. Herald Stacey, of Toronto, in Peterborough Securing Signatures to a Petition—He Tells of the Origin and Progress of the Work.

Rev. W. Herald Stacey, of Toronto, General Secretary of the Church Union Evangelistic movement, with one of his assistants, Mr. Jas. Marking, a student of the Bible Training Institute, Glasgow, is making a canvass of Peterborough, securing endorsers to a petition which advocates the union of all Protestant denominations.

Under Mr. Stacey's personal effort the petition was endorsed in Toronto by over twenty thousand persons, many of whom were prominent business, professional men and a good list of clergymen.

The present aim is to secure at least one hundred thousand endorsers throughout the Province of Ontario, and after a great rally, which will held in Massey Hall, Toronto, next September, the petition will be presented to the highest councils of the different denominations.

The movement is not connected with the proposed union between the Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists, but embraces all the Protestant denominations.

THE PETITION.

Following is a copy of the petition, which is being presented in the city:

"Believing that a closer union among all Christian denominations would mean a great saving of money, remove the cause of many unchristian disputes; make easier the conversion of the unsaved, and fulfil the prayer of Christ for Christian unity; we, the Inter-denominational workers of the Church Union Movement, express gratitude to your honorable body for the active steps you have already taken in the matter, and express the hope that you will continue your efforts until the best possible unity among Christian denominations is obtained."

EXTENSION OF THE WORK.

Speaking of Mr. Stacey, the Toronto News of Oct. 9th, 1907, says:—

"Rev. W. Herald Stacey, of this city, General Secretary of the Church Union Evangelistic Movement, has just completed an important canvas of Toronto and suburbs, securing the names of about twenty thousand endorsers to a petition which advocates the union of all Protestant denominations, and which in due time will be presented to the highest council of Anglican, Baptist and other denominations. In the long list of names are to be found many prominent business and professional men. The number includes over 4,000 Anglicans, 5,000 Methodists, 4,500 Presbyterians, and 2,000 Baptists. The rest are Congregationalists and others. Plans are made for the extension of the work during the coming year throughout the Province of Ontario. With the aid of speakers, canvassers and other helpers, the number of names will be increased at least 100,000, and local secretaries of the movement will also be appointed in the towns and cities visited. Meanwhile a Toronto Committee will aid the General Secretary in planning a great rally, to be held in Massey Hall on some date next September or October."

ITS ORIGIN.

The present petition for church union of all the Protestant denominations began by petition in Portland, Maine, about four years ago, and was first signed by Mr. Charles W. Whittier, editor of the Portland Transcript, and nephew of the famous poet. After that the petition was taken to New York City and there endorsed enthusiastically by many prominent men. Large meetings were held in the metropolis by Mr. Stacey, and the movement was heartily supported. Mr. Stacey has visited Toronto, Whitby, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa and other places and, on leaving Peterborough next week, for Toronto, a number of other helpers will be sent out to various towns.

Annual Meeting of the Bible Society Held Last Evening

Masterly Address by Rev. W. H. A. French, of Fenelon Falls, on the Work Being Done—Reports Heard and Officers Elected—Society Closes a Successful Year.

This annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Bible Society was held last evening at St. John's schoolhouse, when a fair representation of the members were present. The meeting passed off very successfully, and the address by Rev. W. H. A. French, of Fenelon Falls, proved profitable and instructive. The president, Sheriff Hall, was in the chair, and the singing of a hymn and devotional exercises by Rev. Canon Davidson opened the proceedings. A portion of Scripture was then read by Rev. J. G. Potter. Mr. Potter acted as secretary, Rev. A. Bright who formerly had this office, having moved away.

Sheriff Hall, in his opening remarks, referred to the age of the Bible Society. It is over seventy years since it was first organized in this city. The first officers of the society here were very fine gentlemen, and occupied important positions.

The laymen at the present time, said the chairman, do not take the same interest in the work as they did in the early years. The chairman would like to see a few more present, and hoped that the work would not all be left to the clergy.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. W. H. French, was then introduced. Rev. Mr. French said that he felt greatly encouraged to see so many present. It was a grand thing to see men engaging in this work. The Upper Canada Bible Society, he said, had during past year sent out agents who visited sixty-three branches in Western Canada in the interests of the work. The Bible Society was instituted some one hundred years ago, when a number of men met in London, England, and pledged themselves to the work of spreading copies of the Word of

REV. J. R. WEBB
The Newly Elected Secretary of the Society

God among all people. The society is undenominational. Men of different religious opinions and aims all unite with one purpose in view, that of circulating the Bible. The eloquent speaker referred in a striking and forcible manner to the power of the Bible. Japan some years ago refused to have a Christian enter their country, until one day an interpreter and a high Bible official were studying it, and from that day forward the ears of the Japanese were opened to hear the Gospel. Five and a half million copies were distributed by the British and Foreign Society last year, and at the present time the Bible is read in 500 different languages. We think that this is a tremendous number, said this speaker, but when we consider that there are some sixteen hundred different tongues spoken, there is yet a tremendous work ahead of the Church. The languages are most difficult to translate, some of them being constructed of thin funnies signs. "Imagine the missionary's experience in endeavoring to convey to the heathen the word of life," said the speaker.

The Bible is indispensable in the furtherance of Christ's kingdom. The missionary must have something to base their statements on. The Anglican Church has two societies working in England distributing Bibles among 164 peoples.

In our country there is a mixed population including Doukhobors, Galicians and several more, and all must be reached. From the Winnipeg Bible house 44 different copies of the Word of God were asked for last year. 85,000 Bibles were given away in Canada, and Bible men and women are working in the lumber camps, mines and railroad camps of the Dominion, spreading the Word of Life. The reverend gentleman urged the local members to do their best for the work of the society, and interest others in it.

At the conclusion of the address, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker of the evening, Rev. J. R. Webb making the motion, and Rev. E. A. Pearson seconding it. Each referred to the work of the society, complimenting Mr. French on his masterly address, and regretting that more were not present to hear it.

Electric Light is Cheap Here

Peterboro' Citizen Tells of the Present Rate

A reader sends the following note to the Toronto Globe.—In a prominent place in today's Globe you intimate that the rate of nine dollars a year for light is impossible. I beg to inform you that I had a contract for years with the Peterborough Light and Power Company to light my house with ten sixteen-candlepower lamps for 60 a year, less 10 per cent. for prompt payment. The rate netted me 67 cents per month for ten lights, an average of less than 7 cents a month for each light. Some of my neighbors, who used a larger number of lamps, had an even lower price. You see by this that such a rate is possible.

The Globe says it is looking for just such facts as are presented by the writer. Is there any other place in Ontario where ten lamps of 16 can dlepower can be had for $6.70 per year? It would seem as if Peterborough has a rate in a class by itself.

Should Get Their Tickets at Once

Mr. W. McIlroy, C.P.R. uptown ticket agent, says that those who wish to go to Old Country should book their passage at once, as several of the steamships have already made arrangements to carry as many as they can accommodate. The Christmas steamship traffic, from present indications, will be a very heavy one this year.

And They Are at It Down There

Colborne, Nov. 27.—One afternoon last week, Mr. James Worrell, J. D. Lundy, C. A. Post and Thos. O'Donoghue walked from Colborne to Brighton and return, a distance of sixteen miles, in four hours and twenty minutes. The boys on their return, seemed none the worse for their trip, and think they will try to reduce the time some day this week.

Confiscation of The Slot Machine

Montreal, Nov. 25.—The Provincial authorities have inaugurated a determined crusade with the object in view of putting the slot machines out of business. Revenue Department officers are now making a tour of all the towns where such machines are in use and are confiscating them by the dozen, as they are illegal.

HORSES SOLD FOR A SONG

Mr. A. Rountree, who was up in Toronto a day or two ago, says he saw several imported and pedigreed two and three year old Clydesdale stallions sell for almost unspeakably low prices.

The highest price realized on any of a lot of nine for ten was $150. The sale took place at Burn's and Shepard's Repository and is simply another example of the deplorable condition of the horse market. There was encumbrances on a couple of the animals and that accounted to some extent on the low prices paid.

Grand Secretary Crosses Border

Sudden Death of Mr. Hugh Murray of Hamilton—A Noted Mason

Special to the Review.

Hamilton, Nov. 28.—Hugh Murray, grand secretary of the grand lodge of Canada, A.F. & A.M., died this morning. He was taken ill at his office on Tuesday, and was removed to his home. It was not thought at the time that the illness was of a serious nature, but this morning Mr. Murray suffered a stroke, and died within an hour.

Mr. Murray was born in Scotland 65 years ago, and came to Hamilton in 1860. He was for some years in the grocery business, but in the seventies was appointed chief clerk in the Custom House, which position he held until 1903, when he was appointed grand secretary of the Masonic Order. Mr. Murray leaves one son and four daughters.

MANY PAID LAST TOKEN OF RESPECT

Funeral of Late Stanley G. Giroux Took Place This Morning

The remains of the late Stanley G. Giroux, who passed away on Tuesday morning, were laid to rest this morning. The funeral took place from his father's residence, 306 Stewart St., and was largely attended, many turning out to pay their last respects to one who was always held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. The long cortege proceeded to St. Peter's cathedral, where the requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Kelly.

The floral offerings were numerous, and included many handsome designs, tokens of the deep sympathy felt for the sorrowing relatives. There was a wreath from the staff of the Trent Canal office, anchors from the Quaker Oats Co. office staff and Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, of the Collegiate Institute staff, wreath from the Royal Bank staff, a floral cross from Miss K. Leonard, of Toronto, a star from the Davis, Thompson Co., crescent from Messrs. Thos. Kelly and W. Cahill, bouquets from Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Graham and Mr. John A. Hanrahan. Miss M. A. O'Connell, of the Separate School staff, sent a spiritual bouquet card.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Leonard Omer and Cyril Giroux, brothers of the deceased, and Thomas Kelly, W. Cahill and John Hanrahan.

At the grave Rev. Father Galvin conducted the service.

Among those present at the last said rites were Messrs. G. T. and C. J. Leonard, Toronto; Miss K. T. Leonard, Toronto; Miss Jennie Leonard, New York; Mr. E. T. Smith, public works department, Toronto; Mr. Alex. and Miss Jennie Kearney, Young's Point; Mr. Wm. E. Brooks, Lakefield, and others.

Must Keep the Cows at Home

A number of persons residing on the outskirts of the city have been in the habit lately of allowing their cows to run at large and wander over other people's property. One man was fined heavily last week for this offence, and others will appear in court if they do not keep their cows at home. It has become a great nuisance, and the authorities are going to put a stop to it.

The "Bob Hall" Ran on Rock Yesterday

The Government boat "Bob Hall" is still engaged in work at Clear and Stony Lake. Yesterday the steamer ran on a rock near the Burleigh wharf and was not able to get off. Word was sent to Young's Pont. The steamer Stoney Lake went to Burleigh and pulled the Government boat off the obstruction on which it rested. The "Bob Hall" was not damaged.

Two Factories Hold Meetings

Operations of Trewern and Lakefield Factories for the Past Year

The annual meeting of Treewern Cheese factory was held yesterday afternoon. The president, Mr. G. W. Mann, was in the chair, and during the afternoon, Mr. Ward, dairy inspector, gave an address on the "Care of Milk and Sanitary Inspection," and Mr. N. G. Somerville spoke on "Cow Testing." Both gave some valuable pointers and were listened to with deep interest. The following are some figures from the report of the secretary, Mrs. Chittick.

Total amount milk—1,531,080 lbs.
Total amount cheese—140,662 lbs.
Money received for cheese—$16,284.21.
Value of cheese sold patrons—$247.69.
Total receipts—$16,455.90.
Interest—$34.60.
Amount of milk required for 1 lb. cheese—10.81.
Average price of milk per cwt. to patrons—97c.
Total No. patrons—53.

During the past season Treewern factory has put in a cool curing room and it has been found a most profitable investment. The returns show that it has taken 1-4 of a pound of milk less to manufacture a pound of cheese than before the cool curing plant was established. The saving in shrinkage has been $360, and as a result the patrons are highly pleased.

About 35 patrons were in attendance at the meeting.

LAKEFIELD FACTORY.

The annual meeting of Lakefield cheese factory was held last night, and a large number were in attendance. Supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, after which the business meeting was held. President Andrew Fairbairn occupied the chair, and reviewed the work of the past season. Addresses were given by Messrs Ward and Somerville, who were heard with much interest.

Total amt. milk, 846,761.
Total amt. cheese, 78,777.
Amt. of milk required for 1 lb. of cheese, 10.70.
Average price per lb. of cheese 11.79
Price paid cwt. to patrons, 91c.
Total money paid patrons, $7,726.20.
Gross receipts, $9,441.
No. of patrons, 455.

COULDN'T WEAR BOOTS

If you suffered with sore feet so that you could not bear anything to touch it, and then someone sent you a small sample box of Zam-Buk, half of which healed you after 12 months' suffering, what would you say? Why, exactly what Mrs. Baptiste Jeanjeotte, of Vankleek Hill, said, when finishing her letter, viz; THANK YOU A THOUSAND TIMES.

There are crowds of others in the Dominion who write nice things to us, and they are all anxious that you should know about Zam-Buk, the Marvellous Healer. We pass their experiences on from time to time for the help of other sufferers.

Zam-Buk is the great "Miracle-Worker." Heals where all else fails. All skin troubles, such as Boils, Ulcerous, Pimples, Running Sores, Chapped Hands, Scalp Irritation, Festering Sores, Poisoned Wounds, etc. yield to Zam-Buk.

For Piles, Rheumatism, etc. it cannot be equalled. All druggists sell at 50 cents a box, or from The Zam-Buk Co., post paid, for price. Boxes for $1.25. Send for a free sample box, enclosing 1c to pay postage.

EXPLOSION OF CAN OF PAINT

Lindsay Woman Badly Burned —Firemen Called Out

Friday afternoon, Mrs. George Adams of Lindsay, started to enamel her stove with aluminum paint. The stove was almost cool, but she had hardly begun to apply the paint when the stuff exploded and threw drops of burning paint all over the room.

Mrs. Adams was badly burned about her hands and arms in her plucky attempt to save the house. The fire brigade was called and made good time, but the neighbors were too quick for them.

AMUSEMENTS

MRS. TEMPLE'S TELEGRAM.

Referring to this attraction, which appears here Saturday night only, Nov. 30th, the Ottawa Citizen says;

For complicated situations and beautiful fibbing, Mrs. Temple's Telegram is almost unequalled among plays. Last night the audience was kept in almost continual laughter as the mystery of a telegram was ludicrously unveiled before the footlights of the Russell Theatre.

The play centres around a telegram sent by Mrs. Temple to John Brown, Elm avenue, Pickleton. This telegram was as follows: "I implore you to come to me at once. Husband must not know. Happiness depends upon it. Shall remain in all day." A somewhat compromising telegram on its face, but nevertheless a very innocent message. Mrs Temple was not a faithless wife, as the telegram suggests, but a devoted, if a somewhat doubting, spouse, who had sent the message to a supposed friend of her husband's, to ascertain something about Mr. Temple, who had left home after a quarrel with Mrs. Temple.

The telegram never reached Temple's friend, for the name "Brown" was a fictitious one. It did, however, fall into the hands of a real John Brown, a married man, with a wife that had a tongue and temper of her own.

When the real John Brown appeared with a gaudy bouquet and a sentimental air, and began to make love to the horrified Mrs. Temple, and when the real Mrs. Brown came on the scene to tell Mrs. Temple what she thought o them there were some startling combinations of characters and circumstances.

This play was a climax of laughable situations. Just when the house thought it had laughed about as much as it dared, something would take place to make it laugh a little bit harder than ever.

Miss Frances Gaunt as Mrs. Temple had the heaviest part of the play to perform, and she did so splendidly. She acted the fearful, fearful, doubting, doting wife with much naturalness. Mr. Carl Anthony, as Jack Temple, acted very cleverly the part of aggrieved husband. Allan Murname, who personated Frank Fuller, a friend of Mrs. Temple's, and whom Mrs. Temple believed to be the real John Brown, to whom she sent her telegram, can tell the yellowest yarns with the most serious face imaginable, and can say funny things without laughing at his own jokes.

Alfred Hudson, as Wigson, the butler that butted in every opportunity he got, was a favorite with the house.

Earl Grey and a party from Government House, occupied a seat.

C. P. R. Engine Left Track This Morning

Near the Diamond—Trains From the East Delayed

A C.P.R. engine left the track early this morning at the diamond, just west of this station, and some of the trains were considerably delayed. The 4.48 express from Ottawa had to remain here for forty minutes, and the Montreal train, which gets here later, had a ten minute wait at this depot. The auxiliary train from Havelock was sent for and not long after was on the scene, and in a short while the engine was again on the rails. The trains could then proceed on their way, and the auxiliary returned to its headquarters.

DON'T MAKE ANY PROVISIONS FOR WINTER MONTHS

Local Merchant Says People Live up to Last Cent.

A prominent Peterborough merchant, in conversation with the Review this morning, brought up the painfully timely question of hard times. He is of the opinion that the coming winter will be a particularly hard one for many persons in the city.

"People are skirting up to their last cent," he said, and do not even display the majesty of a squirrel in arranging for the wants of the approaching cold weather."

This matter is certainly one that is deserving of serious consideration, and what the business man said is undoubtedly, to a large extent, as true as gospel.

TO CLEAN LACE.

Gasoline, if Used With Care, Is the Best Method.

The best method for cleaning lace at home is with gasoline. Souse the lace up and down in a bowl half filled with gasoline to remove the first and worst grime. Have a second bowl ready and immediately rinse the lace in fresh gasoline. Then, before it has time to dry, wrap it carefully about some round object like a rolling pin or the roller used for the kitchen towel. The longer the roller the better. The points of the lace must be carefully picked and fastened down with pins.

The popularity of the chiffon veil and scarf adds another item to the cleaning bill. For ordinary dust and dinginess use fuller's earth, rubbing the powder in with the hands and patting the folds of chiffon together between the hands as a laundress does clear starching. If the scarf or veil has been spotted in the rain, it can be washed in gasoline. For this use some receptacle with a tight fitting lid, such as a glass jar and tin milk shaker or even a tin pail. Have this half full of gasoline, drop in your veil or scarf and shake it rapidly. Pour out the dirty gasoline, rinse in fresh and, holding the veil or scarf lightly between your thumbs and fingers, shake it in a breeze until perfectly dry. Remember that gasoline is highly inflammable, so do the work in daylight for fear of accidents.

EFFECTS OF FATIGUE.

What a Noted Physician Says Upon the Subject.

Dr. Luther Gulick, writing in the World's Work, says this about fatigue: "Fatigue promptly attacks and undermines our sense of proportion. I know of no better illustration of this than the way we will leave our professional work. When I am really fatigued it is very difficult for me to go home when the time comes. It is of course true that there are always little things remaining to be done, but when I am especially tired I cannot distinguish between those which are important enough to keep me and those which are not. I only see how many things there are still undone, and I tend to go on and on.

"If I see a scrap of paper on the floor I cannot help going out of my chair and taking time to pick up that wretched thing and put it in my waste-basket. It assumes somehow the same importance in my mind with that of thinking out my tomorrow's schedule. I will stay and potter about little things that do not need attention. My sense of balance, of proportion and perspective is gone. I've lost my eye for the cash value of things.

"A man whose mind is in good condition can stand off from his work, look at it in the bulk and say to this item, 'You need doing right away;' to another, 'You're unimportant; you can wait,' and to another, 'Somebody else can look out for you.' No fatigued person can see things straight."

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

If the color has been taken from silks by acids it may be restored by applying to the spots a little hartshorn or sal volatile.

Medicine stains may be removed from silver spoons by rubbing them with a rag dipped in sulphuric acid and washing it off with soapsuds.

Cold water, a tablespoonful of ammonia and soap will remove machine grease when other means would not answer on account of colors running.

To kill cockroaches put a mixture of flour and plaster of paris in places infested by cockroaches. The creatures will eat it greedily. The plaster of paris sets after they have eaten it and kills them.

For mud stains on dresses dissolve a little carbonate of soda in water and with it wash the mud stains. Another plan is to rub the stains with a cut raw potato, afterward removing the potato juice by rubbing it with a flannel dipped in water.

Panes of glass may be easily removed by applying soft soap to the putty which holds them. Leave the soap on for a few hours before attempting to remove the putty, which, however hard it may be, will rarely fail to soften under this treatment.

Irrelevant Talk.

Now that the season of the afternoon tea and "at homes" is upon us we can all be amused at the very clever story of a very clever woman about whom Mary E. Bryan tells. She had been to teas and teas until her endurance was worn threadbare, and she had noted that nobody ever by any chance paid the least attention to anything anybody said. Everybody, she decided, always seemed to be waiting for something to happen, and their attention seemed to be fixed anywhere else but on a possible conversation. She resolved to experiment. As she entered a drawing room she said to her hostess, who was greeting each comer alike with outstretched hand and set smile: "How do you do? I've been dead three days." "Isn't that lovely?" instantly replied the hostess as she turned to greet the next comer. She went on until she met a friend with whom she exchanged an enthusiastic greeting beginning: "How do you do, my dear? I've been dead three days." "Why, how fortunate!" replied her friend, with a far off look, scanning the gowns of nearby women and the tea table, with its lights and flowers. She repeated this remark four times more and convinced herself that neither talk nor tea is necessary at afternoon parties where women foregather—just gowns and lights and some music to create a fuss.

SURGERY FOR MADNESS.

Expert Tells of Evil Propensities Cured by Operations.

A lecture was delivered recently, on the invitation of the Incorporated British Phrenological Society, on the question, "Can insanity be cured by surgical operation?" by Dr. Bernard Hollander, the well-known physician for mental diseases, who early this year caused a sensation by the publication in The Lancet and other medical journals of a successful cure of mental derangement by trepanning.

Dr. Hollander, on the subject of the localization of mental disease, stated it had been found that according to the particular area of the brain which had been injured so would be the symptoms. Thus he showed that fifty cases of injury of a particular locality of the brain were followed by serious mental depression and melancholia, and that one-half these cases were subsequently operated upon, when they regained their normal mental condition. He showed that blows and falls on another region were followed by violent and homicidal mania; on another region by kleptomania, etc., and that when the source of irritation was removed the excited faculty was restored to normal activity.

Dr. Hollander in conclusion described the case of a boy who told falsehoods, had a tendency to steal, had no sense of decency, and grew more dangerous the older he got, until his deeds brought him before the police court. Dr. Hollander proposed the removal of a strip of bone from the centre line of the head, and this was carried out. An incision was ths was carried out. An incision was made from the top of the head vertically down to each ear, when the tissues above the right ear revealed the signs of an old injury. Several trepannings were made, and the bone was cut away on the right side, when the membranes of the brain showed signs of the old hemorrhage.

After being treated antiseptically the wound was closed and healed successfully. The patient gradually got better, and behaved properly, did not disturb anybody, showed no inclination for breakage and destruction, but, on the contrary, tried to make himself generally useful. He insulted no one, but spoke politely, using no indecent words, and was grateful for the care shown to him. Thus not only did he lose his bad propensities but he showed higher moral feelings.

SCREWS IN SURGERY.

Remarkable New Methods of Joining Broken Bones.

Screws for joining up fractured bones illustrate a remarkable feature of modern surgical science at the Medical Exhibition, held recently at the Horticultural Hall at Westminster, London.

They are common steel screws, ranging in size from a quarter of an inch to three inches, beautifully silver-plated. These the modern surgeon uses to screw up fractured bones, and they are left in the patient for life. There is no danger of the fracture becoming displaced, and the limb can be used at the earliest possible moment after the operation.

A species of twin tin-tack is also recommended in "bone carpentry"—two tacks united at the head, which is used to bridge a fracture, and is simply hammered home.

The latest form of anaesthesia, which leaves the patient conscious, but incapable of feeling pain, enables a strong-nerved "case" to calmly watch these new points in surgery as illustrated on his own limbs. This new anaesthesia is due to the discovery of novocain. When injected directly into the spinal cord complete paralysis and senselessness ensues. Patients can talk or read while they are being deprived of limbs, a screen over the leg or part operated upon being all that is necessary.

Queen as Employer.

When Queen Alexandra visited the greenhouse in the park of her Villa Hvidore at Copenhagen recently, she found the gardener out, and therefore went to his house in a corner of the park in order to ask about some plants. The gardener was not at home, but his wife invited the Queen to enter till she summoned him.

The Queen went inside, and after a close inspection of the dwelling expressed her great surprise at the small and uncomfortable rooms. The Queen left shortly afterward, but returned in an hour with her sister, the Empress Marie Feodorovna, and the architect of the villa. To the architect her majesty said that he had to make plans as soon as possible for more comfortable rooms, enlarging the small building so that the gardener and his family might have a proper home during the winter.

"I dare say," exclaimed the Queen, when leaving, "that the rooms at Hvidore are not very large, but these, again, are too small." Next day builders began to enlarge the gardener's house.

Churchyard Under the Sea.

When the coast erosion commissioners visited Walton-on-the-Naze recently they were shown a spot north of the pier and about a mile from the shore which was formerly a churchyard. A quarter of a century ago the tombstones could be seen under the water at ebb tide, but the sea has further encroached, and even when the tide is extraordinarily low and the sea clear the old burying ground is scarcely discernible now from the sea level.

Concert Manager Arrested.

St. Thomas, Nov. 28.—Byron Blackstock, London, was arrested and brought here yesterday, charged with failing to provide the necessaries of life for Florence Baker, a 14-year-old girl, who was a member of a touring concert troupe, and whom the informant, George Burkholder, St. Thomas, the girl's brother-in-law, claims, was forced to sleep in depots and halls in West Elgin villages. The concert company came to grief at Rodney a few days ago.

Fire at Montreal.

Montreal, Nov. 28.—Fire broke out in the establishment of the Canadian Wadding Co., Visitation street, yesterday and resulted in damages estimated at $20,000. When the first firemen arrived on the scene flames were bursting out of the windows and traveling rapidly in all directions. So fast did the fire spread that 40 employes narrowly escaped with their lives. As a result of the conflagration 40 hands will be temporarily thrown out of employment.

British Interests Threatened.

Pekin, Nov. 28.—On account of the failure of the Pekin syndicate, a British corporation holding the largest concessions China has ever given, and the officials of Shansi Province, to reach a compromise in the matter of "rights of recovery," violence is threatened in the province. At Tyaunfu, the people are renewing their demonstration against the syndicate.

Blaze in Sintaluta, Sask.

Sintaluta, Sask., Nov. 28.—A bad fire visited the village Tuesday evening, which destroyed Bell Bros.' store, the postoffice, Wilbur's boarding-house, and A. McKinney's residence. The furniture in the latter two buildings was saved, but the aggregate loss will be heavy.

At the annual meeting of the Hamilton Liberal Club, Calvin Davis was re-elected president.

Dean Farthing, of Kingston, is strongly opposed to barrooms, but does not favor local option.

A BANKING JOURNAL

This is clearly the day of the "house organ," a name for that class of publications issued by and in the interests of organizations, companies and institutions. The latest to be is the "Nova Scotian," a journal published quarterly by the offices of the Bank of Nova Scotia. The publication is very creditable, handsomely printed and illustrated and its only fault is that it is not issued monthly instead of four times in each year. The idea, after being discussed for some time by the officials of the bank, has at last been put into practical shape, and it forms a very convenient medium for the discussion of banking topics, and will have a decided utility as a means of keeping a widely scattered staff in touch with one another, and is fostering an esprit de corps. Incidentally it celebrates the seventy-fifth year of the existence of the bank.

The pages of the journal are filled with matter of interest to the staff of the bank, and a number of contributed articles from the pens of our foremost Canadians. In particular Mr. J. Cowan writes interestingly under the heading of "The Bank of Nova Scotia," and contributes some interesting facts and figures relative to the long life and career of the bank. Seventy-five years ago, or, to be more particular, in August, 1832, The Bank of Nova Scotia received its charter and started business. Despite its age it is to-day demonstrating, in no uncertain fashion, that its virility is perennial. During the past year, in addition to showing a marked growth in its financial strength, it has opened eight branches.

There are comparatively few business concerns in Canada which can point to an existence of three-quarters of a century. With this Bank, which a period spells years of trial and years of success, during which experience has been gained and strength gathered, which makes for safety, permanence and stability in future years.

BUY PRESENTS EARLY

Shortly you may expect to see this card in the newspaper advertisements of department stores:

Buy your Christmas presents early—early in the day and early in December. That will be your biggest gift of the toilers to the workers behind the counters and on the delivery waggons.

The idea came from Cleveland where for several years the Merchants' Association has been successful in pushing back holiday shopping into November and early December. This year the Charities Publication committees is trying to do the same thing nationally and is urging wherever it can the importance to shopper and clerk of making complete the great Christmas rush.

A letter asking co-operation has been sent to 5,000 women's clubs, 750 newspapers and 1,307 department stores. Some of its signers are Mark Twain, Lyman Abbott, Jacob A. Riis, Richard Watson Gilder, Nathan Straus, Edward Bok, Florence Kelley and Edward T. Devine.

"While we are keeping our Christmas festival," the leter says, "while we are feeding the lame and the halt, the blind and the friendless, we are lightly reducing to illness and exhaustion the young and the strong and the faithful who serve us."

PEN POINTS

Suppose just now, instead of getting the walking craze, you become seized of the snow shovel mania.

The snow ploughs were out this morning early. May the good beginning be kept up.

The present session of parliament is expected to be a stormy one and perhaps that is the reason it snowed today.

While some industries have closed down for the winter the big legislative mill at Ottawa started up today and will probably be operated to its full capacity for the next six months.

Hon Daniel Derbyshire has got his reward and is now safely ensconced in the Senate. The big dairyman's "sacrifice" of his seat in behalf of Hon. George P. Graham was not of such a vicarious character after all.

The Galt Reformer (Liberal) says: It was a foregone conclusion that two of the senatorial vacancies would go to Mr. Campbell and Mr. Belcourt. For the third Mr. John Charlton was mentioned, but he has been passed over in favor of Mr. Dan Derbyshire. This gentleman is one of the best liked men in politics and he deserves his popularity, but a charming personality is not a qualification for the senate. His elevation to the gilded chamber follows the sacrifice of his seat to Mr. Graham, and is obviously not due to any peculiar fitness for the position he may possess. To openly reward this kind of party service is to lower the dignity of public life.

Dean Farthing of Kingston, who is well known in Peterborough in a recent address on temperance said:—Temperance literally meant self-control. The term temperance was generally used in the sense of prohibition or total abstinence. It was not necessarily so, as there was as much need of temperance in eating and in speech as in drinking. It is so very easy to say let us banish drink from the land, but the question comes back to us, is it right to do so? Drinking or eating is not in itself a sin, but the abuse of it is is where the wrong comes in. The thing itself may not be wrong. We see this by our blessed Lord himself. He drank wine and turned water into wine. It is idle to say, too, that the wine was not fermented. So we must not be carried away with the idea that drinking is a crime. If we are, we may do more harm than we can do good. Every effort to make it such fails, as we see by the accusers being so seldom willing to come forward and assist in the prosecutions. There seems to be a feeling that one's liberty is being trampled upon when the drink problem is effected. But he felt that should not be permitted to interfere with our own personal safety nor to prove a stumbling block in our brother's way. It would instead be much better to put restrictions upon ourselves for the good of the country, and for the benefit of others. No drunkard can inherit the Kingdom of God.

WEDDING BELLS

HANRAHAN—KENNEDY

A pretty wedding was celebrated in St. Paul's church, Lakefield, on Wednesday when Miss Mary Margaret Kennedy was united in marriage to Mr. A. Hanrahan. Rev. Father Phelan performed the ceremony. The bride is a daughter of the late Timothy Kennedy, while the groom is a son of Mr. J. H. Hanrahan. The assistants were Miss Rose Keating and Mr. Thomas Hanrahan. Mr. and Mrs. Hanrahan left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and points west.

NORWOOD LOSES OLD RESIDENT

Death of Mrs. Jas. Starr—Other News From the Busy Village to the East

Special to the Review.

Norwood, Nov. 26.—There passed away after a prolonged illness Mrs. Starr, relict of the late James Starr, at her residence, Queen street, Norwood, on Friday evening last.

Forty-nine years ago Elina McMillan was united in matrimony to Mr. James Starr, of Dummer, where they lived and prospered until a few years ago when they came to Norwood to enjoy in leisure the competency gained by many years of prosperous farming. Mrs. Starr survived her husband about four years and since his death her health gradually declined until on Friday night "She was not, for God took her to Himself."

Mrs. Starr was a native of County Antrim, Ireland, and came to Canada with her parents when quite young. Of her eight brothers and sisters only one survives her, in the person of Mr. Thos. McMillan, Norwood. Mr. and Mrs. Starr had a family of three, viz., the late Thos. Starr, who was drowned a few years ago at Stony Lake, and Mrs. Bowson, of Norwood, and Mrs. Chisolm, of Toronto. The funeral service was held at the home and was conducted by the Rev. W. H. Adams, pastor of the Methodist church.

The bearers were Messrs. John Knot, J. B. Pearce, J. J. Carter, R. W. Waters, J. L. Squires, W. H. Bretchen.

Among the floral contributions was a beautiful anchor by the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church, of which Mrs. Starr was an honored member.

Deceased was 71 years and 8 months of age.

The Methodists and Presbyterians will join in a union evangelistic service on Friday evening at the Presbyterian church. Evangelist McComb's sunbeam choir and male choir will be a feature of the meeting and Rev. W. H. Adams, of the Methodist church will preach the sermon. All are cordially invited.

Mr. T. Clarke and family left today for Lindsay, where they will reside in the future.

Mrs. Chisolm and children, Marion and Norman, are visiting the former's sister, Mrs. Bowson, Queen street.

Two loads of Norwood people drove to Havelock on Friday evening last to attend the Presbyterian social held in the town hall. All report a splendid time.

The annual tea and entertainment of the Killarney Cheese Factory Company, was held last Friday night. A good time was spent by the large number of patrons and their friends, who assembled at the summer headquarters of our friend Mr. G. Bass.

Mr. Robert Clark and family removed to Lindsay this week where Mr. Clark is employed in the new hub factory of that place.

Mr. W. Fleming is having the ground prepared for his open air skating rink.

Mr. Fleming by his agreeable disposition and jovial manner has made his rink very popular with the young people of the village and will have a good patronage this winter.

Foresters Held Annual Re-union

Enjoyable Time Spent at Keene —Walking Record Lowered

Keene, Nov. 26.—Mr. and Mrs White of Warkworth, visited at Mr. George Hunter's on Tuesday.

Miss Mabel Harrison visited friends in Hastings Sunday.

L. O. L. No 494 will hold the next and last meeting of the year on Dec. 11th. A full attendance is requested.

Miss Teresa Godfrey, Hastings, is visiting at Mr. Chas. Fox's, Villiers.

Mr. Donald Hope, Villiers, had the misfortune to have his arm broken the other day by catching it in the spokes of a buggy (wheel.

Mr. Andrew Shearer spent Wednesday at Villers, auditing cheese books.

Misses Laura McFarlane and Ethel McGregor spent Sunday in Westwood.

The Farmers' Institute meeting will be held in the town hall, Keene, on Dec. 11th.

We are pleased to state that Mr. Fred. Wheeler, who was hurt in an accident at Lindsay a couple of weeks ago, and had to have his leg amputated, is doing as well as could be expected and is in a fair way toward recovery.

Last Sunday, being World's Temperance Sunday, Rev. W. D. Harrison preached a special temperance sermon.

Lang and Shearer cheese factory meetings were held Thursday. Keene cheese meeting was held last week.

Miss Orpha Slugget and Mr. E. Slugget, Warkworth, spent Sunday at Mr. Robt. Humphries.

Miss Lillian Foil left Friday to visit friends in Orillia.

Mrs. T. Wedlock returned last week from a visit with relatives in Midland and Orillia.

Rev. Mr. Peckover, Dimomee, conducted services in the Presbyterian church on Sunday, and also spoke at the Endeavor Society meeting in the evening.

Rev. A. N. Baker, Toronto, will conduct anniversary services in the Methodist church Sunday.

Don't forget the shredded wheat banquet in the town hall on December 6th. Those who attend are requested to come without their tea, as a full course meal will be served. A good programme will be provided.

Mr. A. St. A. Smith, manager of the Bank of Toronto, lowered his previous record on Saturday by walking from Keene to Hastings in two hours and thirty minutes.

The Foresters' annual oyster supper and dance was held in the town hall Friday evening. There was a large attendance, and a pleasant evening was spent. A good programme was rendered by local talent, after which the supper was held in the Foresters' hall, followed by a dance in the town hall. Among those taking part in the programme were Misses Margaret Bryce, Mabel Harrison, Margaret Weir, Messrs. F. M. Dean, D. Moore, J. J. Moore, J. Bryce, and John McFarlane. Mr. John McFarlane acted as chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. David Kerr, Smith, spent Sunday in this vicinity.

WILL EXPLAIN THE SCHOOL REGULATIONS

Mr. Lees to Address North Monaghan Trustees and Ratepayers on Dec. 2nd.

A meeting of the school trustees and ratepayers of North Monaghan township, will be held in the town hall in that township on Monday evening, December 2nd, when Mr. R. Lees, public school inspector, will give an address concerning the present school regulations. There are three schools in North Monaghan that have not yet received their government grant on account of having failed to comply with the school regulations. The installation of a school library seems to be the clause that many trustees object to, and the government refuses to forward the grant until the provisions of the act have been entirely complied with.

All trustees and ratepayers are asked to be present at this meeting on December 2nd. The ladies are also invited.

OBITUARY

FRED C LUTES.

Fred C Lutes, of 245 Lake Avenue, Rochester, N.Y., and grandson of ex-Mayor John Lutes, died Wednesday, Nov 20th, after an illness of two years, with a disease which baffled the skill of prominent Rochester and Peterborough physicians. Mr. Lutes was appointed fireman April 17th, 1905, and, while assisting in the rescue of five children from a burning building, who were ill with scarlet fever, contracted the disease himself, which developed the glanular trouble that caused his death. While only 24 years old, he had the love and respect of all. The many beautiful floral offerings testified to love and sympathy of a host of friends.

Before his appointment on the fire department he was connected with the National and Baker theatres as treasurer, and won the respect of older men by his trustworthy and honest principles.

He was a member of the Lake Avenue Baptist church and Sunday school, and a most devoted and thorough son.

The funeral was in charge of the firemen, who felt they had lost a dear brother when Fred was taken.

Joseph Marcellin, of Montreal, aged 29, was drowned in the Lachine rapids.

WELCOME READY FOR VICTORS.

Portuguese Troops Returning From Expedition In West Africa.

Lisbon, Nov. 28.—Preparations are being made here and at Oporto, Cuarda and other towns, to fete the victorious troops who will arrive here soon after a brilliant expedition against the Cunamatas in Portuguese West Africa.

According to the despatches, the Portuguese troops gained a sweeping victory on Aug. 27 last, over a force of Cunamatas numbering seven thousand. This military expedition was sent out from Lisbon last January to check a threatening uprising, and to hold the natives in control.

Forces Were Insufficient.

Paris, Nov. 28.—A special despatch from Madrid to the Echo de Paris says that the general in command of the Lisbon Municipal Guard resigned because the forces at his disposal, he claims, were insufficient to suppress possible disorders. The King thereupon authorized the calling out of the reserves and otherwise increased the power of the commandant, who withdrew his resignation.

The correspondent adds under reserve that it is stated that the Portuguese Government has made approaches to Great Britain with a view to her intervention in case the situation becomes worse.

Capital Outwardly Calm.

London, Nov. 28.—A special despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Lisbon, by way of the frontier, describes the capital as being outwardly calm as a result of the royal decree forbidding political gatherings and newspaper comments on the political situation, but, says the correspondent, it is extremely difficult to foresee what may happen.

"In my judgment," he adds, "the situation is grave, and a very difficult one, but the moment for a sanguinary revolution is remote unless, on account of some lack of foresight on the part of the King or the Premier, it is begun by the army or navy."

SAVED 600 BY A JOKE.

Manager's Ruse to Get Women Out of Burning Building.

London, Nov. 28—Fire heavily damaged a big athletic outfitting establishment in Holborn Tuesday morning. There were 1,800 employes on the premises at the time, including 600 women and girls, but they all got out safely, thanks to a ruse employed by one of the managers.

The fire started in one of the upper stories. It was soon seen to be serious, and, realizing the consequences of a panic, the manager conceived the expedient of emptying the building quickly by announcing to the women that the firm had decided to let them off to go out and see a passing parade. The manager hurried through the rooms calling out to the girls and women: "This way for the parade; this way to see the show!"

He got the women started toward the staircases, down which they were hurried and hustled. By the time they discovered the real cause of the rush they were in safety beyond the reach of the fire. The only person in any way injured was the secretary of the firm, whose whiskers were burned while saving the books.

London Defence Witnesses.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Fifty defence witnesses in the London bribery cases arrived here last night. Some are from Brockville, some from Ontario, and a score from London and Goderich, of which the majority are Liberal deputy returning officers.

Alex. Smith and Tom Lewis will be on hand to-day, but will probably not be called until late to-morrow night. The defendants will take the stand just before the defence closes.

Both counsel anticipate that the case will be finished Saturday morning at the latest.

Two Struck by Train.

Three Rivers, Que., Nov. 28.—Two men named Amedee Roch and Albert Panneton were found at 7 o'clock yesterday morning lying unconscious on the track of the St. Maurice Valley Railway near Villa Mon Repos. It is believed they were struck by the train that passed there at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Amedee Roch died last evening and Panneton is still unconscious and not likely to recover.

Turned Back Runaways.

Chatham, Nov. 28.—Things in Galt were too slow to suit the tastes of Albert and Evan Viges, aged 11 and 12 years respectively, so they ran away yesterday and landed at Chatham in the afternoon. A telegram from the chief of police preceded their arrival.

The little chaps told the police that they were on their way to visit friends in Detroit.

Boyd a Quiet Prisoner.

Toronto, Nov. 28.—John Boyd, the condemned negro awaiting capital punishment at the Toronto jail, has settled down to meet his fate. He eats and sleeps well, and his guards say he is the best death prisoner over whom they ever watched.

Intimidation Charged.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—John Martin, a non-union tailor, has laid information against George Leader and W. J. Robinson, on a charge of intimidation. The two men accused are striking tailors.

"C.-B." Takes Rest Cure.

London, Nov. 28.—Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Premier, who has been in ill-health for some few weeks, has left here for Biarrits, where he will take the rest cure.

Baron Battersea Dead.

London, Nov. 28.—The death is announced of Cyril Flower, first Baron Battersea. He was born in 1843, and was Lord of the Treasury under Gladstone's last administration.

Hasn't Reformed Yet.

Strathroy, Nov. 28.—Aggie Thomas, who was tried at Wiarton for manslaughter not long ago, was arrested here yesterday for drunkenness on the street.

The proprietors of the nickol theatres, which were open on Sunday, in Kingston, are to be prosecuted.

DOCTORS AND DRUGS FAILED HER

ECZEMA TORTURED HER.

Then She Tried "Fruit-a-tives" and They Cured Her.

Skin disease is always due to impure blood. It is the duty of the skin, bowels and kidneys to rid the system of tissue waste. When there is anything wrong with the kidneys or bowels, the skin tries to do extra work and breaks down under the strain. Sometimes the skin is attacked by germs, which, because of its weakened condition, it is unable to resist. Ointments and lotions, and dusting powders, and medicated soaps are useless in Eczema, because they treat only the outside skin. "Fruit-a-tives" cure, because they go to the root of the trouble, they purify the blood. They act on the liver—regulate the kidneys and bowels—soothe and stimulate the skin—and so purify and enrich the blood that disease germs are thrown off—the itching, bleeding surfaces healed—and the whole system is built up and strengthened.

"I had dreadful Eczema on my face, arms and head. I was advised to take 'Fruit-a-tives' to purify the blood and I am very thankful that I took this medicine. When I had taken two boxes, the rash was entirely gone, the pain in the back left, and my complexion is clearer than it has been for years. Before I used this medicine, I had used many kinds of salves and took quantities of medicines, but these did me no good. But 'Fruit-a-tives' at once did me good—and they entirely took away the fearful rash." Mrs. F. Malhiot, 34 Union Street, Ottawa, 50c. At druggists.

Moving Pictures Shown on Sunday

Kingston, Nov. 26—Legal action will be taken against the proprietors of the Bijou and Princess moving picture theatres for doing business on Sunday. The theatres were filled yesterday afternoon and evening when colored pictures and songs were given. Police were stationed in the two amusement places, and reported upon all that took place. The Attorney-General will be acquainted with the facts, and asked for permission to proceed against the proprietors, one of whom is Mr. Annesley Burrows, formerly editor of the Detroit News.

Invitation Cards for AT Homes, Receptions and Evening Parties, partly printed for 1c each. Envelopes to match 10c package. On sale at the Review Office.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box nearest to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the War number is given first, then a pause, and then the remaining numbers of the Box.

The race is not always to the swift. Circumstances do have a great deal to do with our position, our salaries, our place in life.

"Luck" does exist, but "pluck" is the surer winner. The greatest thing a man can do is to make the most possible out the stuff that has been given him. This is success.

Disraeli said that man is not the creature of circumstances, but that circumstances are the creatures of men.

Semi-ready Tailoring was conceived—and it was carried out! The men behind it conquered custom and prejudice, and their every difficulty was but an added incentive.

Chance or Luck has never builded on a sound foundation. Behind the initiative, the carrying out of the Semi-ready idea was the inflexible purpose to find the way. There is always room for the men of forceful ideas.

WEDDING BELLS

MATTUCCI—FINORE

Italian weddings are more or less of a rarity in Peterborough and to the one solemnized at St. Peter's cathedral this morning is attached an interesting chain of circumstances. The contracting parties were Carmelo Mattucci, a young Italian of about twenty-five years of age, who has resided in the city for about five years, and Carmela Finore, a winsome young maid of Italy, who has seen twenty summers in the sunny land of her birth. Rev. Father O'Leary officiated at the ceremony.

Mr. D. M. Minicola and wife acted as assistants.

GARBUTT—NICHOLLS

ding took place yesterday, when Miss Edna May Nicholls was married to Mr. Bruce Garbutt, at the residence of the bride's aunt, Smith township. The contracting parties are residents of Smith. About forty guests were present. Rev. S. S. Burns, of Lakefield, officiated.

Miss Ethel Quinn, Peterborough, was bridesmaid, and Mr. W. Garbutt, Lakefield, was best man. Miss Janet Quinn, Peterborough, played the wedding march. Congratulations were extended and a recherche spread partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Garbutt will reside in Smith township.

Good Sleighing Now Prevails

The present fall of snow is the first of any account this season, and fair sleighing now prevails. Last year the first snow fall worthy of note was on December 3rd; the year previous it was on December 16th, and in 1904 it was on Dec. 8th. On each of these occasions the snow fall was followed by decidedly cold weather, and the first zero weather recorded.

Port Hope Will Be Here To-night

Lakeside Basketballers Have a Strong Team

Port Hope senior basketball team will play the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. first team at the local Y.M.C.A. to-night. The match is called for eight o'clock and there should be a large attendance of spectators.

CURLING

MEETING TONIGHT.

A meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held at the Charlotte street rink this evening at eight o'clock, for the election of skips and business.

SPORTING NEWS

Walking Match Is Postponed

Will be Held at Brock St. Rink Week From Friday Night

The walking match between David Hartley and Jimmy Reynolds, which was to have taken place at the Brock street rink to-morrow night, has been postponed until Friday evening of next week. The promoters did not wish to clash with the Scotch concert in the Conservatory of Music hall, hence the postponement.

Arrows and Tigers Won First Games

Exciting Contests Mark Opening of Y.M.C.A. Basketball League

ARROWS 46; HARRIERS 44.
TIGERS 26; ALERTS 11.

The above were the results in the opening games of the Y.M.C.A. basketball league played last night. Good form was shown by the four teams in action and apparently the race for the premier place is going to be a very interesting one. The teams were:—

Arrows.		Harriers.
Darling	Defence	R. Best
Miller	"	E. Bruce
Gillespie	Centre	MacRae
Cressman	Forward	E. Best

Harvey Staunton gave satisfaction to both teams as referee.

TIGERS WON.

The Tigers had much the best of the Alerts in the second game and always had a good lead.

The teams were:—

Alerts		Tigers
Fitzgerald	Defence	F. Hall
E. Daly	"	Weatherstone
G. Martin	Centre	Staunton
Dotlbin	Forward	Dobson
Laing	"	Wallace

Norman Darling was satisfactory as referee.

Y.M.C.A. Rugby League is Now Being Proposed

Peterborough Association is Included in the List

There is a scheme on foot at the present, though it is a little early to be talking Rugby for next season, to form a new Rugby union, to be composed of the Y. M. C. A. teams throughout Ontario. Teams will likely be formed in this West End Y. and possibly, the Central, in Toronto; the Hamilton Y.M.C.A. runners up in this year's junior O.R.F.U., and an effort will be made to get teams in London, Peterborough, Dundas, and Belleville, Brantford, and any other of the Y.M.C.A.'s that can be interested. It is intended to play in the junior class, and it is possible that it will be run as a branch of the O.R.F.U. under separate management. Several good football men have signified their intention of pushing this thing along and everything points to a good union. A meeting will likely get things under way.

THE GRAFTERS' HOCKEY CLUB

Organized at a Meeting Held Last Night

At a meeting held last night, the Grafters Hockey Club was organized and the following officers elected:—
Hon. Presidents—Robt. Mann, W.S. Morrel, T. W. Meredith, B. Shortly.
President—H. M. Latimer.
Sec.-Treas.—H. Mann.

Mascot—Willie White.

HOCKEY

PLAY WITH PARKDALE.

The Ridpath brothers have closed their store at Lakefield, and will spend the winter as usual in Toronto, where they will play with Parkdale if they get the necessary permit.—Toronto Star.

JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE.

A meeting will be held at the Y. M.C.A. tomorrow night at 8 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a Junior City Hockey League. All those interested are requested to send representatives.

CLUB ORGANIZES.

The "Knocker" Hockey Club has reorganized for the season. The following officers were elected:—
President—Bert Holland.
Treasurer—Bert Monerief.
Manager—A. Cranfield.
A captain will be chosen at a later date.

ROUGH RIDERS TONIGHT.

The Rough Riders Hockey Club will hold their second meeting tonight at eight o'clock, in the Dominion Bank Chambers. A full attendance of the team is desired, as there will be important matters to discuss.

RUGBY

A full practice of this team is called for to-night at 7 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A.

SEVENTEEN MEN AT THE PRACTICE HELD LAST NIGHT

There were seventeen men out at the rugby practice last night at Riverside park. The signals were worked out and the players had a good run round the field. The practice lasted an hour and a half and was one of the best held this season outside of the fact that the recent fall of snow made the footing somewhat heavy and uncertain.

Sporting Comment

"TO SAVE THE SPORTING CREDIT OF THE CITY."

At the eleventh hour someone has for some reason commenced an agitation for a subscription on behalf of the rugby club, in order to raise $200 to cover the deficit of that amount in the treasury of the club. While the motive that prompted the action was generous and of the proper spirit, the suggestion is ill-timed, and it is impossible at this late date for the club to withdraw from its obligation to play Montreal. The Peterborough rugby team is duty bound to go to Montreal and to meet the easterners is the only means open to them to "save the sporting credit of the city." If some philanthropic persons had come forward with the pledges to give $50, say about two weeks ago, the "sporting credit of the city" might have been saved. It is not the "sporting credit of the city" that the rugby club is putting beyond redemption by their determination to meet the easterners, but by taking the step they have decided upon, are actually saving it. Some time ago the club, through the medium of a section of the city press, endeavored to get enough money to cover the balance on the wrong side of the books, but the response to the solicitation for financial aid was anything but overwhelming. After communicating with Montreal, and promising to play there, in view of the substantial guarantee offered, it would not only be a most unreasonable thing for the locals to default, and thus save the "sporting credit of the city," but would be a dishonorable move as well. Arrangements have been made with the C.P.R. to provide a special sleeper for the team—on which the originator of the untimely subscription idea might find accommodation of a congenial character—and other matters of importance in connection with the game, have been carried out. Then there is Montreal's side of the question, the expense of advertising, the numerous notices of the game in Montreal papers, and the great disappointment that would be occasioned by Peterborough's non-appearance. No, it's too late now to re-arrange affairs by accepting the $200 to be "raised" by the proposed subscription.

In a lengthy article published in the Boston Globe and attributed to Alfred Shrubb, although its a question whether he ever wrote it or not, the Englishman tells of how he trimmed Longboat in Hamilton, beating him by a big margin in a mile and three mile run. The article is of a sublimely ridiculous character, and the only time Shrubb and Longboat ever met was in a mile workout at Hanlan's Island.

Peterborough have one deaf mute on their team, but after Montreal is through with them Saturday the whole team will be mum.—Toronto World.

This is evidently the most sorry stricken attempt that has been made yet, and would not even make a ripple of laughter at the corner grocery.

The remarkable feat of Edward P. Weston, the veteran walker, who make 1284 miles in twenty-four hours, certainly proves that he has remarkable feet. This is rather a poor one, but on account of the snow storm it was found impossible to get much news to fill up on.

If the snow keeps falling the grounds in Montreal will not be in any too good shape for the game between the locals and Montreal. Even the weather man doesn't want to see the team fall into the bad graces of the C.A.A.U.

ROLLER HOCKEY

GAME POSTPONED

Owing to the Peterborough players having to attend some other meeting next Tuesday night, the roller hockey match between Peterborough and Lindsay will be postponed till Wednesday. It will be the first game of roller hockey ever seen in Lindsay, and will be very exciting.—Lindsay Post.

THE RING

Tommy Burn, the Canadian, who holds the world's heavyweight championship, will be in great trim for his fight with Gunner Moir. Burns is certainly a good man and should be able to work the lullaby stunt on the husky gunner.

WALKING.

TOOK A JAUNT.

Several local men are taking long trips. Yesterday evening Harry Burridge and "Doomey" Newton started out from the corner of Brock and George streets, went to Smith and, crossing the bridge walked four times around the oval. They then came back through Ashburnham to Hunter street, to the starting point. This distance was covered in 55 minutes.

BOYS FOUND $40,000.

Seeress Pointed Out Place Where Treasure Was Hidden.

San Francisco, Nov. 28.—Acting upon the knowledge imparted to them by a seeress, two small boys—Lee Thomas and John Freitas—journeyed from their home Tuesday to a lot a short distance away and dug for wealth supposed to be there.

After digging and scraping away the debris left by the fire of 1906 the lads came upon heaps of buried silver. In ecstacies over their lucky find, the youngsters packed as much as they could and carried it to their homes, making many trips, and finding in all as much as $40,000. The news spread quickly and by the time darkness had fallen not a space was vacant on the entire lot. This unusual sight attracted the attention of the police, who in arresting 24 men for trespassing obtained about $2,000 in coin.

Noted Contractor Dead.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 28.—James H. De Graff, 73 years old, dropped dead here yesterday. Mr. De Graff was best known as a contractor on great public works. He supervised the enlargement of the Erie Canal in 1854, built the Great Western between Chatham and Belle River in 1854, and had charge of the construction of the Chesapeake & Albemarle Canal in Virginia in 1854.

Burglar Wanted In France.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—A burglar in the penitentiary here under the name of Martin, but who is none other than the notorious "Kid" McManus, is to be released in February after serving a seven-year term. As soon as he comes out he will be re-arrested on a charge of stealing bonds in Paris. A detective from France will come here to take him in charge.

Blinded by Shotgun.

Belleville, Nov. 28.—Bernard McKim of Ameliaburg was trying to draw a charge from a shotgun when it went off, the shot going into his face and some of it penetrating his eyes. He will lose his sight. The young fellow is 20 years old.

TOAST TRIFLES.

A Club Sandwich and Attractive Dishes For Supper.

Few housewives find a use for cold toast. It is despised as tough, and yet when you see a business man order a club sandwich and pay a good price for it you will find that cold toast is the foundation for it. Yes—cold toast. But—and the but is a big thing here—it has fine mayonnaise dressing on it. Trim your toast into nice triangles. Spread it with mayonnaise or butter. Lay on it a slice of cold roast chicken, and then a slice of broiled bacon, and then a lettuce leaf made rich with mayonnaise, and finally put on a cover of a second triangle of toast. Of course cold toast that is stale will not answer. It must be good. Cold toasted bread may be cut in squares and used for the family soup at luncheon.

Potatoes may be scalloped with cheese, using milk for moistening. This is a nice dish at this season, when potatoes are not very satisfying. Cheese gives them a nice taste and adds nourishment, eking out a scanty supply of meat.

Broiled tongue makes a good cold dish for luncheon or supper. It may be served hot at luncheon with a horseradish sauce. With it have some grape juice and some light cakes. Try little novelties at this season, when every one wants to feel a bit of joy in the daily life—something new to wear or eat, somewhere to go, a bit of fresh life, so as to feel in unison with all nature. If the family sigh for charlotte russe, you need not get a big, expensive mold of lady fingers. Make a good light sponge cake. Serve it in squares, with plenty of well whipped cream on each that has been sweetened and flavored with vanilla. Slice some fresh bananas around it, and no one will complain, or combine another fruit that is in season with the bananas.

What to Teach Children.

Teach your child to fill the lungs, breathing deeply through the nose, holding the breath an instant and expelling it slowly.

Teach your child to stand erect, with the head well against the collar and with the chest out.

Teach your child to keep the hands clean.

Teach your child to keep the finger nails clean.

Teach your child never to put whistles or toys in the mouth without first washing them.

Teach your child never to moisten the fingers or thumb when turning papers, handling money or papers.

Teach your child never to eat things that are dirty; never to eat fruit or candy picked up from the street.

MUNICIPAL NOTES

The finance committee of the city council will meet tonight at 7.30 o'clock, and the special park committee will also meet tonight.

The manufacturers' committee will meet tomorrow afternoon.

Missing Man Found Drowned.

Brockville, Nov. 28.—Patrick O'Donahoe, who had been missing from home since Tuesday night, was found drowned in Tunnel Bay. It is supposed he walked into the bay in the dense darkness. His watch had stopped at 12 o'clock midnight. O'Donahoe was an elderly man and for many years a cab driver.

In Receivers' Hands.

York, Pa., Nov. 28.—The York Silk Manufacturing Co., yesterday went into the hands of receivers. In a statement filed by the petitioners the assets are placed at $2,292,103, and the liabilities at $882,500.

Pettibone on Trial.

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 28.—The trial of George A. Pettibone, for alleged complicity in the murder of Former Governor Steunenberg, began in the District Court here yesterday, Judge Fremont Wood presiding.

The Address In Senate.

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—Hon. N. A. Belcourt is to move the address in reply to the speech from the throne in the Senate to-day, and probably Hon. Dan Derbyshire will be the seconder.

Robbed Government Pawnshop.

Tula, Russia, Nov. 28.—A band of robbers yesterday entered the Government pawnshop here, gathered together diamonds and gold to the value of $75,000 and escaped.

No Epidemic at Goderich.

Goderich, Nov. 28.—There is no epidemic of smallpox here, as asserted. There are only a few mild cases and these have been properly isolated.

Coal Stove With Lid Open Told Silent Story of Woman's Death

Mrs Maggie Kerr Asphyxiated in Her Rooms on George St.

POLICE FIND BODY IN BED

Had Been Missing From Place of Employment Since Monday

Lying in her bed cold in death, the police this morning found the body of Mrs. Maggie Kerr in her rooms in the flat over Dutton's fruit store and grocery on George street. The woman had been missing from her place of employment since Monday night and her absence led to the investigation by the authorities. P.C. Newhall found the door of her apartments locked when he called shortly before noon to-day and had to force an entrance. In a large bedroom adjoining a kitchen, the body was found in the bed. A coal stove in the room with the top open told the story of how she came to her death. There is but little doubt that on retiring Monday night she forgot to close the stove properly, the room became filled with gas and she slept away to death. The bed was in good order showing that there was no struggle or any kind and that the sleeper had been unconscious of death's approach.

P.C. Newhall at once notified Coroner Dr. Gray, who visited the rooms and after making an investigation decided that an inquest was unnecessary. Dr. Gray states that there is no doubt but that the woman was asphyxiated.

Mrs. Kerr was about 55 years of age and lived alone in two rooms in the flat over Dutton's store. For some time she had been working at the Crown hotel and left there on Monday night in her usual good health. On her not returning on Tuesday or Wednesday the police were notified this morning.

As far as is known, Mrs. Kerr has one son, Walter Kerr, of Toronto. He resides at 204 King street east, in that city and has been notified of his mother's death.

PASSEPARTOUT PICTURES AND MOUNTING BOARD

The fad for passepartout pictures is again growing very general. Many who have used this means of decorating their rooms, find there is no other way of treating pictures, that is so economical and satisfactory. The Review has a new line of passepartout in all shades, mounting papers and pictures in the popular sepia tints. Call and see them and fix up a few pictures for your friends for Xmas. Nothing is more acceptable than a pretty picture.

OBITUARY

JAS. WILSON

Mr. D. Bellegham went to Toronto this morning to prepare the body of Jas. Wilson for burial. The deceased died there last evening. He formerly resided in Lakefield. He was 77 years of age and a Presbyterian in religion

The remains will arrive here tonight, and will be taken to the residence of Mr. John Meharry, 42 Victoria avenue.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 10.30 o'clock, to Ray's cemetery, Lakefield.

Rev. J. G. Potter will officiate.

Marriage Fee is Very Small

Local Clergyman Received the Munificent Sum of 50 cents

There are many popular fallacies, one of them being the belief that the clergyman who joins a couple in wedlock, receives from the groom a good fat fee. This idea explodes when the facts are looked into. At a gathering last night conversation turned on the topic mentioned above, and it was learned that the average is very much less than supposed. In this connection was related the illustrating a phase of personal meanness, an incident, the truth of which was vouched for. A resident of the county decided to marry, and the lady, being willing, the ceremony was performed at the clergyman's home. The groom, in an excess of gratitude, presented the clergyman with 50 as a good and sufficient fee. The good man was surprised at the limit, and feeling somewhat mortified, presented the coin to the bride, and left the room. Hearing an altercation a few minute afterwards, he found to his astonishment, that the groom was trying to get back from the bride the fifty cents. The lady objected, saying, "No, he gave it to me. Its mine."

Has Easy Insides

Improvement Number Twelve

Grinding, binding, blistering Insides

Foot-rite Easy Insides

The feet work harder than any part of the body. They must walk long distances behind the plow or on fatiguing city pavements, stand many tedious hours behind counter or before bench, or endure irksome confinements under desk or machine.

Do they deserve kind treatment? Yes! Do they get it? No! Man is kind to horses' feet—cruel to his own. He shoes his horse with skill and care to insure perfect comfort, but shoes himself with any old shoes—shoes that squeeze, pinch, deform and blister his feet.

If you want to be kind to your faithful, burden-bearing, hard-toiling feet, we'll tell you how. Call on the Foot-rite retailer. Don't be timid. You will find his door swinging inward but never outward to find a more welcome store. Let him fit you with a pair of Foot-rites. You'll find something unusual about their insides. You'll find your feet feeling almost as free, unconfined and comfortable as unshod feet. Why? Because Foot-rites are built with Easy Insides.

The Easy Insides are constructed with supple Normal-Calfskin in the uppers to give the feet a soft, soothing covering. With wrinkleless uppers free from hard, stiff creases which rub and grind the foot's top surface with emery-like roughness. With an inside shape that's the precise shape of your foot, due to the Foot-sculptured Last over which the inside was molded. And with a lot of other easy inside devices such as Toe-Freedom Uncollapsable Box Toes, Heel-Comforting Counters, Hurtless Instep Seams, Ivory-like Insoles, and "Won't Blister" Hooks and Eyes.

Foot-rite Easy Insides deserve the name of Kind Insides. Goodyear Welted sewn, every pair Anywhere in America, Canada or Great Britain—$4.00, $5.00 and $6.00.

One Witness Makes Emphatic Denial of Crooked Work

Vance Takes Stand and Entirely Repudiates Pritchett's Tale.

Also Says That Farr's Affidavit Was Unsolicited—Knew of No Wrongdoing at Elections—Never Heard of Switched or Spoiled Ballots—North Waterloo Becomes Involved Again—Farr Was Sober.

Toronto, Nov. 29.—James Vance, famous in several elections as an active worker in the cause of Liberalism, was the chief witness yesterday for the defence in the London conspiracy case.

He admitted that he was with "Tom" Lewis, "Jack" O'Gorman, "Alex." Smith, "Billy" Brant, "Bill" Mulloy and "Dan" Wiley in North Waterloo, but he denied altogether the narrative of J. Garrett Pritchett.

Vance was the first man to couple Mulloy and Wiley up with any outside deals.

He also swore that Farr made his famous affidavit when he was sober, and because he wanted to make it.

He denied any crooked work at any time, and when Mr. Lynch-Staunton asked why he had never gone after the newspaper for libel for charging him with "these atrocious crimes," Vance said he didn't want to do that.

Vance said he was assistant Liberal organizer for the province for five years, commencing in 1898. In all bye-elections it was the rule to send outsiders into the constituency.

"Did you know of any wrongdoing by any one or yourself in the elections mentioned in this enquiry?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"No."

He knew Pritchett in North Hastings, where he had gone to witness and said that his name was Roberts and was sent to help in the election. He would not tell who sent him.

"Oh, another alias," broke in Mr. Johnston. "Did you use him?"

Witness said he hadn't, on the contrary, he had warned others against him. He had not seen him in North Ontario. No money had been "used" in Hastings, affirmed Mr. Vance.

Mr. Johnston read from Pritchett's evidence where the latter said that he was sent to Brooklin to meet Vance, but witness emphatically denied ever having seen him there at all. He also denied that he had instructed Pritchett to spoil ballots. He had never heard of switching or spoiling ballots in the Liberal ranks, then or since. "Pritchett never had any dealings with me whatever," declared Vance positively.

"Did you every pay Pritchett $1 in your life. He says he got $50 from you?" asked counsel.

"Not a cent. He had never had a conversation with Pritchett at the Walker House, either."

"When did you first come to know O'Gorman?" Mr. Johnston wanted to know and was told in North Waterloo.

"That is not evidence," broke in Mr. Staunton. "Nothing has been said about North Waterloo," but Mr. Johnston insisted there had been, and witness went on to say that he first met O'Gorman in 1899. He never knew O'Gorman to wear a moustache.

Witness knew nothing of any irregularity in West Huron in 1899. He had met Farr in Toronto, to get him to go to Ottawa to give evidence. Farr was afraid he would get in trouble and said he was going to Dakota.

"I suppose Pritchett has nothing against you?" asked Mr. Staunton.

"Our relations were not very pleasant in North Hastings," admitted Mr. Vance.

"Pritchett looked you up at Bancroft?"—"He did."

"There was a protest in South Ontario—was there any charge of slipping ballots in that trial?"—"Not that know of."

"There was bribery on a large scale then and the election was voided?"—"Yes."

"Did you see O'Gorman there?"—"I don't recollect."

"Did you see Pritchett?"—"No."

The witness admitted that Alex. Smith was in charge of the Brockville election.

"You were in West Huron and there was a lot of ballot switching?"—"Yes."

Next to Vance, the most interesting witness of the day was Thomas Reid, brother of one of the defendants. He was examined by the defence counsel as to the affidavit which had been made by James Farr in reference to bribery and corruption in West Huron. Although Farr swore he was as "full as a fly" Reid swore that when Farr came to his office with Vance he was sober and knew everything he was doing. No inducements were held out to Farr to sign the statement.

Witness also told of Kelly, father-in-law of Ed. Sifton, coming to him and his brother, and threatening if Reid (the prisoner) did not pay up the money, he (Kelly) would bring back Sifton and "make it hot for the boys in London."

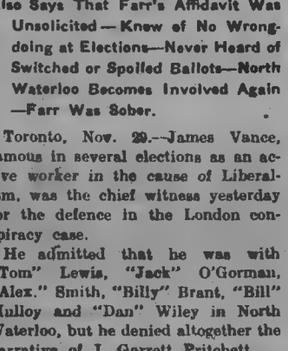
H. W. Bickle, a Toronto barrister, swore that he was present when Farr made his statement, and that he (Farr) was perfectly sober.

George King of Southwold, poll clerk at Middlemarch in West Elgin election, who acted under Pritchett, who was D. R. O., he had taken the oath and administered it to Pritchett.

William Coroneon of London, a poll clerk in the Hyman-Gray bye-election, swore that everything was regular in his polling booth.

He admitted that he was paid $9.50 by "Jerry" Collins.

John M. McIntosh, deputy returning officer, knew of no crookedness in the London bye-elections. He had never been appointed by any of the defendants, or any one else about anything irregular. He received $80 or $90 for acting as clerk in three contests. He knew O'Gorman lived in the Liberal committee rooms, but never saw anyone get any money there. Williams, Lynch, John A. MacDonald, Ernest Fitzgerald, George Bringhart, Benjamin Tripp and a score of other returning officers, one and all, swore that they did not know O'Gorman and that as far as they were aware there was no crookedness in the London bye-election.



HUGH MURRAY DEAD.

Masonic Grand Secretary Passes Away After Brief Illness.

Hamilton, Nov. 29.—Hugh Murray, grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Canada, A. F. & A. M., and one of the most prominent Masons in America, died unexpectedly at his home here about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. On Tuesday afternoon he suffered a slight stroke of apoplexy, but was thought to be recovering.

He was 65 years of age, and was born in Paisley, Scotland, coming to Hamilton in 1860. He was chief clerk in the Customs Department for a time, and in 1879 opposed J. M. Gibson in the Conservative interests in the Provincial election, being defeated. For twenty-five years he was a member of the Board of Education.

His Masonic connection was extensive. On Jan. 24, 1868, he was initiated into Acadia Lodge, No. 61, and was elected secretary in December of the same year. In 1873 he was appointed assistant grand secretary of the grand lodge; in 1874 was made grand junior warden; in 1877 was appointed D.D.G.M., and in 1882 was given the office of district grand master. In 1884-5 he was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and on the death of Edward Mitchell, grand treasurer in 1891, he succeeded to that position. In 1903 he succeeded to the grand secretaryship on the death of J. J. Mason. He was P.F.P. of St. John's Chapter, R.A.M., No. 6; P.T.P. of Godfrey de Bouilon Preceptory; K.T.G.M. of Murton Lodge of Perfection; P.M.W. Sov. Rose Croix Chapter, S. R.; P.G.M. of the Grand Lodge of Canada; past secretary of Grand Chapter of Canada; Lieut. G. C. of Moore Consistory, S.R.I.; grand secretary of the Supreme Council and grand chancellor of the Scottish Rite.

Mr. Murray was honorary president of the Tigers Football Club, and the game between the Tigers and Montreal, scheduled for Saturday, has been postponed.

STANFIELD WINS COLCHESTER.

Conservatives Capture Liberal Seat in Nova Scotia Election.

Halifax, Nov. 29.—John Stanfield carried the Conservative flag to victory in Colchester County yesterday. Stanfield's majority over his opponent, Charles Hill, is over 250, overcoming an adverse Liberal majority of 191 secured by the late member, now Judge Laurence.

The election was fought cleanly on both sides and good feeling existed, despite the strenuous character of the fight. The town of Truro gave Stanfield 305 majority, compared with 43 for the Conservative in 1904.

STEEL GIRDER COLLAPSED.

Two Lives Lost in Accident on Blackfriars Bridge, London.

London, Nov. 29.—A 20-ton steel girder, upon being placed in its position yesterday, in connection with the widening of Blackfriars' Bridge, collapsed and carried down with it the surrounding staging.

Twenty workmen were plunged into the river. Several were pinned down in the water under the wreckage. All, however, were rescued except two, and these lost their lives. Several of the men were seriously injured.

Immigration to Canada from the United States shows a decrease of 8 per cent. this year.

AGED HUSBAND'S CRIME

Brooklyn Business Man Shoots His Wife and Suicides.

Fired Two Pistol Shots as She Lay Asleep—Then Leaps From Window Into the Street—Falls Nine Stories and Is Instantly Killed—No Motive Is Known For the Murder and Suicide.

New York, Nov. 29.—John Whitley, one of the leading dealers in stoves, ranges and house-heating apparatus in Brooklyn, and vice-president of the Reliance Ball-Bearing Door Hanger Co., killed his wife with two pistol shots early yesterday as she lay sleeping in her room on the ninth floor of the Hotel Belleclaire, Broadway and 77th street, Manhattan. Whitley then leaped from the window into the street, being killed instantly by the fall. Whitley was 60 years old, and his wife 38. They had a home in the fashionable section in Brooklyn, but had been living temporarily at the Belleclaire.

No motive for the murder and suicide could be discovered. The police who endeavored to ascertain whether financial troubles may have been the cause, found in the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Whitley a check book on the Franklin Trust Co., showing that all the funds were exhausted, the last check having been drawn in payment of their hotel charges. The couple always lived lavishly, and there is no real evidence of any business reverses. A cab driver who saw Whitley's body, dressed only in pajamas, lying on the sidewalk, gave the first news of the tragedy. An immediate search of his apartment revealed the body of Mrs. Whitley stretched on the bed with two bullet holes through her head. She had evidently been shot while asleep, and there was nothing to indicate that she had ever regained consciousness. After the shooting, Whitley had apparently tried to write a note of explanation. On the dresser was found a blood-stained envelope, on which had been previously scrawled one or two words.

From the appearance of the rooms, it is believed that Whitley then attempted to send a bullet through his own brain, using a hand mirror to aid him in directing its course, but at the last minute lost his nerve and chose death in a dive to the street.

LUNCHED WITH EMPRESS.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux Honored In Japan—Emperor Indisposed.

Tokio, Nov. 29.—Hon. R. Lemieux, Postmaster-General and Commissioner of Labor, who is on a mission concerning emigration, had an audience yesterday and lunched with the Empress at the palace. The usual ceremonies were observed.

The Emperor was indisposed with a cold and unable to be present. K. Ishii, chief of the Bureau of Commerce of the Japanese Foreign Office, is expected on Nov. 30. After his arrival it is believed negotiations concerning emigration into America will proceed more rapidly.

End of Chinese Puzzle.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—In the Supreme Court a motion was made for special leave to appeal from a judgment of the Court of Appeal for Ontario affirming the judgment of the Divisional Court, which set aside a portion of a conviction on Ing Kong, for selling Chinese medicine containing alcohol in Toronto. The Supreme Court refused the application on the ground that the case was not of public interest.

Fixed Adjournment Proposed.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—Aaron A. Wright, M. P., of South Renfrew, is the author of a proposal to come before Parliament at its present session, providing for a fixed hour of adjournment for the House of Commons. Mr. Wright's idea is that 10.30 o'clock at night is late enough for the House to be kept in session, except it be under stress of most exceptional circumstances.

New Railway Commissioners?

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—In connection with the bill to increase the members of the Railway Commission, the names of William Whyte, general manager of the western division of the C. P. R., and D. Pottinger, general manager of the I. C. R., have been spoken of as possible commissioners.

Quebec Telegraph Burned Out.

Quebec, Nov. 29.—For the second time within a year the fire fiend assailed The Quebec Daily Telegraph, and yesterday the temporary quarters, which housed the office composing-room, were totally destroyed. The paper, however, was issued as usual.

Captain Killed by Train.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 29.—Captain James O'Leary, commander of the Canadian Government steamer Tyrian, while crossing the Intercolonial Railway track yesterday morning, to go down to the wharf to his ship, was run over by a train. He died three hours later.

Emigration Reforms.

London, Nov. 29.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Gilbert Parker, speaking to the Victoria League, urged the establishment of an organization for emigration to the colonies, in which British officials should be placed to meet the emigrants arriving.

Seven Dead In Fire.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 29.—Seven men are dead and two fatally injured, as the result of a fire in a two-storey brick rooming house at 1,002 Union avenue, caused by an explosion of gas early yesterday morning.

James McDonald was drowned at Port Dover by falling overboard from the tug Edna K.

Cheese Exports Decline.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—The receipts of cheese at Montreal from May 1 to Nov. 24, were 2,089,065 boxes, compared with 2,315,118 boxes for the corresponding period of 1906, leaving a shortage for this season of 276,051 boxes into Montreal alone.

The total shipments from the ports of Montreal, Quebec and Portland from May 1 to Nov. 24, were 2,031,258 boxes as compared with 2,232,839 boxes for the corresponding period in 1906, making a shortage of 201,581 in the exports.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market since Tuesday, as reported by the railways, were 95 carloads, composed of 1319 cattle, 1872 hogs, 1755 sheep and lambs, 46 calves and 2 horses.

Exporters.

None offered and none apparently wanted.

Butchers.

George Rowntree, who bought 240 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Company, reported prices as follows: Best on sale at $4 to $4.30; medium butchers and good cows, $3 to $3.70; common butchers and common cows, $2.25 to $2.75; canners, 75c to $2 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report a brisker trade for feeders and stockers at an advance in price, especially for cattle weighing from 1000 to 1100 pounds, as well as steers 800 to 900 pounds. The reason for the better prices and brisker trade is that many farmers have taken a notion at the eleventh hour to feed a few cattle, seeing that feed is coming down in price. The Messrs. Murby bought and sold 250 cattle during the week, of which they sold 200 to farmers on the market on Thursday. They quote prices as follows: Best feeders, 1050 to 1100 lbs., at $3.50 to $3.90; best feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $3.30 to $3.50; best stockers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $3.05 to $3.15; best stockers, 600 to 800 lbs., at $2.40 to $2.75; common stockers, unchanged at $1.50 to $1.75.

Milkers and Springers.

The offerings of milkers and springers during the week was not as large nor the quality generally as good as last week. Trade was not as brisk nor prices as high owing to the fact that the requirements from Montreal were not as great. Prices ranged from $34 to $60. The bulk of the best sold from $40 to $50 each.

Veal Calves.

Trade fair, prices steady at $3 to $4 per cwt., with a very few at $4.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were fairly large, trade steady, with prices as follows: Sheep $4, lambs $4.50 to $5.15 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris got 1573 hogs, and quoted prices at $5 for selects, fed and watered; lights, $4.75; stores, $4.50 per cwt.

British Cattle Markets.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—London cables are firmer at 10½c to 12c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10c per pound.

KILLED MAN BUT DIDN'T STOP.

Race Between High Speed Autos Has Fatal Result.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 29.—During a race between two high-powered automobiles at an early hour yesterday, James F. Grinnel, colored, was struck and instantly killed by one of the machines. The cars were driven by Frank J. Brown, son of former Governor Brown of this state, and James Elliott, a sporting man of Washington, D. C. Neither one stopped after the accident, but continued on their course. The police later arrested young Brown and his chauffeur. The police were unable to find Elliott.

Young Student Drowned.

Winnipeg, Nov. 29.—Isaiah Jones, a young Welshman and theological student at Wesley College, 23 years of age, was drowned in the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool yesterday afternoon. Just how the accident occurred is not known, as there were no witnesses to the tragedy.

It is presumed Mr. Jones was swimming when he was seized with a cramp. He was found in the pool by a couple of boys.

Killed by Rock.

Georgetown, Nov. 29.—James Forgrave of Glen William had his head crushed in by a rock while blasting in a quarry, and was killed. He leaves a widow and four children.

Played With Loaded Revolver.

London, Nov. 29.—Willie Hueston, aged 10, while playing with a loaded revolver, had the top of his left hand shot off. It may be necessary to amputate the arm.

Heavy Fine.

Kingston, Nov. 29.—For calling "scab" and threatening a non-union tailor, George Leader and W. J. Robinson, strikers, were fined $100 or one month in jail.

A Story of Absorbing Interest

The Rogue's March

"Is that so?" with an evil smile "Hey-day, but it's an artful one! Supose I told that there Daintree instead of the police? What then?"

Claire had suspected this, yet it took her breath away when it came. "So you are a professional spy!" she gasped. "I might have known it all along you vile woman, from your face!" To be sure she might have known it then for the sallow face turned a deeper yellow. The black eyes came as close together as the nozzles of a double barreled gun, to blaze as though both triggers had been pulled at once.

"Ah, yes! We don't all show it in our faces, do we?" hissed the woman "And which is the worst, I wonder—them that does or them that doesn't? Is it worse to cheat the man that's fond of you, like you've done, or to tell him, as I mean to do, that he's being cheated? You think you've found me out. He shall find you out. To make one lover pay for the other lover's defense—a pretty game—and 500 golden guineas a pretty price! But he hasn't paid them yet—no, and he never shall. You may take your oath to that."

"He must," said Claire in a whisper. "The trial begins the day after tomorrow. He has gone too far to draw back now."

"Not he, when I tell him all I know. He'd pay another five hundred to get your fellow hung. You know him, and you know that, too, as well as I do."

"I don't know it," said Claire, with a last brave effort. "I know that I have been more than once on the verge of telling him myself. But if you tell him—now—after all these dreadful days, well"—with a sob—"it will kill me, and there's an end of it. Oh, I am no match for a woman like you! Tell me what you want, and it is yours if I have it. Money? You shall have all I've got."

"Which don't amount to much," laughed the other. "No, but I'm glad to see you come to reason. Bothered if I don't admire your game too much not to want to see it out now it's got so far. Maybe I can lend a hand, but not for money. Here's your jewel box. You've got to make your faithful maid a few small presents."

"What do you think of me now?"

So trinkets rang like sovereigns in their tray as this vulture picked and chose among them and clawed first a sapphire ring.

"I've had my eye on this ever since I came."

"Then take it."

"Take it too."

"These here earrings that you never wear—you'll never miss them."

"Take anything you like."

"All right, then. Just to finish up I'll have the diamond pendant"—

"No. That you must leave."

"You said I was to take anything I liked."

"Well, it's true I hope never to have to wear it again. I shall not want it in my grave, and that's where I hope to go. Oh, oh! The sooner the better!" And the poor girl broke down completely.

"Stuff and nonsense, miss! And see here," generously, "all you've got to do when you want to wear them is to ask me, and I'll lend you any one of 'em you like and welcome! Now, then, what do you think of me now?"

And Claire, looking up through her tears, saw the woman decked out already, rings in her ears and on her finger, the brooch and pendant gleaming and glittering on her black stuff dress, and a quiet smile upon her wicked face. Claire could almost have smiled herself.

"And for these you'll hold your tongue until after the trial?"

"Till all's blue, you mean? I should think I would—and do anything you like, miss, to lend a hand."

"Then put those things in your pocket and be out of my sight! Now—now—before I sacrifice him for a fiend like you!"

And this was how Claire was followed along her narrow ledge by one who might push her from it at any moment, so that she had now not only her own feet to watch, but the treacherous hand behind her back as well.

CHAPTER XI.

A DAY or two before the trial, when Bassett called at the prison, Tom handed him a little, broken backed card, and the speaking eye, that had been dull and dumb for six long days, was once more eloquent with light and life. Bassett took the card gingerly between an effeminate finger and thumb and examined it with a critical brow. It was a pawn ticket for a suit of clothes.

"Well, my good fellow, and what have I to do with this?"

"Show it to my friend and pray him, in pity's name, to add to all his other noble kindnesses by redeeming me those things. It will be the greatest kindness of all!"

"What! To find you a change of clothes?"

"No; to help me look a gentleman at my trial. For months and months I haven't cared a rush what I looked, but once I did, and I do now. It came back to me last night when I found that pawn ticket in this old waistcoat pocket. I could hardly sleep for thinking what a sight I should be in court as I am. Oh, sir, you despair of saving me. I have seen it in your face all along. Then save my self respect, and I shall be as grateful as if it were my life." It was his self respect that had come back to him in the night.

The clothes arrived next morning—a brown frock coat with three inch lapels, velvet waistcoat and Cossack trousers with straps.

The first witness was the mechanic who had discovered the body. His testimony was very short. He had run straight for the police, leaving the blood stained cudgel precisely where he had found it in the grass. This witness was not cross examined, and the police officer whom he had summoned soon replaced him in the box.

When the finding of the body and its exact position when found had been duly demonstrated to the satisfaction of the court, and counsel for the defense had put a couple of questions, counsel for the crown informed his lordship that he proposed to take the medical evidence later. He would now trace the prisoner's connection with the crime, adducing in the first place what he conceived to be an adequate motive for its commission. Mr. Richard Vale was thereupon called, but added little to the evidence which he had given at Marylebone. The only difference was a cross examination more rough than telling, in which disgraceful admissions were accompanied with a dissipated smirk, but which elicited no essential point in the prisoner's favor.

On the other hand, this witness was again the peg upon which were hung the threatening letters. The letters were once more indisputed, and a passage in one of them caused the first sensation of the trial. "I warn you," ran the text, "that I would rather hang than starve. Unless you pay me I shall do one or the other, and don't you rely on dodging me much longer, for I am hunting you day and night and will do till I drop." The dead man's landlady and a club porter gave supplementary evidence. The latter had forwarded the letters to deceased and had caused the police to put a stop to prisoner's loitering near the club.

Now came a workingman whose face Tom had quite forgotten, but he swore to the prisoner as one of the two men to whom he had said good night as he passed them at the stile in the Finchley road on the night of Thursday, the 27th ult., about half past 10, and it seemed that at the inquest he had sworn to deceased as the other.

Tom's old friend and enemy, the hackney coachman, first swore to the prisoner as the man who had stopped his coach overnight and was then examined as to the entertainment of prisoner in his house next morning and his ultimate flight therefrom. Tom saw his counsel's eyelids twitching before he rose, and he anticipated one at least of the three successive points now scored in his favor.

"When the prisoner sat at your breakfast table," began Culliford, "did you then or at any subsequent moment notice anything in the nature of a blood stain upon his clothes or person?"

"No, sir; I can't say that I did."

"Can you say that you did not?"

Witness hesitated, but told the truth.

"No," said he; "I saw no signs of blood upon him either then or afterward."

"You saw no signs of blood upon the prisoner either then or afterward. You are quite positive, however, that the man who waylaid your fare in the Finchley road was the prisoner in the dock?"

"Quite positive."

"Then didn't you recognize him in the morning when your brother-in-law brought him to your house?"

"No, sir; I did not."

"What! Not when he was sitting at your own breakfast table?"

"I did not."

"Nor yet when you gave him the newspaper and he read you an account of the very crime with which he stands indicted? You suspected nothing, saw nothing suspicious in his manner, nothing familiar in his face?"

"No; not then I didn't."

"You suspected nothing and did not recognize him then, yet at a word from your wife you identified the prisoner with the man who stopped your coach, and you have so identified him ever since?"

Witness made the necessary admission, but attempted to explain matters, whereupon Culliford cut him short and, having gained the advantage which Tom had foreseen, passed on to one that was less apparent.

"To return to your fare," said counsel. "Did you notice any valuables upon his outer person? A watch chain? Rings? A breastpin in the stock?"

"I saw a watch chain and a pin—a diamond pin."

Mr. Sergeant Culliford sat down unexpectedly, but with an expression so satisfied that Tom lost much of the next evidence (that of the coachman's wife) in endeavoring to account for it. He had not succeeded when the court adjourned for luncheon, for the hour of acute perceptions was over and had left him dazed so that the venerable turnkey who had charge of him in the dock had to take him by the arm to make him leave it.

The principal witnesses of the afternoon were Mrs. Adcock, Jonathan Butterfield and the diminutive householder of Kew. Thus the trio who had made the world seem so kind a fortnight before now typified its cruelty, for the evidence of the first two was reluctant but damning and that of the last was supplementary in matter, but given with the officious venom and the transparent exultation of a personal foe.

After the international anarchist conference at Amsterdam, which has just concluded, she visited Paris, and is now on a three months' lecture tour in England.

She spoke on the labor struggle in America at the Holborn Town Hall.

In an interview, Miss Goldman said that the Amsterdam conference had been a great success.

"There were ninety delegates present from anarchists of all nations, and some very important points have been cleared up," she said.

"One of the most interesting is the decision to form in London an anarchist bureau, to which all anarchist groups and organizations throughout the world will be affiliated.

"This bureau will exist to aid, not to govern. Each affiliated group will retain perfect freedom of action and policy. One important duty of the bureau will be the collection of anarchist literature, so as to form the archives of the movement."

Miss Goldman, who hails from New York, has been for twenty years an enthusiastic upholder of anarchistic principles, and she will deliver lectures on social and economic subjects and on literature during her stay in England.

Asked as to the future of anarchy, she expressed herself as very hopeful.

"I am not going to say that a state of anarchy will come to-day or to-morrow," she remarked, "but it is coming very soon."

England, Miss Goldman thinks, has produced the finest anarchists of the world. Such men as Herbert Spencer and Darwin, she said, have done great things for the cause.

"England is undoubtedly the freest country in the world; I mean politically the freest, but in no country have I seen such depths of poverty, not even in America."

Although to a great extent in sympathy with them, Miss Goldman is by no means an advocate of what she describes as the "daggers and bombs" type of revolutionary.

Speaking of the acts of violence committed by anarchists of recent years, Miss Goldman said: "I never advocate such a course of action. I do not know that I should be prepared to go to such lengths myself, and, consequently, I do not feel justified in urging others to do so.

"On the other hand, I do not blame these extremists. The man driven to steal from sheer want, and the man driven to violence from sheer oppression, are both undeserving of blame."

In answer to a question as to whether she approved of the action of the anarchist, Morales, in attempting the lives of the King and Queen of Spain on their wedding day, Miss Goldman replied: "Society was responsible for creating such men as he, and society must take the consequences."

BEGGARS HAVE JOURNAL.

Also Have Directory In Paris, Giving Information About "Easy Marks."

"Here is something interesting," said the tourist. "It is a beggars' journal. It is published in Paris. The circulation is very small. I paid no less than $3 for this copy. It's all about beggars. There's nothing in it that is not of interest and value to a beggar. I'll translate a thing or two for you."

He translated:

"'To-morrow at 2 o'clock, the funeral service of Baron d'Uzes, the millionaire, will be held at the Madeline.'

"'At 3, fashionable weddings at the Trinite, St. Sulpice and Notre Dame.'

"'Wanted, for the Riviera, three crippled children.'

"'Our subscribers are urged to use their influence to prevent the re-election of M. Floquet, of Finisterre, who is fathering the bill to prohibit mendicants from standing at church entrances before and after the various services. We need not point out the loss to the profession that the passage of such a bill would entail.'

"'Wanted, a blind man who can play the flute.'

"'For sale, or to be let on long lease, a splendid corner in a busy and prosperous district, suitable for old woman with hand-organ.'"

In connection with the above the following was received by an American paper a few days since:

The Parisian police discovered a directory for beggars, directing them where to seek out victims. Each easy mark is fully described as to habits and purse, and some of the best known men and women in Paris figure under the head of "Ambitious ass, must be cajoled," or "Timid sheep—insist on being well paid on the spot," etc. The chief of police had copies made of the directory and their respective description to the "easy marks."

A Link With the Past.

The partial rebuilding of Canonbury Tower will no doubt save from early ruin one of the most interesting landmarks of London—almost as valuable a link with the past as Crosby Hall. Although the well-known brick tower probably dates only from Henry VIII.'s day, Canonbury House is supposed to have been built as long ago as 1362, when Poictiers was a very recent memory; and its palmiest days were probably at the close of the 16th century, when it had for tenant "rich Spencer," one of London's most famous chief magistrates. It was from Canonbury House, so tradition says, that young Lord Compton carried off Sir John Spencer's only daughter in a baker's basket under the very eyes of her father; and in the ditches close by a Dunkirk pirate, with a dozen of his men, lay in waiting to kidnap the wealthy merchant on his way home from the city. Lord Keeper Coventry lived for a time at Canonbury House, and in 1685 the Earl of Denbigh died there. Among later men of note whom this historic house has sheltered were Speaker Onslow, Humphreys, an 18th century poet of some repute, and, chief of all, Oliver Goldsmith, whose room is still pointed out on the first floor of the tower.

The fad for passeportout pictures is again growing a favorite for pretty pictures and are always appreciated. One can always find room for a couple more on the walls and every one has their favorite subject, some like scenery, others historical subjects, many like kittens and one boy in the city has the walls of his bedroom fairly covered with pictures of dogs—small and large. When mounted on a suitable background and passepartouted they are very pretty and inexpensive to make up. The Review has a large stock of pictures in sepia and colors, mounting papers and passepartout to match. Call and see them at the REVIEW Office, Hunter street. 3d

A Key for the Alarm Box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the Alarm Box. Break the glass, remove the Key, and open the Box; pull the lever down, when the Alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station and residences of the Firemen. Do not attempt to remove the Key from Box, as this can only be done by the use of a small Relieving Key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the Alarm is sent is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the Box nearest to the fire, and when an Alarm is sounded, the War number is given first, then a pause, and then the remaining numbers of the Box.

AN AFTERNOON COSTUME FOR A MISS

Style, elegance and general becomingness are displayed in this charming model in no uncommon degree. The gown is made of a novelty woollen in a pretty shade of brown, velvet of a darker shade being used for garniture. The prettily tucked guimpe is made of soft silk, though a lingerie fabric might be substituted. The dress consists of an overblouse cut in the new semi-oriental style, and a 7-gored skirt, the fullness of both being disposed in inverted pleats. The guimpe, which is included in the pattern, provides for either full-length or shorter sleeves. This pretty dress is suitable for modeling in any of the fashionable fabrics, 5½ yards 36 inches wide being needed for the dress and 3½ yards 22 inches wide for the guimpe.

4303—Sizes 14, 15, 16, 17 years.

The price of this pattern is 10c.

Leave your order and 10c at THE REVIEW OFFICE and pattern will be sent you by mail.

An Italian Romance Brought to Happy Conclusion in Prosaic Peterborough

Some time ago Mr. Joseph Ranco, an Italian residing in this city, and Camillo Mattucci, send a photograph of himself to Carmela La Poma, a young maid of twenty, residing in Italy. And for why, you ask? Well, because Camillo longed for a partner to share his joys and sorrows, and friend Joseph thought of the smiling belle, Carmela. When the damsel saw the portrait her heart was straightway pierced by Cupid's subtle dart, and she saw in its original her affinity.

To make a long story short she came out to this country about a week ago, and coming to Peterborough met Camillo Mattucci, and as a result of meeting this prettiest scene in romance was painted yesterday morning, when the couple were united in marriage by Rev. Father O'Leary.

After the wedding the contracting parties and about fifteen of their friends adjourned to the residence of the groom, 564 McDonald street, where they gathered round the festive board, talked over old Italy, and spent the day in celebration of the happy occasion.

INSPECTOR CONDEMNS THE ACTION

Havelock Board of Education Cuts Down the Number of Teachers

Havelock, Nov. 29th.—The School Board held their regular November meeting on Wednesday night of last week, when all the members and Inspector Lees of Peterborough, were present.

The main business of the evening proved to be the advisability of reducing the staff, and after the Inspector had advised the board not to take such a step, or was moved by Black, and seconded by Patterson, that the services of one teacher be dispensed with, and that the last teacher engaged, which happens to be Miss S. Treleaven, who is in charge of the Sr. 2nd class, be the one to be dismissed. The motion was carried, and the years and nays being called for, stood as follows.—

Yeas—Black, Patterson, Mathison, Herrington and Joyce.

Nays—Holderaft.

Mr. Joyce then moved that the salaries of all the teachers be cut down, but he could not get a seconder.

Inspector Lees has strongly condemned the action of the board in cutting down the teaching staff, and as many of the ratepayers are in sympathy with the inspector, the members of the board are likely to have a lively time.

To-morrow afternoon is the last time the Roller Rink will be open this season. Band in attendance. Admission and skates 25c.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY

To-morrow, Saturday, St. Andrew's Day, will be observed in the Anglican Communion as a Day of Intercession for Missions. The Toronto Diocesan Board of this Woman's Auxiliary, have asked that as far as possible, continuous intercession be offered by their members in the church on that day.

At St. John's a warm invitation is offered not only to members of the auxiliary, but to all others, both men and women, who can make time to spend even a few minutes in quiet prayer in the church for the coming of God's kingdom at home or abroad, the increase of workers and other needs.

Persons may enter and leave the church when they wish.

These personal intercessions will end with a short public service at 6 p.m.

Former Peterboro' Lady and Family Had Awful Experience

Methodist Church at New Liskeard Burned

MRS. JOHN SCOTT LIVED NEXT DOOR

House Was in Danger and Night Was Bitterly Cold

With all their furniture turned into the street and the prospect of their home being burned to the ground before morning, Mrs. John Scott, of New Liskeard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Butcher, Burnham street, east city, with her husband and family, had a trying experience last Sunday evening.

The Methodist church in that place was entirely destroyed by fire on the same night and Mr. and Mrs. Scott's residence, which is situated immediately next door, had a narrow escape. What damage was not done by fire was made up by water and breakage. Mrs. Scott on writing to her parents, described their experience as being one she hoped they would never have to go through again.

It was about six o'clock when the conflagration started from, it is said, an overheated pipe in the church. The night was dark and very cold. Just a few minutes before the fire broke out Mrs. Scott's youngest son was carried home unconscious, having been injured by falling on some ice. When Mrs. Scott looked out and saw the church ablaze she at once realized that her home was in danger. She hurried to tell her husband and timely precautions were taken to save the home.

Furniture was thrown out on the street, a number of articles, including many dishes were broken, and for a while confusion reigned. The injured boy was taken to a neighbor's and in less than half an hour a home which had previously been comfortable and happy was turned into a miniature lake and everything was scattered there and there. The shed of the house was only slightly burned, but water did the damage. The carpets were pulled off the floors, soaked with water, and laid on the roof to prevent it from catching afire.

So cold was the weather that Mrs. Scott's boots were frozen on her feet.

The occurrence was a regrettable one, inasmuch as the house had just been fitted up modernly at great expense. It was one of the finest houses in the New Ontario town and the loss by water is great.

Mrs. Scott's many friends in this city will be sorry to learn of her unfortunate experience and hope she will soon be comfortably situated in her home again.

Blood Poisoning Caused Death

Death of Mr. Robert F. Tate Formerly of Peterboro'

Many old friends in Peterborough will regret to learn of the death in Toronto of Mr. Robert Frederick Tate, son of the late John W. Tate of Peterborough and Belleville. Deceased passed away yesterday in Western hospital, Toronto, from blood poisoning, which resulted from a minor operation. He was resident engineer in Toronto for MacKenzie & Mann for seven years and previously chief engineer of the Midland railway. He left Peterborough about 22 years ago. The deceased was 53 years old and leaves a wife and six children. Mrs. Tate is a cousin of Mrs. J. A. Aylmer of Peterborough. The remains will be interred in Toronto to-morrow.

No Dicision Reached Concerning the Proposed New Park in the South End

A meeting of the committees appointed from the city council and Board of Education was held last night to go into the matter of converting the property east of the King Edward school into a park. Mayor McWilliams, Ald. Tovey and Wilson represented the city, and Messrs. R. Fair, D. W. Dumble and Dr. Morrison, the Board of Education. The city's representatives offered $2,500 for the land, with a guarantee to expend $5,000 in putting the ground in shape for a park, but the School Board Committee had been instructed not to sell for less than $3,000, and as a result no decision was reached. There was considerable discussion on the matter, on which the representatives of the Board maintained that $3,000 was a low price for the property, while, on the other hand, the Mayor and aldermen considered that $2,500 was a fair figure.

Ald. Duncan, not being present, the committee from the council did not care to commit themselves, and adjournment took place. The matter will be further considered and the council will likely come to a decision at the meeting on Monday night.

No Conviction Could be Made

Against Wm. McCrea Charged With the Non Support of His Wife

The case of Wm. McCrea, who was charged with the non-support of his wife and child, which came up before Magistrate Dumble at the police court last Friday, was settled this morning, the charge being dismissed. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared on behalf of the defendant and Mr. R. F. McWilliams for Mrs. McCrea.

According to the statute in regard to case, a man cannot be convicted unless it is proven that the wife and child are suffering and in a state of destitution. Mrs. McCrea and her child are being cared for and supported by her father. They are in a good home. The defendant is not guilty of a criminal offence and His Worship dismissed the case. All possible hope of bringing the two together again has been given up, the husband positively stating that he would have nothing whatever to do with the woman.

Mr. McWilliams said on behalf of his client that another information under the Ontario statute against McCrea would be drawn up.

Mr. Gordon stated that the proper jurisdiction for this case was at Toronto, for there was the home of the defendant.

FOR THE LADY WHO CALLS

Visiting List and Social Engagement Book—A Dainty and Useful Gift.

Those ladies who find it difficult to keep track of their social debts in the way of calls which have to be returned, invitations to various society functions which have been received will be pleased to learn that a dainty little book has been issued from the presses of the Review which will fill their need. The city has grown so rapidly of late years that it has become almost necessary for each lady to have a special reception day each month when her friends will be sure to find her at home. To keep a record of these will be an easy matter with one of these little books. They are prettily bound in blue linen, lettered in gold and printed on good paper. There are two pages for every day in the month, arranged, according as the day is, first Monday, second Tuesday, etc. At the back of the book are pages for invitations received, out-of-town addresses, special reception dates, and memoranda. One of the books would make a dainty and acceptable Xmas gift. The books are on sale at the bookstores at the price of 50 cents.

WELCOME FRENCH GUESTS.

Smithfield Butchers Greet Them With Marrow Bone Music.

After three days of strenuous sight-seeing, the deputation of the Paris Municipal Council, who came to London to see various aspects of corporate activity under the guidance of the city authorities, are back in the French capital.

When the Frenchmen were leaving St. Paul's station, the lord mayor sped the parting guests by expressing the hope that their sojourn in the metropolis would do much to stimulate the good feeling existing between the two nations.

This sentiment was reciprocated by M. Andre Lefevre, who warmly acknowledged the hospitable entertainment the corporation had extended to the visitors.

For the enjoyment of the Parisians a round of sight-seeing and entertainment had been arranged. The program included a visit to Billingsgate and Deptford markets, where the Frenchmen saw a display of British skill in fish packing and cattle killing. On another day they went to the Tower Bridge and the Tower of London, and here any records of old associations with France naturally aroused the liveliest interest.

Outside the White Tower M. Jolibois, pausing, remarked, "Surely an ancient building." The attendant warder, whose beefeater uniform had won the admiration of the councillor, found himself in difficulties. "In that tower," he remarked, "King John of France was imprisoned."

"Ah," laughed M. Jolibois, "we were second."

Inside the tower the coats of mail gave another Frenchman great joy. "Splendid," he said, "as a protection against the Apaches of Paris. I will order a suit at once."

Tenderly the Frenchmen touched the edge of the headsman's axe, and pointed to the groove made by it in the block. M. Jolibois numbered the wives on his fingers and thought hard. "But why," he asked, "did Henry VIII. remove their heads?" Mr. Deputy Pannell came to the rescue. "He wanted another wife," he said. "Ah," said M. Jolibois, "a simple matter of divorce. It was not a pleasant court of trial."

A visit was also paid to Smithfield market, where the butchers played a musical selection with marrow-bones and cleavers. The New Bailey was afterwards inspected; and when the sight-seeing had been finished the councillors went to Shepherd's Bush, where, at the Franco-British exhibition grounds, M. Lefevre laid the foundation stone of the Paris Municipal Pavilion, towards the cost of which the City of Paris is contributing the sum of $60,000.

A Guildhall banquet, where the lord mayor presided in full state, was the principal function at which official hospitality was extended.

SULTAN'S GEMS IN LONDON.

Guarded Day and Night in Vault Beneath City Street.

Locked up in the vaults of a bank near Charing Cross, a portion of the crown jewels and the personal jewelry of the Sultan of Morocco, valued at $5,000,000, are guarded night and day.

The valuables occupy a space less than the size of a bushel basket, and lie about thirty feet below the level of the Strand. Not far away, in the same vault, are several million pounds worth of "unclaimed" jewelry, some of which was deposited there during the French revolution. French people, fearful of being robbed during the Reign of Terror, secretly conveyed their possessions to London, and a vast quantity has been left uncalled for. The bank authorities have failed in every effort to locate the original owners' heirs.

It is learned that an offer of $125,000,000 as a loan on the Sultan's jewelry has been made, but the Sultan is anxious to "raise" much more than this to pay his army and obtain enough to meet the ransom demanded for the release of Kaid Maclean.

Kaid Maclean has for many years been the British agent in Morocco, for the bank which now has charge of the jewels, and in former years he was often seen in Moroccan attire making his way along the Strand to the bank. The story is told that he once brought to London a large quantity of gold ingots. When the officials arrived at the hotel to convey them to the bank they were entertained with a selection on the bagpipes by the kaid himself.

The Sultan's valuables are kept in readiness to be taken to any continental capital in case a prospective lender desires to inspect them. Henry Simmonds, who, with a staff of armed detectives, brought them to London, will probably act as custodian during the trip.

Girl as Italian Prince.

An extraordinary story of a naval pensioner's daughter, who masqueraded as an Italian prince, with a pedigree dating from B. C. 800, was told recently at the Worcestershire Quarters Sessions.

James Douglas, aged 84, a naval pensioner, and his wife and daughter were charged with obtaining goods from a number of tradesmen at Malvern by false pretences.

It was stated that the daughter posed as a wealthy Italian prince living in retirement. In communications to tradesmen, ordering goods or postponing payment, it was stated that the "prince" had immensely valuable properties in all parts of the world, that he paid a million sterling per annum to the Vatican, and that he kept fifteen grooms. The earthquake in Jamaica was in one case made the excuse for postponing payment. The mother acted as valet and housekeeper to the "prince."

The jury recommended the old man to mercy, and he was given the nominal sentence of one day's imprisonment. The two women were sentenced to three months' hard labor.

Flattering.

"Does George's latest picture flatter him?"

"I should say so. You wouldn't know it was George."

C. A. Magrath, of Lethbridge, has declined to accept a Conservative nomination.

Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm. The story of the "Semi-ready" idea in men's tailoring has been told and inspired by the enthusiasm of its creators.

Keeping in tune with the ever-changing fashion, refraining from that which is loud and strident, the Semi-ready Company have studied and improved their original conception of making fine clothes for men, using the choicest fabrics, they are ready for your inspection at the stage that will require at the most two hours to finish the Suit or Overcoat to your exact physique type.

It has been a great achievement and has revolutionized men's tailoring.

Board of Education Held Special Meeting Last Night

Communication From Engineer Hay Regarding the Romaine St. Sewer—Rate of Interest on Collegiate Debentures Increased—Deputation From Philomanthean Society Wait on Board.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening when the following members were present; Messrs. Robt. Fair, chairman. Dr. Morrison, Wm. Pringle, W.S. Robinson, W. H. Hill, D. W. Dumble, L. M. Hayes, G. Murrow, Dr. Burnham, John Orans and R. E. Ackerman.

The first thing that came before the Board was a communication from City Engineer Hay informing the Board that the sewer from the King Edward school on Romaine street to Aylmer street was not in a satisfactory condition. Considerable discussion followed on this matter which has been baffling the city aldermen for the past month. Dr. Morrison stated that the work had been carried out in a most abominable way and apparently those who were in charge did not understand it. Mr. W. S. Robinson also referred to the faultless manner in which the sewer had been constructed. The work had not been properly superintended and it was too late to make any repairs at this season of the year.

Mr. D. W. Dumble said that he had watched the progress of the building of the sewer and some days the men didn't know where to find the pipes.

Upon motion of Mr. W. S. Robinson, seconded by Mr. D. W. Dumble, the chairman of the King Edward school building committee, Mr. Wm. Pringle, was authorized to look into the matter and take whatever steps he deemed advisable.

COLLEGIATE DEBENTURES.

The question of Collegiate Institute debentures was next discussed. It was found that the debentures could could not now be sold at par, and the $31,000 found to build the new addition $61,0000 loaned to build the new school could not then be made up. To meet this sum the interest had to be increased to 5 per cent. and then they could be sold at par.

A resolution was passed increasing the rate of interest.

A COMMUNICATION

A letter from Mr. Richard Baker tendering his resignation as janitor of the North Ward school, was read and after some discussion, it was referred to the Property committee.

GRANTED $25.00.

Messrs. Colin Lees and Stanley Pringle, of the Philomathean Society of the Collegiate Institute, waited upon the Board last evening, soliciting from them their support in the publication of the school paper. In case of any deficit accruing from the getting out of the "Collegiate Echoes," a monthly school paper, the Society would like to have a grant of any amount up to twenty-five dollars from the Board to rely upon. Both young men presented their appeals in a masterly manner and were highly complimented by the members of the board. Upon motion of Mr. L. M. Hayes, seconded by Mr. Dumble, a grant of any required sum up to $25 was made. It may be that the assistance of the board will not be needed, but the promoters of the paper now feel safe in going on with the publication.

The meeting then adjourned.

Sergt. Major Rundle Writing His Own Autobiography

Former Resident of Peterborough Will Have Book Published Telling of His Military Experiences—Is Known to Many People Here.

From a reliable source it is learned that Sergt.-Major Rundle is writing his own autobiography at the request of several persons who were much impressed when they read an article written by him some time ago in the Toronto World, giving some interesting information of an English regiment with which he had been connected. Officers from the regiment wrote Sergt-Major Rundle when they had read the article referred to and expressed themselves as very much pleased with the able way he had dealt with his subject.

Sergt.-Major Rundle is well known to a large number of citizens in Peterborough, having been physical instructor at the Collegiate Institute and also Sergt.-Major of the 57th Regiment. He lived here many years and was thoroughly informed in the spheres of work with which he was identified. His experiences in the army and in different military circles have been many and of a varied character and his autobiography when published should make interesting reading.

Past Grands Put on Degree Work

Big Re-union of Old Timers at Oddfellow Hall

There was a large attendance at the regular meeting of Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, I.O.O.F, held last evening, when the Past Grands put on the work of the initiatory degree in fine style.

Two candidates were made acquainted with the mysteries of the order, and the work was particularly well done. All the chairs were occupied by former Past Grands. During the evening Bro. H. C. Stabler, P.G., who has been an Oddfellow for a quarter of a century, was presented with a veteran's jewel on behalf of the order, by Bro. A. McFarlane, P.G. Bro. Stabler made a suitable reply. After the business of the evening was concluded, adjournment was made to the banqueting hall, where a pleasant time was spent around the festive board. Bro. R. F. Morrow, P. G., presided, and the first toast honored was that of the King.

The next, proposed by Bro. Wm. Hill, P.D.D.G.M., was the Grand Lodge of Ontario. Brief replies were made by Past Grands A. McFarlane, T. C. Elliot, W. J. Green, Thomas McFadden and John Brownlee.

Bro. McFarlane offered the toast of the visiting brethren.

Messrs. Birchard, Moore, Garrow, Collier, Robinson, Van Blaricom and others responded.

Readings were given by Bros. David Moore and W. McLaren.

Brothers Thornton, Allan, Callander and Hill contributed an excellent vocal number. Mr. Geo. Schneider playing the accompaniment. The gathering broke up with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Peterboro' Men Gave Assistance

In the Initiating of Candidates at Norwood I. O. O. F. Lodge

Messrs. A. A. Fowler, Dr. McKercher, George Cairns, R. J. Matchett and J. A. Tully were in Norwood on Tuesday night, assisting in the initiation of four candidates in Norwood Lodge of Oddfellows. After the work of the evening the visitors were entertained to a banquet and a very pleasant time spent.

VERY GOOD HOME MADE REMEDY

Anyone Can Prepare This Mixture Which is Said to Relieve Catarrh

The coming months will be a harvest for the doctors and patent medicine manufacturers unless great care is taken to keep the feet dry, also dress warmly.

This is the advice of a well-known authority and should be heeded by all who are subject to rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles and especially catarrh. While the latter is considered by most sufferers an incurable disease, there are few men or women who will fail to experience great relief from the following simple home prescription, and if taken in time, it will prevent an attack of catarrh during the entire season.

Here is the prescription which any one can mix: Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

These are mostly vegetable ingredients and can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

The Compound Kargon in this prescription acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys to make them filter and strain from the blood, the poisons that produce all forms of catarrhal affections. Relief is often felt even after the first few doses and it is seldom that the sufferer ever experiences a return attack within the year.

This prescription makes a splendid remedy for all forms of blood disorders and such symptoms as lame back bladder weakness and rheumatic pains are entirely dispelled.

As this valuable, though simple, recipe comes from a thoroughly reliable source, it should be heeded by every afflicted reader.

"At Home" Given by T.A.S. Literary Soc. Last Evening

Was Attended by One Hundred and Sixty Guests and Was Very Enjoyable Function

The Literary Society of the T.A.S. held a delightful and largely attended "At Home" at the T.A.S. rooms last night. About one hundred and sixty-five were present and a thoroughly enjoyable time was spent. During the evening the guests played progressive euchre and the lucky lady and gentleman were Miss May Coster and Mr. R. Gilman, who obtained the prizes. The ladies prize was a handsome silk scarf, and the gentleman's a box of choice cigars. At the conclusion of the euchre games the guests sat down to an excellent full course supper served by Messrs. Coleman Bros. After the supper dancing was indulged in, splendid music being furnished by an orchestra consisting of three pieces, a piano and two violins. Miss Torpay presided at the piano, while the violinists were Messrs. P. Kane and W. Reid Dwyer. During the evening some well rendered and much appreciated piano duets were given by the Misses Doris of Keene.

This is the second "At Home" held this year under the auspices of the Ladies' Literary Society and the success of both functions reflects much credit on the committees in charge.

AMUSEMENTS

GUS. WEINBURG AS "THE BURGOMASTER."

Pixley & Luder's famous musical comedy, "The Burgomaster," will be the strong attraction at the Grand, Monday, Dec. 2nd. Gus Weinburg Ruth White, the two originals in the parts of Peter Stuyvesant and Willie Van Astorbilt, will be the featured members of the cast, and there will be an especially strong acting company, and also a chorus of 50. The costuming is exceptionally handsome, having been made for this production by Marshall Field, of Chicago, and the production is a large one. Several changes have been made in book, to freshen it.

How the Potter Moulds the Clay

Some Interesting Information About a Peterboro' Industry

A representative of the Review visited the pottery in the south end of the city, and was greatly interested in the work being done there. Mr. Rawlings, the genial proprietor, gave a demonstration of the tractability of the clay in the hands of a skilled operator, and from a lump of material thrown on the turning wheel, moulded with his hands, a jug that underwent a kaleidoscope series of changes, using first a jar, next a bottle shaped jug, and numerous other forms followed in rapid succession, the willing clay apparently adjusting itself easily easily to the fancy of the workman. At present a good deal of attention is being given to the making of fancy pottery in vase and other shapes to order, for hand painting for the Christmas trade, a great variety of designs being wanted for this class of trade.

Slipped on the Icy Street and Broke Her Arm

Mrs. M. Boates, Boswell Ave. Fell on George St. Last Evening

Mrs. Mary Boates, who resides at 20 Boswell Avenue, was the victim of a painful accident last evening, between five and six o'clock. The lady, who is middle aged, was walking north on George street, when opposite the store of Mr. T. H. Adams her feet slipped on the ice and she fell violently to the pavement. She was picked up and carried into Mr. Madill's drug store. Dr. Cameron was called and found that, in addition to receiving a severe shock, her left arm was broken. The injured limb was set and Mrs. Boate was removed to her home.

Recommend the Calling of Tenders

A meeting of the finance committee of the city council was held last night when a number of accounts were passed and some other routine business transacted in preparation for the council meeting on Monday night. It was decided to recommend to the city council that next year the purchasing of all iron castings required for manholes, grates, etc., be done by tender. At present the castings are bought from local firms as required, and at ourrent prices. It is considered advisable to do the buying by tender.

THE FINANCIAL EFFECT

Financial stringency may not long be continued, but while it is passing, it is like a dose of "grippe. Most people will be glad when it is over. The effect is being felt in many places in Canada, though not nearly as keenly as across the border. This is in a measure due to the elasticity of our currency, the stability of our banking institutions and the conservative character of our investments. The financial grippe has been severe across the border. The panic in New York has been in existence only a month, but the following will give the average Canadian some idea of its extent and terrible effects;

Ten banks in this city have suffered runs, some of which forced suspension.

Thirty-five banks in other cities suffered runs.

Eighteen deaths have resulted, either suicides or through sickness brought on by worry.

Three men have been indicted and arrested for bank fund juggling; at least four others are likely to be.

Fifty-four banks in other cities suspended.

About $125,000,000 has been withdrawn from banks in this city, much of it, however, to be redeposited in other banks.

$535,000,000, estimated, has been withdrawn from banks elsewhere.

Gold engaged from abroad, $31,225,000.

Cities over 100,000 population using clearing house certificates, 23.

Amount of clearing house certificates outstanding here, $75,000,000.

Mills and factories closed or partly suspended, 125.

Number of employees out of work, 125,000.

Number of factories and mills assigning, 14.

Amount of money involved in failures, $28,208,000.

AN EFFECTIVE REPLY

In the Russell theatre, Ottawa, on Wednesday night, at a monster demonstration in his theatre, Mr. R. L. Borden, the popular Conservative chieftain, made a trenchant reply to the charges of "Slippery Bill" Pugsley, about an alleged Conservative campaign fund of $500,000 which the Minister of Public Works contends that the Conservatives used for corrupt purposes. Mr. Borden made a fair, straight proposal and it is now the duty of Mr. Pugsley to either accept the challenge or withdraw his scurrilous statements.

"During my absence in the West certain members of the cabinet, and especially the present minister of justice and the new minister of public works have made attacks upon the Conservative party based altogether upon their own personal assertions," remarked Mr. Borden. "If their allegations are true they simply assist my advocacy of such amendments as will bring our federal enactments up to the effective standard of the British electoral law, but apart from that I desire to say to both these gentlemen that if they are possessed of information touching the existence and illegal use of a Conservative campaign fund in 1904, or at any other time, the best course is to have a thorough and effective investigation into all campaign funds at the last general election. Many statements of a very interesting character have been made to me as to the amount and source of the Liberal campaign fund in that year, to which I have never made any public allusion, because the information was not based upon evidence which had been brought out in any court or before parliamentary committee. Let me repeat to Mr. Pugsley what I said in Winnipeg on this subject: Let a royal commission be appointed, one member to be named by the government and another by the opposition; let these two select a third, and let this commission be invested with full power to make a thorough and exhaustive investigation into the campaign funds of both parties, and the uses to which they were applied. If he is prepared to go thus far, well and good. We shall abide by the result. But if he is not thus prepared, his vaporings can only bring him into deserved contempt. I shall be ready to go before any such commission and give evidence of every fact within my knowledge relating to the subject which he has mentioned. And I challenge him and his friends and his mysterious informants to declare or to prove that I have ever authorized or connived at the illegal expenditure of a single dollar of any campaign fund, whether in 1904 or at any other time. My public utterances on this subject are well known and my friends throughout Canada know that my private declarations have been the same as those which I have made in public."

The speech from the throne at Ottawa is not such a ponderous article, but that Mr. Hall will be able to move it quite easily on Monday next.

One of the greatest drawbacks of to-day is the man who "don't know." You can find him anywhere. Inquire about a matter of general interest, something that he should be familiar with and the invariable reply is "Don't know." If some people would take pains to inform themselves on different matters they would be in a position to answer questions which naturally they should be expected to answer. Try to get out of the "don't know" and "knucker" blues.

The Conservatives won a great victory in Colchester, N.S., yesterday. John Stanfield defeated Charles Hill, the Liberal candidate, by 198 majority. This blow is a heavy one to the Government, who put its strongest artillery in this field, yet its forces were routed. The Conservative achievement of yesterday is a grand one, and is significant to the future. It is a break in the Liberal representation from Nova Scotia, and is a good omen of what may be expected at the next election.

The Orillia Packett says: If the people of Peterborough are half as silly as the newspapers of the town have made them appear, since the beginning of this ridiculous walking craze, room ought to be found for a good many of them with Dr. Beaton at the asylum.

However, it is better to be walking than having a town in such a condition that it is necessary to run an asylum. All the persons from Peterborough sent to the big Orillia institution were driven to insanity by reading the Packet's editorials.

Since Jimmy Reynolds has positively declined to enter into another walking contest with David Hartley, Manager Stevens is said to be after a new competitor. He has wired a challenge to President Roosevelt for a three hours' contest. The chief executive of Uncle Sam's domain is already in training, as a Washington despatch, dated Nov. 24, will show; The President went for a three hours' walk in the rain this afternoon, followed by the Secret Service guards. When the little party returned to the White House the pedestrians were covered with mud and soaked to the skin. During most of the time that the President and his companions were away from the mansion the rain fell in torrents, and a frequent intervals the downpour was mixed with snow and sleet. The President returned in high spirits, apparently none the worse for his drenching. The Secret Service men looked tired.

TOOL MAKERS HELD "AT HOME"

In New Conservatory Hall Last Evening—A Great Success

The "At Home" held last evening in the new Conservatory hall by the tool makers of the city, was a grand success and was much enjoyed by all present. About seventy-five couple tripped the light fantastic to the strains of excellent music provided by the opera house orchestra. The programme of dances was a good one, introducing the new Veletta waltz. The floor was in splendid condition, adding much to the pleasure of the pastime. The committee in charge of the affair were Messrs. Chas. Comey, Art McAuliffe and Thos. Henderson and they deserve credit for the successful manner in which the arrangements were carried out.

The dancers dispersed about one o'clock.

Canada's Statesmen Gather And Parliament is Opened

Session Inaugurated Yesterday at Ottawa With Brilliant Display

Speech From Throne Indicates Completion of the Quebec Bridge—Control of Telegraphs and Telephones by Government Foreshadowed—Extension of Provincial Boundaries—Debate on Monday.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—With all the usual pomp and ceremony Parliament was opened yesterday.

The floor and gallery of the Senate chamber wer taxed to their utmost to accommodate those who wished to witness the function.

Through the stained glass tiles of the ceiling the light shone in soft and subduing tints on the brilliant scene.

His Excellency the Governor-General, Earl Grey, occupied the throne, on the left of which sat Countess Grey and her daughters, while on the right was Lady Laurier and other distinguished guests.

His Excellency wore the uniform of a Privy Councillor, his breast glittering with orders.

The chamber presented a varied and animated scene. The rich and gorgeous gowns of the ladies, the brilliant scarlet robes of the Supreme Court judges, the silken gowns and lace ruffles of the law clerks, together with the gay uniforms of the many officers attending the ceremony, all went to make up a brilliant tout ensemble only to be witnessed at rare intervals.

The Governor-General arrived in a superb equipage drawn by four horses, and attended by his aides-de-camp and a squadron of cavalry.

He was received with the national anthem, the guard of honor in front of the tower presenting arms as His Excellency descended from the carriage amid the booming of the artillery at Nepean Point.

EARL GREY.

Earl Grey at once proceeded to the Senate chamber and Black Rod was despatched to summon the Lower House to hear the speech from the throne.

Speech From Throne.

The speech outlined the principal items of legislation to be gone into and expressed congratulation on the remarkable extension of trade, far exceeding any previous year, the result being that the revenue has been sufficient to cover all charges of every kind, including a heavy outlay for the National Transcontinental Railway and leaving a surplus of over three millions to be applied to the reduction of the public debt. Gratification was also expressed at the large number of immigrants coming from the British Isles, and reference made to the important results of the recent Colonial Conference. It was announced that Parliament will be asked to give sanction to the new Franco-Canadian trade treaty, and also that Canada will join with Newfoundland in referring the international fisheries disputes on the Atlantic coast to The Hague tribunal. Mention was made of Hon. Mr. Lemieux's mission to Japan, and the satisfactory progress being made toward the settlement of the question of Oriental immigration; of the good progress being made on the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway, and of the rapidly-increasing revenues of the Postoffice Department, the surplus earnings of which will be devoted to bettering the service.

The Quebec disaster was also referred to, and the intention of the Government to proceed with the completion of the bridge within a reasonable time was announced.

The speech went on to say that the time has arrived when the public requires telegraph and telephone companies holding Federal franchises to be placed under Government control. A bill will be introduced for that purpose.

Among the measures to be submitted is a bill for the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba and of other provinces, also a bill to provide for the issue of Government annuities for old age, a bill respecting insurance and bills to amend the Election Act and the Dominion Lands Act.

This done the Commons returned to their own chamber, and were then in readiness for the business of the session.

Five Members Introduced.

Five new members were introduced. The Government had three new supporters to present to Mr. Speaker, while the Opposition had two. The entry of these, after the return of the Commons from the Red Chamber giving occasion for some enthusiasm on both sides.

Hon. Dr. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, came in between Sir Wilfrid and Hon. Mr. Fielding, and Hon. George P. Graham between Hon. William Paterson and W. S. Calvert. Then Mr. Borden introduced Major Beattie of London, and C. L. Owen of London, F. D. Monk and W. B. Northrup, assisting. The last to be brought in was A. M. Martin, who keeps North Wellington in the Liberal column, Sir Wilfrid and H. H. Miller were his sponsors.

Debate on Monday.

Sir Wilfrid moved that the address in reply to the speech be taken into consideration on Monday, and a committee to strike the standing committees was named by the Premier. Sir Wilfrid, in reply to Mr. Borden, expressed the hope that the committee would be named without delay, in order to facilitate the close of the session, informed the House that early next week the names would be submitted.

LADY GREY.

The convention respecting commercial relations between Canada and France was laid on the table by the Finance Minister, and public accounts for the nine months ended March 31, were brought down.

HELD UP RAILWAY STATION.

Night Staff Trussed Up by Armed Men Who Got $47.

Prescott, Nov. 29.—A bold hold-up at the G. T. R. depot took place at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Two masked men threw rocks through the ticket-office window and then covered Night Operator Gamble and Night Baggageman Tyner, who were in the office at the time, with a revolver.

After gaining admission to the office, the men were tied and the till rifled. They got about $47 and escaped, leaving the two victims tied. Operator Gamble succeeded in releasing Tyner by untying the ropes with his teeth.

It is supposed the men belong to an organized gang who have been working east in the Province of Quebec. On Tuesday night the store of C. H. Thompson was entered by burglars.

Five Drowned in Collision.

New York, Nov. 29.—The Herald has received the following cable despatch from Cartagena: A fatal collision occurred last Thursday evening 25 miles east of Gibraltar, between the Cap Negro, a Belgian coal steamer, bound for Marseilles from Sunderland, and the Helvetia, an Italian steamer, bound for Lisbon from Marseilles. The Belgian vessel's bow crashed into the Helvetia's starboard side, sinking her. Four of her crew succeeded in jumping on board the Cap Negro, and subsequently the Helvetia's captain and nine men were picked up, while the boatswain, three sailors and a woman passenger, Adila Sala, 22 years old, of Lisbon, were drowned.

Arm Terribly Mangled.

London, Nov. 29.—Alexander Southam, a young man 17 years of age, living at 2 Dundas street, met with a very painful accident while feeding a press at the London Printing and Lithographing Co.'s works yesterday morning.

Young Southam in some way while feeding the paper into the press got his elbow caught in some gearwheels, and although his partner reversed the machine at once, Southam had practically all the skin and muscles torn from one side of his arm for a distance of about eight inches above and below the elbow.

Moors Invade Algeria.

Paris, Nov. 29.—Official advices received here from Oran, Algeria, declare that a portion of the Moroccan army invaded Algeria Wednesday. The French were forced to retreat and in the fighting they lost 11 men killed and 15 men wounded. Later, however, they were reinforced and succeeded in driving the Arabs back across the frontier.

Directors Were Ashamed.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—It was at the request of the directors of the Y. M. C. A. that the local press made no mention of Sir Frederick Borden's address when he contributed $1,000 to the association. Since then The Calgary Eye-Opener's charges have been given publicity, and the directors had hoped the engagement would be cancelled. It wasn't.

Bowling Alleys to be Installed

At the Y.M.C.A.—Will be Ready Next Month

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. last night, it was unanimously decided to install two bowling alleys at once. A committee was appointed to receive estimates for the alleys and push the work forward as rapidly as possible. Mr. Fletcher, representing the Brunswick Balke, Collender Co., of Toronto, was present and gave some information regarding the alleys they put in. It is expected the alleys will be ready for use early in the new year.

Galbraith Makes 3 Miles in 15.46

Should Make a Dangerous Competitor in 3 Mile Event at Local Harrier Meet

Last evening at the Central indoor track Lister ran three miles in 16.15. This was the last of the trials to decide who should represent the Yonge street "Y" in the special three mile race at Peterborough on Tuesday. As Galbraith made the course in 15.46 on Monday evening he will make the trip with bright chances of winning, as the Peterborough track is very small and he is the only Toronto runner entered thoroughly acquainted with this kind of track.—Toronto News.

SECURED BIG LEAD IN THE FIRST HALF

Port Hope Senior Basketball Team Suffer Defeat at Hands of Locals

Port Hope senior basketball team went down to defeat before the local quintette at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last night by a score of 35 points to 19. The visitors were badly outplayed in the first half, which ended 27—1 in favor of the home team, but in the second period the Lakeside aggregation got going and scored 18 points to Peterborough's 8. The visitors showed poor judgment in their shooting in the first half and missed many golden opportunities to score. There was a marked improvement in their playing towards the finish, and they had the big share of the game, but Peterborough's lead was too large to be pulled down. The match was free from roughness and exceedingly fast at times. Combination plays figured largely in the scoring, and the home team excelled in this respect. About 75 spectators were in attendance and good plays on either side were liberally applauded.

The teams were as follows:—

Peterborough.	Port Hope.
Defence
L. Dobson	N. Thompson
M. Darling	G. Garnett
Centre
H Staunton	W. Rankin
Forward.
G Miller	N Davis
H. Crossman	N. Jewell

Port Hope Spares—Record and Davis

Max Dobson refereed the first half and F. Steer, of Port Hope, the second period. Both gave every satisfaction. The latter is the physical director of the Port Hope Y.M.C.A. physical department.

During the half time intermission "Ted." Daley gave an exhibition of gymnastics on the mat. His work was very clever and he was given an enthusiastic reception. His grotesque make-up added considerably to the exhibition. Some of his feats were above the average.

The Port Hope boys are a gentlemanly lot and played the game all the time.

CURLING CLUB CHOOSE SKIPS

Membership Fee Increased to $7 —Rink Ready Next Week

At a meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club, held last evening, there was a good attendance. President C. W. Brown presided. It was decided to increase the annual membership fee to $7. It is expected that Mr. Angus McIntosh will start to make ice on Monday next, and that the rink will be in readiness for curling the latter part of next week.

SKIPS ELECTED.

The following skips were chosen for the year:—Messrs. W G Ferguson, S Ray, C N Brown, T Rutherford, J E Counsel, D Davidson, D Cameron, Dr. Greer, C Rutherford, W G Morrow, R Neill, R M Waddell, E F Matthews, S Clegg, S T Madd, Thos. Brightman, D Bellegham, G Fitzgerald, R Hicks, W J Thompson, E B Clegg, D Hall, H R H Kenner, R J. Winch, Jas. Bogue, W E Talbot, C E Frost, Dr. Wightman, A. Moore, H Foote, W Mellroy.

Final Rugby Practice at Y.M.C.A. Last Night

The rugby team had a final practice at the Y.M.C.A. last night, when signals were worked out. The boys have the signals operating like clock work, but will depend mostly on their running and punting when they face the inter-provincial champions. The whole team has worked faithfully and consistently to get into shape for the game, and if they are defeated, it will simply be on account of their being up against a better team.

Sporting Comment

Down in Montreal they are asking; "Where is Peterborough?" and after Saturday's game the answer will come quite naturally; "Nowhere."—Toronto Telegram.

Victorias never asked the above question.

Doc Wilson, of Brighton, is the latest star in the world of walking and is after the records on the lake front. Brighton is the town where Paddy Carroll, who formerly was employed at the Oriental, is joint proprietor of the Central Hotel. When Paddy was around here he was a clever athlete and made walking one of the special means of getting into condition. He should be able to make the ambitious Doc Wilson extend himself if he ever felt inclined to take man on in a walking match.

The Toronto Star says:—

The chances are that the C.A.A.U. will follow up its invasion of the Federation stronghold at Montreal by a crack at the American Amateur Union in its own backyard, New York.

Tom C. Flanagham of the Irish-Canadians, to-day received a proposition to run a strictly Canadian amateur athletic Union meet in Madison Square Gardens, New York, and in Boston, and he will lay the matter before the C.A.A.U. officals

In the near future a few enthusiasts in the manly arts of boxing and wrestling will probably arrange to meet at regular intervals in a room fitted up for the purpose of indulging in friendly workouts with the gloves and on the mat. The idea is a good one, and there is no reason why suitable representatives of both the above games could not be sent to Toronto in the spring to compete creditably in the amateur tournament there. In the wrestling line particularly, Peterborough has some exponents who, if they knew the fine points should make pretty formidable amateurs.

FIVE ENTRIES FOR SPECIAL THREE MILE

George Adams Will Represent Hamilton Y.M.C.A. at Local Indoor Meet—Entries Close To-night

Hamilton Y.M.C.A. has forwarded an entry for this special three mile race at the big athletic meet at the Brock street rink next Tuesday evening. The city with the mountain in the background will be represented by George Adams, who ran second to Tom Longboat in the King's birthday race at Montreal, and made an excellent showing in the Herald race at Hmailton at Thanksgiving. Adams is reputed to be a cyclone for short distances, and the Hamilton sporting fraternity are looking towards him as the winner of the event at Peterborough. Galbraith will represent the Central Y.M.C.A., and Jack Tait the West Enders. The field for the special three mile race will therefore be as follows:

Peterborough Harrierra — Ernie Wilson.

Irish-Canadians—Percy Sellen.

Hamilton Y.M.C.A.—George Adams.

West End Y.M.C.A.—Jack Tait

Central Y.M.C.A.—Braden Galbraith.

This will be one of the greatest short distance races ever pulled off in Canada. Percy Sellen is the Canadian five-mile champion, with a record of 25.36, and the Irish are confident that he will win. Wilson, however should be there at the finish, although it is difficult to pick a winner from this quintette entered.

Secretay Glover states that the entries are coming in rapidly, and that many of the events will have to be run off in heats. Entries must all be in to-night, and the complete list will be published tomorrow.

Seats are on sale at Sanderson's jewellery store, and are going rapidly. From present indications the rink is going to be packed.

The finishing touches were put on the cinder path to-day, and those who have entered will find it in good shape for training purposes to-night.

RUNNING

Mr. Fred McGrath, the local sprinter, who can make most of them extend themselves in a hundred yards dash, has been invited to go to Toronto and become actively identified with the Irish Canadian Athletic Association in the Queen City. Owing to the fact that he is reluctant to give up his position in this city, he has decided not to leave here. He is a member of the Irish Canadians.

OFF TO-NIGHT FOR MONTREAL

Hurtubise Left This Morning—Remainder of Team Go To-night

Hurtubise left for Montreal this morning, and the other members of the team will leave on the C.P.R. midnight to-night on the special sleeper provided for them. If the Montreal players take Hurtubise as a sample of the avordupois capacity of the other members they will certainly do some tall figuring until the whole outfit arrives. The players had their concluding workout preliminary to the match at the Y.M.C.A. last night, and will be in the pink for the wrestling contest. The boys are expressing no opinion as to the outcome of the match, but will simply strive their mightiest to bring to Peterborough the distinction of the Canadian championship. The following members of the team and spares leave tonight: Muthern, Quinlan, Colledge, Crough, Connors, Dickson, O'Brien, Clarke, Denneard, Dillon, Fitzgerald, Crowley, Cariff, Davidson. Secretary McDonough and Dr. Williams, Keene, will be company the steam.

WANTS TO MEET HARTLEY

William Irwin, a West End walker, is anxious to meet Hartley, the Peterborough walker, in a 12-hour grind.—Toronto World.

THE RING

San Francisco, Nov. 28.—Last night Al Kauffman was awarded the decision over Jack 'Twin' Sullivan, at the end of 25 rounds, in their fight before the Colma Athletic Club.

ATHLETICS

The Irish-Canadians Athletic Club will send a team to the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. indoor meet Tuesday, December 3, but who will go in is still undecided. The chances are that W. F. Cumming, Hilton Green and Percy Sellen will go down for the three-mile race, and W. J. McIlmurray and Lou Marsh have been entered for the 50 and 220 yard dashes and will go down if they can get into any sort of shape —Globe.

Last night's News contains an excellent cut of Bredin Galbraith, track runner, who will represent the Central Y.M.C.A. at the Harriers meet.

And They Are at It Down There

Colborne, Nov. 27.—One afternoon last week, Mr. James Worrell, J. D. Lundy, C. A. Post and Thos. O'Donoghue walked from Colborne to Brighton and return, a distance of sixteen miles, in four hours and twenty minutes. The boys on their return, seemed none the worse for their trip, and think they will try to reduce the time some day this week.

OBITUARY

MRS. A. RANNEY.

The death occurred last evening of Mrs. Aggie Ranney, at her late residence, 345 Rubidge street. The deceased was the widow of the late Charles Ranney and had resided in this city for many years. She was a devoted Christian and prominently identified with St. John's church.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

May Attend the O.A.C. Convention

Mr. Wm. Miles May Take up Some Samples of Large Potatoes

Mr. Wm. Miles, Weller street, has received an invitation from the O. A. C., Guelph, to attend the convention there on Dec. 9th, 10th and 11th, when matters of interest to agriculturists and horticulturists will be discussed, and adressed delivered by several prominent speakers along there lines. Mr. Miles, who has achieved quite a reputation in the matter of producing mammoth tubers, intends to take samples of this subterranean fruit with him to Guelph should he be able to accept this invitation, and will probably speak briefly on the subject of potato growing.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams Breaks His Wrist

Yesterday evening while walking north on Water street, Mr. J. B. McWilliams was unfortunate enough to fall and break one of the bones in his wrist. The accident was a very painful one.

INSANE DEAL IN SHEEP.

Inmates of Asylum In Ireland Make Money Out of Sheep Farming.

A special committee recently reported to the Asylum Management Board of Donegal that an inmate of an asylum in the county had while there been dealing in sheep for the past six years. He had taken land for grazing them and now owned a number of sheep. It was further reported that asylum attendants had taken land from this inmate and had grazed sheep thereon belonging to themselves, and that at frequent intervals during the past six years the inmate had been allowed out of the asylum to transact business at fairs in charge of attendants who were, it is alleged, interested with him in sheep dealing. On one occasion the inmate received a telegram regarding the sale of sheep, and at another time was paid in the asylum grounds by a man to whom he had sold sheep. The assistant medical superintendent was instructed to make inquiries into the alleged action of the attendants, and the subcommittee recommended the governor to see that the inmate's sheep dealing profits were applied towards the obliteration of the account for his maintenance.

Want Censorship Abolished.

A petition signed by a number of the most prominent dramatists, novelists and critics of England, for the abolition of the office of the censor of plays, will be presented to the Prime Minister in about a month's time.

Already the document bears the signatures of some of the most distinguished names in the literary world.

The matter, which has been simmering for months past, has been brought to a head by the continued ban of Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna" and Edward B. Garnett's play, "The Breaking Point," which was intended for the Haymarket Theatre.

The signatories wish it particularly to be understood that they are animated by no feeling against Mr. Redford personally, their contention being—and this is the whole point of the matter—that no censorship is exercised in any other department of art.

The Bo'sun's Pipe.

Of late years there has been a tendency for the bo'sun's pipe to be heard very infrequently in our modern fleet. Now, in order to preserve the art of piping in the navy, the Admiralty has directed that 10 per cent. of boys in training establishments are to be instructed in such familiar and traditional calls as the following: Call hands, lash up and stow, reclers, heave round capstan, walk back capstan, haul taut, hoist away, high enough, pipe dinner, pipe down, pipe side, call away boat, call away galley, stand by, wash clothes and sweepers.—London Telegraph.

THE MILK TEST COLLECTIONS

ITALIANS TO SAIL FOR HOME

Twelve Italians, who left the city this day before yesterday, will sail early to-morrow for the Port of Naples. They all come from adjacent towns in Central Italy, and most of them after hibernating in the land where the green slopes take the place of snowdrifts, will return here in the springtime. On December 7 nine or ten more may leave for Italy for the winter.
